IN a small back room of their apartment, which serves as an office, Irene and Maurice Bodington set up another page of Bod's Scrapbook. Across Canada there are many who listen to the show today who can remember "Bod's" voice reading stories to them in the early days of radio when they were children. With his wife, "Bod" spends many long hours in this room, drinking innumerable cups of tea, planning and writing the programs of friendly wit and wisdom which are regular features on the CBC Dominion network—Sundays at 8:00 p.m. and every weekday at 9:45 a.m. CST, 10:45 a.m. MST.

The Bodingtons

ON August 24, 1949, at 4:00 p.m., a new matrimonial partnership was formed—a partnership which was soon to make its mark also in a professional field. Irene Halliday married Maurice Bodington, and Rene—as "Bod" calls his wife—loves to tell the story of the ceremony in Toronto's Carlton Street United Church.

"We were married between shows," she recalls, "and as soon as the minister had said the important words, Bod turned on his heel and marched off down the aisle. For a moment we all stood in stunned silence, and then the minister, in a fine melodramatic stage whisper, said, 'Sir, don't you know that it is customary at this point in the ceremony for the groom to kiss the bride?' Bod stopped dead in his tracks and then, looking very ashamed of himself, came slowly back to the altar. His only excuse was that he was lost without a script!"

He says that he is convinced that without Rene's constant help and tireless research in the last two and a half years he would often have been at a loss for material to use in his programs on CIBC and the Dominion network. Frequently they go off together to visit the small second-hand bookshops scattered throughout Toronto, in search of fresh material. Their home-made library shelves are filled with their "finds"—books sometimes over 100 years old, pamphlets long forgotten but containing gems of everyday wisdom, old magazine clippings and many 20th-century editions which are now out of print.

His career in show business goes back to the period before the (Please turn to page 5)

Orfeo (Claudio Monteverdi).

Orfeo by Claudio Monteverdi (1567-1643) was the first of many such works by this composer, of which only a small number escaped the sack of Mantua by Austrian troops in 1630. With Monteverdi, for the first time, opera was staged with a complete and varied orchestra. It will be broadcast today without intermission. Orfeo tells the story of the marriage of Orpheus and Eurydice, her death from a serpent-bite, his vain attempts to rescue her from the Underworld, and Apollo's invitation to Orpheus to enter upon immortality.

Then Hormidas Grenier, the mayor, he starts to build a ferry, hoping everybody will be too busy by that and forget about the love business. And that works for a week. But now! Name of a name, now we got a ferry across the St. Lucie River coming soon, and the love business as well. Everybody is getting married! Stage 52. Len Peterson has put his tongue firmly in his cheek and written Sheehan's Folly for this week's Stage. The play is inspired by the bill submitted to the House of Representatives in Washington recently by Congressman Timothy Sheehan, a Republican from Chicago who proposed the setting up of a congressional committee "to explore the possibility of annexing Canada." In the play, Peterson takes a quick look into the future and imagines what Canada might be like if the incorporation ever came to pass. J. Frank Willis, producer. From Toronto.

Tonight: The Miramichi and Other Fires. The Miramichi fire of 1825 still ranks as Canada's greatest loss by fire—some hundreds of lives were lost, four towns were razed and an area of virgin timber as great as the state of Connecticut was destroyed. How the little colony of New Brunswick rallied around the stricken area, and helped it back to its feet, is a heart-warming episode from our pioneer life.

Marge and Monty. If you're unaware of the latest trend in the methods of selling houses, Marge and Monty will bring you up to date. According to them, we've long since passed the stage of discouraging buyers, we now insult them. You see, Monty decides that buying a house calls for the male touch. So when Marge tells him she has all but bought a rooming house, Monty takes a hand. His encounter with the modern real estate agent is the subject of this week's episode. Bob Byron of Sunshine Society fame, plays the part of Monty and Jean Murray who is frequently heard in drama programs, is Marge. From Winnipeg.

Double or Nothing. For every broadcast emcee Walter O'Keefe has to be well grounded in about a dozen different subjects—if he doesn't want to be put on the spot. He says this isn't as hard as it sounds, because he has lived in such a variety of places and held so many different jobs that he has picked up a pretty wide assortment of facts. Born in Hartford, Connecticut, in 1900, he lived in England with relatives in his childhood, returning to Hartford to study at St. Thomas Academy, then the University of Notre Dame. He joined the U.S. Marines in the First Great War, returning to Notre Dame to graduate with a B.A. In 1925 he landed an entertainment job with the help of Texas Guinan, celebrated "Queen of the Nightclubs." Since then he has been playwright, actor, impersonator, satirist, songwriter, singer, dancer, story-teller, and real-estate salesman. He made his radio debut in 1930 in a broadcast with Paul Whiteman and the Rhythm Boys, one of whom was Bing Crosby. After that he moved to New York to play in The Third Little Show with Bea Lillie and Ernest Truex, and to begin a radio career that led to this program assignment. Monday to Friday. From NBC.

