"How about a husband

F you're anxious to locate Mercedes McCambridge, it's easy: just look around New York City for a convertible station wagon with a brunette behind the wheel -who's obviously reciting a part! While she speeds she shouts in anger, murmurs in sorrow-and both hands gesture in tempo! That's Mercedes, all right. The same Mercedes you hear on Big Sister, Inner Sanctum, Grand Central Station and The Thin Man. Further statistics are that her curly brown hair is very short her eyes are also brown, and she has an infectious grin ... all of which explains why her "rehearse while you drive" ritual doesn't get her in terrible trouble with the New York police force.
You couldn't possibly find her except in her car or behind a microphone, because she has no home She hasn't had a home for two years now, thanks to the housing shortage. For one year she lived (with her five year old son John) in the New York house of her friends Mr. and Mrs. Sam Wanamaker. But they finally sold their house, thus sending Mercedes scurrying into Connecticut to corent a house with radio actress Elspeth Erick. This haven only lasted a few months, though. So now Mercedes and son John are hotel - hopping whenever they aren't hopping into friends' guest rooms. Mercedes husband and John's father? Oh, he has a home -he's a writer, busily at work on a book . . . in Haiti!
Mercedes hails from Joliet, Illinois. She was born on St. Patrick's Day; ever since then holidays have had important meanings for her. One Christmas Day five years ago, for instance, she was in Hollywood and of course on a radio program. She was due to be a mother any minute, but nevertheless, dressed in a flapping maternity dress, she staunchly recited "Tiny Tim" before an audience of 700 people. Her friend Bing Crosby mproved the shining hours by rushing around NBC taking bets on whether she'd have her baby on the Red or Blue Networks. But she outwitted him She had John exactly four hours after she finished reciting "Tiny Tim," and she had him in the proper hospital atmosphere.
Since he was born on Christmas Day, she found him a cocker spaniel with the same history. Named "Noela," he's been part (Continued on page 77)

mexame and precautions against them

Can you avoid catching cold? And if you do catch one is it possible to reduce its severity? Oftentimes -YES.

IIs now believed by outstanding members of the medical profession that colds and their complications are frequently produced by a combination of factors working together.

1. That an unseen virus, entering through the nose or mouth, probably starts many colds.
2. That the so-called "Secondary Invaders", a potentially troublesome group of bacteria, including germs of the pneumonia and streptococcus types, then can complicate a cold by staging a "mass invasion". of throat tissues.
3. That anything which lowers body resistance, such as cold feet, wet feet, fatigue, exposure to sudden temperature changes, may not only make the work of the virus easier but encourage the "mass invasion" of germs.

Tests Showed Fewer Colds

The time to strike a cold is at its very outset . . . to go after the surface germs before they go after you . . . to fight the "mass invasion" of the tissue before it becomes serious.

The ability of Listerine Antiseptic as a germ-killing agent needs no elaboration. Important to you, however, is the impressive record against colds made by Listerine Antiseptic in tests made over a 12 -year period. Here is what this test data revealed:

That those who gargled Listerine Antiseptic twice a day had fewer colds and usually had milder colds, and fewer sore throats, than those who did not gargle with Listerine Antiseptic.

This, we believe, was due largely to Listerine Antiseptic's ability to attack germs on mouth and throat surfaces.

Gargle Early and Often

We would be the last to suggest that a Listerine Antiseptic gargle is infallibly a means of arresting an oncoming cold.

However, a Listerine Antiseptio gargle is one of the finest precautionary aids you can take. Its germ-killing action may help you overcome the infection in its early stages.

BABE IN ARMS

THE veteran producer of the popular kiddies' show on WCAU, Philadelphia was as jumpy as an amateur. The big studio was filled with the usual mob of moppets done up in their Sunday bests and squired by anxious, anguished parents.
"What's the matter with you, Stan?" the engineer asked. "You would think it was your first kid show instead of your thousandth."

Stan smiled nervously, wagged a finger at the waiting announcer and the show went on the air. For almost an hour kids of assorted sizes and colors gave out as only precocious prodigies do. Then a freckle-faced, skinny kid with dark brown, close-cropped hair and deep brown eyes, sat down at the piano. He winked confidently at the producer and started to play. He played beautifully, improvising the melody with the authority of a true professional. He was easily the standout of the long show.