Cook of the Seven Seas. Third of a series of 13 dramatized broadcasts about the voyages of Captain Cook, adapted for radio by Herbert D. White of Winnipeg. Today: Discoveries and Disasters. From Winnipeg.

Affectionately, Jenny. Affairs in the life of a rather sophisticated city family, as seen through the eyes of Jenny, a naive country girl of 18 who is working as a domestic servant, are portrayed in this new comedy series. Pat Joudry of Toronto takes a double role—as author of the scripts and as the leading actress in the part of Jenny. Each week Jenny writes to the folks back home on the farm, telling them what has happened in the home where she works—and in her own life—since her last letter. Jenny's employers include Mr. Ferguson, a kind-hearted, easy-going type; Mrs. Ferguson, who covers a motherly instinct with sophisticated (but quite vulnerable) veneer; Sandra, their 21-year-old daughter; and Jack, their 19-year-old son, a college boy. Jenny's beau is a serious-minded fellow named Charlie. The adventures of Jenny and the Fergusons will soon be appearing in book form. Miss Joudry has the volume nearly half completed and says it will be done in a couple of months. From Toronto.

Festival Summer

By ANDREW ALLAN

The Festival of Britain, 1951, was more than just a device to alleviate the dollar gap. It was a national act of reassessment and a declaration of faith. The Past was recalled to illumine the Present and to signpost the Future.

In my series of talks, Festival Summer (recorded in London before my departure, and being broadcast at 11:15 p.m. on CBW, 10:45 p.m. on CBK-CBX on Fridays), I have not tried so much to paint a complete picture of the Festival as to report to my fellow Canadians the things about it I find it impossible to forget. Some of these things may seem trivial in themselves. The memory has an unorthodox way of proceeding. But, it seems to me, added together they gradually begin to suggest that to place a festival in such an unlikely year was not only valuable but, in a way, inevitable.

Just when so much of the world is sick with the Fever of Possessing, it seems as if Great Britain had discovered the Cure of Being Possessed. The Festival of Britain began to make this clear.

It was not just an exhibition, not just a fun fair, although these were included. It was not just a London festival, although old London gave the lead. It was Britain en fete, in city and country, in town, village, and hamlet. The Festival belonged to everyone—and no one too humble to play his part. Opulence, perhaps, was lacking; but there was wit and there was artistry. The artist and the craftsman came into their own. It was a healthy summer. Just when some people had begun to write Britain off as merely historical, she pulled us up with a demonstration that she is very much alive now—and intends to go on being alive.

It is in curious details that one sees this most clearly. It is the details I have tried to recapture in my series. (See Note on page 7).

Gisele's Song

Gisele MacKenzie has turned songwriter since going to Hollywood last year. Her first is a French love ballad—Quand reviendras-tu? (When Will You Return?) She says she plans to introduce the tune in the Club 15 series soon—that's the show she shares with singer-conductor Bob Crosby, at 5:30 p.m. MST, on Dominion, Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. She picks all her own songs for the show, and writes most of her own arrangements, too.

Allison Grant. Allison Grant hopes that after her final lesson today housewives will take a more critical attitude toward their kitchens, and will have their hopes raised that one day soon their kitchens will be planned to really meet their needs. "Experts have at last got around to tackling the kitchen problem," says Mrs. Grant, "by bringing it right down to the housewife and her work. They are making new designs by going through the steps the housewife makes each day when she plans and cooks a meal or does other kitchen chores. In other words, they are building the kitchen 'step by step'." From Montreal.

Tony the Troubadour. Tony Stecheson has lined up another program of songs by Canadians.

I'll Never Smile Again (Ruth Lowe); Play, Hurdy Gurdy, Play (Al Harvey and Freddie Hart); The World Is Waiting for the Sunrise (Gene Lockhart and Ernest Seitz); Valley of the Saints (Lou Snider and Jackie Rae); The Key (Oscar Berceller).

Ruth Lowe and her husband operate a night club in Toronto. She has composed several other songs, and a new one is about to be released. Harvey and Grant have written quite a few tunes, together and separately; Harvey is a singer-comedian in Toronto, and Grant has an instrumental trio, also in Toronto. Lockhart is a Canadian appearing in radio TV and films in the States; Seitz is a retired businessman and pianist. Snider and Rae have collaborated on several tunes; Snider is heard as pianist and organist in network shows from Toronto, and Rae is a CBC producer. The valley their song describes is a Laurentian beauty spot; the tune was used in a Hollywood film called Square Dance

Kate Berceller runs a Toronto supper club.

Dr. Dogbody's Leg. Jean Cavall is best known as a singer, through his radio shows and records. But he's an actor of considerable experience, too, having appeared in numerous English, French and Spanish films. Tonight he plays the part of a Frenchman in Dr. Dogbody's Leg. American doctors visit The Cheerful Tortoise in this week's episode, touching off another version of how the doctor lost his leg, this one involving no less a person than Benjamin Franklin. Jean Cavall comes in when the doctor goes to Paris where he finds the French both envious and infuriated by the wonders of a very life-like artificial leg Franklin has made for him. From Toronto.

In the U.S.:

A Singing Victory

ONE OF CANADA'S best-known musical groups, the Leslie Bell Singers, recently completed its first American tour and the only adverse criticism anyone has heard to utter was that it should have been longer. During their two-week stay in the United States the singers visited nine cities, passed through seven States and gave 11 performances. The tour itself, which Dr. Bell described as an experiment, was highly successful. One American critic said: "Their freshness, their charm and their lack of sophistication are matched only by their efficiency."

Two highlights of the visit were a television appearance and an appearance at Malin Hall in New York. The television appearance was with the Fred Waring Show in Manhattan and as this was a new experience for the girls, Dr. Bell was particularly interested in their reactions. He was well pleased with the results, although he considers that working with a choir in television is rather like trying to perform one of Wagner's operas in a telephone booth.

The performance at Malin Hall was attended by many of the American concert agents and managers and although this particular type of audience has the reputation of being "hard-boiled" the choir won their spontaneous acclaim.

Each of the programs was divided into three sections. The first group of songs were liturgical, representative of divers religious denominations; the second part was a selection of North American folk songs of which the majority were Canadian, and the concluding section was a miscellany. Plans are already afoot for a second and more extensive tour, but no definite date has been fixed yet. The choir is heard every Sunday evening at 6:30 p.m. MST on the Dominion network.

Listeners will note a number of changes in the network schedules, occasioned by special broadcasting arrangements made in connection with the death of His Majesty King George VI. Indulgence of our listeners is asked for incorrect listings in recent issues of the Times occasioned by these arrangements.

Take Another Look. Kitty Marcuse, Vancouver radio writer, who is just back from a trip abroad, says that Canadian husbands are the envy of married women around the world. "Take another look at your spouses, girls," she says. "They're rather special!" She'll explain why this afternoon. Mrs. Marcuse had her best chance for observing foreign husbands in Sweden, where she called on numerous housewives in different walks of life and quizzed them about how often their husbands helped out around the house, took an interest in the children, and noticed their wives' new dresses and hats. She also studied the report on a survey conducted by the Swedish Home Research Institute among 50 families. From Winnipeg.

First Great War, when he was employed as a junior teller ("with no head for figures," he says) in a Winnipeg bank. One day he was caught by the manager doing a most undignified impersonation of him. The offended manager forthwith gave "Bod" the proverbial boot and, as it turned out, thereby helped to launch him on a career in show business.

Packing his belongings into a suitcase, the young man left for New York with a letter of introduction to William Morris, a great theatrical agent of the day. "Bod" recalls that his interview with Morris was short and very much to the point.

"What's your act?" the big man demanded as soon as "Bod" had been ushered into the room.

The young man groped vainly for words.

"Have you got an orchestration?" the king of show business asked impatiently.

Still there was no reply. The reaction this time came from two hefty henchmen who picked "Bod" up off his feet and hurled him out the door.

Too proud to return to Winnipeg, "Bod" spent the next year washing dishes, sweeping the streets of New York and acting as a counter man in a coffee stall. Finally he obtained a post as stage-doorman at the Globe Theatre. From this sinecure he was able to watch the ebb and flow of the entertainment world.