When the final chord melted into the microphone, the announcer had difficulty speaking over the thunderous applause. "Thank you, Elliot Lawrence," he said quickly, and breathlessly plunged into the final commercial announcement.

The producer grinned broadly, wiped his wet face with a damp handkerchief and then spoke to the open-mouthed engineer.
"Jack, you were right. I was nervous. You see, I had a right to be. That kid pianist is my son.'

Stanley Lee Broza is still directing kiddie shows on WCAU, still discovering young talent like the Nicholas Brothers, the sensational Negro dancers, and Ezra Stone, "Henry Aldrich" to you. But despite the multiple talent discoveries he has made, his proudest alumnus is his own son.

For today, 21-year-old Elliot Lawrence and his band are on the road to dance band fame all in the short space of two years. Just recently the entertainment trade magazine, Billboard, in a poll of experts, counted Elliot's young group of musicians the third most popular band to come up since the war. They clicked in their first big league engagement, New York's Hotel Pennsylvania, spun a pair of best selling Columbia records, and have behind them a string of successful one-night stands and college dances.

This meteoric climb from the knee pants era in his native Philadelphia hasn't gotten Elliot off the beam.
"We're going after the college crowd, the kind of hep kids that want something different in dance music. It's the same appeal that helped start Glenn Miller," he told me one night between sets.
Lawrence mixes his music adroitly, playing mostly sweet stusf, broken by jump numbers.
"I think the fellows who have been away want to dance with their girls and put their arms around them tightly.

Are you in the know?

Which plaid should "chubby" pick?

$\square$ A kingsize design $\square$ A pefite pattern $\square$ Neither

Even if you're a plumpish pigeon, you, too, can wear plaids. But whether jumbo or tiny patterns intrigue you-pick neither: A medium: size plaid is your best bet. And speaking of sizes, here's a thought for certain times: Only Kotex has 3 sizes, for different women, different days-Regular, Junior, Super Kotex. So you can choose the size that's best for you. What's more, every Kotex napkin contains a deodorant-to help you stay dainty.

For lip-appeal plus, should you-

Wear a sultry shadeUse a lip brushRevise the shape of your mouth

If you'd have lush-looking lips-know your pucker-paint technique. Choose a true red: on you it looks better than sultry, tigerwoman shades. And don't try to re-shape your mouth! Carefully following its contour with a lip brush can give you lip-appeal plus; added self-assurance. Extra poise on problem days means-Kotex. Because, for extra protection, Kotex has an exclusive safety center to keep you super-confident!

Should you agree to meet your "squire"?

> If it's more practical To show you're not stuffy Nay, nay, never!

That squire's a square who doesn't call for his gal! Unless there's a good reason. For instance, on a theatre date-if you live miles out and he works late, it's more practical to meet. For meeting "your public" on trying days, it's practical to choose Kotex. Because the flat tapered ends of Kotex free you from tell-tale outline cares. You get that high octane kind of confidence with Kotex!

When a blind date's disappointing, would you-
$\square$ Back out gracefully
$\square$ Make like a martyr
$\square$ Grin and bear it

Your blind date's gruesome? Grin and bear it! Even stupor-man has feelings. Besider, he probably has friends . . . dream-beam material you'll get to know, in time. So stay in the picture; whether it's dancing, bowling or whateger. And on calendar days let Kotex keep you comfortable, with out-of-this-world softness that lasts because Kotex is made to stay soft while you wear it. Yes, with Kotex you can keep smiling!

NEW WILDROOT HAIR SET

They don't want to be disturbed by hot music."
One of the basic things that has made Elliot's music different is the quite revolutionary introduction of symphony instruments into a dance orchestra.
Among the familiar saxophones and trumpets are French horns, English horns, bassoons, and oboes, blown by apple-cheeked youngsters. All this is paced by Elliot's own distinctive piano improvisations.
Unlike other bands, affected by turnovers of disgruntled musicians, Elliot has the six-man nucleus that started out of high school with him. His violinist, pert Rosalind Patton, started singing with Elliot when she was nine. She replaced another pigtail canary now a star in her right, Kitty Kallen.

Amazingly energetic and resourceful, Elliot has formed his own publishing firm, concentrating on originals by young, ambitious composer-arrangers.
"I know how tough it is for young composers and arrangers to get recognition from well-established music publishers. I tried myself," he explains.