Then came the big chance. "Bod" went on tour with the No. 4 company of Zaza, a Broadway hit, touring the southern States for one-night stands in many of the small towns. After that show closed he joined a stock company whose days ended abruptly when the stage manager ran off with all the funds. Then there was another fly-by-night company which broke up when all the scenery collapsed during a performance at Spartanburg, North Carolina. The next job was with a more respectable group that seemed assured of success. "Bod" played the part of an opulent stock-broker who opened the show with the lines, "I won't sell those bonds at fifty." Our hero sensed there was something unusual from the moment he went on stage the first night. The audience was laughing. After he had spoken his opening line they cheered and roared. It seemed they loved him. Then "Bod" looked down. His shirt-tail was flapping merrily outside his pin-striped trousers. Once again he got the boot.

(Today, "Bod" is a familiar figure around the CBC studios in Toronto—dressed always not unlike the opulent stock-broker. His clothes are immaculately tailored and his ties, chosen by Rene, are in quiet contrast. Even so, the memory of that opening night appears still to be fresh in his mind. Often, before entering a room, he may be seen to drop his eyes briefly for a last-minute double check.)

Later he got a job as a swimming clown. He had to plunge into a large tank of water and swim on his back, holding aloft an umbrella. The consideration was 50 cents a night. When the First Great War started, he returned from the States to Canada and enlisted. After the Armistice he joined the staff of CKGW in Toronto and began to build a reputation for himself by telling children's stories; on Station CFRB, still later, he developed this skill and gained a big following among young listeners, particularly for his characterization of "Little Wong Foo."

He left CFRB in 1944 and since that time has been heard on CJBC, and, more recently, on the CBC Dominion network. Every week he gets letters and manuscripts from listeners all over Canada and the northern States. Mail comes in from other countries too, and a few years ago a man in Melbourne bequeathed some old books to "Bod" in his will.

Adverse Fortune

Tragedy at Carman Unpredictable and Unavoidable

Temporary Antenna Erected and Broadcasting Resumed at CBW Within 54 Hours of Crash

Unpredictable and unavoidable tragedy marked the events which culminated in the collapse and destruction of the 570-foot antenna tower at Station CBW, Manitoba, on February 4 and 5. From noon on February 4, when an R.C.A.F. training plane collided with the tower's upper northern guy wire, to 12:30 a.m. on February 5, when the tower fell, efforts to remedy the damage which were well conceived and well forwarded by competent men nevertheless were pursued by implacable misfortune.

Sequence of Events

CBW's transmitter staff, stationed at Carman, Manitoba, worked efficiently and courageously throughout the emergency, but the nature of the double tragedy was such that nothing that they could do could have prevented or modified it.

This was the sequence of events: February 4, noon, a Beechcraft aircraft piloted by Flying Officer Charles Chow-Leong of Lethbridge, with two English student navigators, struck the northern upper guy wire at a level of 374 feet and brushed the tower itself. The plane crashed in flames on CBC property 500 yards from the tower, and the three occupants were killed.

Wreckage of the upper portion of CBW's transmitter tower, southwest of the tuning house. Transmitter building in the background.

CBW's transmitter staff, on duty at the station, heard or saw nothing, and only knew of the accident when a passing farmer came in to tell them a plane had crashed nearby. They ran to the burning plane immediately, with all available fire extinguishing equipment from the transmitter, but their efforts to save the airmen were in vain.

Tower "Kinked"

Returning to the transmitter, they saw that the antenna tower was "kinked" at a point about 70 feet from the top, and bending toward the west and south to a distance of about 20 feet off perpendicular. The station was still on the air, and there had been no interruption or interference with programs.

R. L. Punshon, chief operator at Carman, telephoned Prairie Regional Headquarters, Winnipeg, to report the accident and asked for experts to check the condition of the tower and see what could be done to repair the broken guy wire and bent steel.

At 6:00 p.m. a crew of five technicians from the Dominion Bridge Company arrived at Carman. It was decided that the station should go off the air as soon as possible and a check should be made. At midnight, when necessary equipment had arrived, Frank Bryan, in charge of the crew, after a survey decided that they would attempt to attach a temporary guy wire to hold the tower in position until further assistance could Laughland and Mrs. Ellen Fairclough, M.P. From Toronto.

Deeds That Live. This afternoon in the final talk of this series called the Summing Up, Harriet Hill looks back over the women who have been discussed on the previous broadcasts and analyses their childhood to try to find some factor that accounts for their rise to fame. She admits that she has found no definite pattern which foretells the future greatness of these women. "From the analysis," says Miss Hill, "it would appear as if parents never really know just what they have on their hands. Even if a child doesn't seem to be particularly gifted, she may have a burning desire which will carry her a long way." From Montreal.

The play was first performed on Stage 48 and it was repeated on Stage 50. Bernard Braden will appear in the BBC Hour again next week, playing the role of an American archaeologist in Egypt. arrive from the Canadian Bridge Company of Windsor, Ontario, who had built the tower. Three men started to climb the steel ladders inside the antenna structure. This was approximately at 12:20 a.m. The night was dark and cloudy. A Department of Transport truck had a searchlight trained on the tower, and this gave light up to about 500 feet.

Chief Operator's Story

What followed is best told in the words of R. L. Punshon, who, with most of his transmitter crew was within twenty feet of the base of the tower.

"I heard a cracking noise, up the tower," Mr. Punshon said, "and thought at once that the top portion, bent in the airplane accident, was coming down. Then I saw something falling, high up, and heard the foreman shouting: 'She's away!'"

"The lower part of the tower did not fall at once. It seemed to stand there trembling and wavering for a full second, and then began to fall to the east, in our direction—nearly opposite to the direction in which the top part fell. I guessed that the supporting insulator at the base had given away, and the antenna was slipping off its base. Then I heard the guy wires and steel struts snapping, and a terrific rushing sound as the tower came down.

"There were about 25 technicians and engineers around the base, and as the tower started to fall they all ran, trying to avoid both the falling tower and the broken guy wires that were whipping around. Some dove under the trucks, others took to any available shelter near them. It was a miracle that all on the ground escaped.

"The repair men who had climbed the tower were high up—one at about 400 feet, the others at fifty-foot intervals below. All three were killed.

"These two tragic accidents in the course of little more than twelve hours have cast a shadow over all our staff."

There had been no hint whatever that the lower part of the tower was in danger of falling, although the increasing bend of the "kinked" portion had led to fears that the top part might go. The decision of the Dominion Bridge Company's men to climb the tower and attach a temporary guy wire was logical in the circumstances and quite within normal technical routine. CBW's transmitter staff, working at other essential tasks in connection with the repair, could not have influenced the decision in any way. Implacable misfortune pursued its way to the end of a tragic and terrible day.

The 500-foot lower portion of the CBW antenna lies broken on the open prairie east of the tuning house. Snapped guy wires, an extreme danger to men on the ground when the tower fell, can be seen on either side.

CBW returned to the air on Thursday morning, using a temporary antenna. R. D. Cahoon, CBC Prairie Regional Engineer, flew in from Montreal, where he had been attending an engineering conference, to supervise the installation.

In Sympathy.

Your beloved king-friend, is dead, yet his soul is home with his maker, whom he loved and served so faithfully and well. God said: "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly," we read in John 10:10.

Our hearts go out to his beloved daughter in her deep sorrow, and we also know that through this great sorrow which has plunged all the British Empire into sadness, as well as my country and the rest of the world, we see a beautiful light of love shining through this gloom—for God relieved King George of his duties, after fifteen years of the finest and most faithful service he tried to perform—and did a good job—and now this beautiful light of love, shines over his kind, beautiful and gracious daughter Queen Elizabeth the Second. She said she would carry out her duties like her father tried to do, and succeeded—and, somehow, I'm sure all her subjects believe she is going to do just that with God's guidance and strength.

Stories about ROY ROGERS and his famous golden palomino horse, TRIGGER, are heard on Thursdays at 7:30 p.m. on CBW, 6:30 p.m. on CBK-CBX.

Our papers are full of pictures and readings—nothing but gentle and good things are written about him. Ever since his babyhood he was a gentle soul; he lived and worked God-like; you see his kind and gentle heart in his eyes, in the expression of his face; it bears a patient, kindly look; you see much suffering in his face too, which he bore as patiently as any human was capable of doing.

I cannot hold back my tears, nor the lump in my throat when I look at the photos and read the articles; you feel yourself enveloped in a blessed quietness as you read on; you know as you read, that he walked with God in love and truth, and when he embarked on his last Journey Home, God took him quietly, just as his life has been, even amongst all the turmoil of wars and national disturbances. In him, you have always sensed that through it all he was blessed with a heart of peace and beauty.

And I, an American, feel akin to all of you in your sadness.—Agda Sahlberg, Thief River Falls, Minn.

Appreciative Listener.

Only a card to say how glad I was to find you on the air today.—Mrs. M. G. Dickson, Gilby, North Dakota.

From a Nurse.

We join with all Canadians and subjects of the British Commonwealth in the bereavement of our beloved King. While listening to the radio today, we were deeply impressed with the appropriate music rendered, for which we thank you most heartily. We nurses realize the need of comforting music, not only when a great Sovereign dies but every day.—Mary Penner, Winnipeg.