Elliot was graduated from the University of Pennsylvania under the wartime speed-up two-and-a-half-year course. He won many scholastic honors but his biggest thrill was being invited to come back to his alma mater to play for the big interfraternity dance.

Unlike the more established maestros Elliot doesn't groan under a full schedule of one night stands.
"Sure it's rough," he admitted, "but how else can you come face to face with your fans and know what they want of you?"

Elliot first sat down at the piano at the age of four. A year later he was taking lessons. When he was eight he had infantile paralysis and was physically unable to resume his piano study for two years. He overcame the disease and then studied under Erno Balogh, concentrating on harmonies. At high school he organized his first band, calling it The Bandbusters; they got odd jobs around the Quaker City, earning the munificent sum of $$ 1.50$ a man. It was at the University that Elliot really hit his musical stride, writing college footbail songs, getting his band to play at student and graduate affairs.
Upon graduation his father helped him get the musical directorship of WCAU and when the band was given some full CBS network broadcasts, radio, recording, and music executives in New York and Hollywood took notice.
Elliot's younger brother, Stan, acts as personal manager, with their father playing the happy role of Counselor Emeritus.

Elliot's too busy to talk about romance.
"It's a thing that would interfere with my plans right now."

If all this wasn't enough to make Eiliot a full-fledged personality, there will be additional acclaim when this winter Eugene Ormandy and the distinguished Philadelphia Orchestra introduce his Suite For Animals at a children's concert. About that work, Elliot is shrewdly reticent, thus:
"I don't want the dance fans to think I've gone longhair."

All radio row is still talking about Bing Crosby's spectacular transcribed broadcasting series, which, if successful, might have carloads of copycats next season, threatening the entire structure of network "live" broadcasting. The entire industry is following every move of The Groaner. Meanwhile, Bing revealed himself once again as a gracious guy and good sport. He refused to spot his recorded shots opposite his friendly rival, Frank Sinatra.
Speaking of Frankie, he is gaining stature every day and he is a far cry from the skinny singer of the swoon days. Recently in Hollywood he m.c.'d a very important political rally in Hollywood Bowl and held the vast audience spellbound with a stirring, rendition of the difficult "Soliloquy" from the Broadway hit, "Carousel." A year ago Frankie wouldn't have dared to tackle the song in his own living room, let alone in the vast Bowl.

Frankie still has his whims, however. He likes to get certain personal things

Those Mr.-and-Mrs.-at-Breakfast shows have come in for a lot of razzing, but now there's a real beef going the rounds of Radio Row. Seems many of the top Hooper rating programs that pay huge sums for guest stars are definitely irked because these morning Mr . and Mrs. teams manage to headline star attractions without paying for the appearances.
It's a joke, son. We've been invited by some smarties among New York's radiolites to join a very exclusive and very social club. So far, we haven't been able to make the eligibility testthe dues are: One Ulcer. ${ }_{*}$

Maurice Copeland, popular Chicago radio actor, writes us that he's received a fan letter that's probably covered more territory getting to him than any other letter ever has. It was from a fan on the island of Maui, in the Hawaiian Islands. The letter was postmarked Maui, then Oahu, Brisbane, Australia, then Oahu again and finally Chicago. It took four months to arrive. Apparently the letter got on the wrong boat, went to Australia and had to return to Oahu before starting over on the right track again. Copeland hopes the letter and picture he sent in return will go more directly.

This is a plug and we're not ashamed to admit it. The House of Mystery is again earning well deserved praise from educators and parents and from this department. It's a show for kids, but its aim is to demonstrate that ghosts, witches and other unearthly phenomena are actually non-existent, that belief in such things results from a lack of knowledge and understanding of certain natural causes. The program combats superstition and fear and does it in a remarkably adult, sane, and yet extremely thrilling and dramatic fashion. We recommend it highly-Sunday, MBS, 4 P.M., EST.

Everyone learns a different way. Paul Marion, who specializes in dialects on the radio, is an ardent fan of the movie newsreels. The information he gets there is only incidental-his main object in going to the newsreel theaters is to improve his dialects. Recently, Marion was able to switch on a perfectly authentic Philippine dialect and he says he learned it by listening to a newsreel speech made by General Romulo until he had it down pat.

You know about Grauman's Theater in Hollywood. You just aren't anybody in the movie colony until your hand prints, or footprints are encased in the cement before the theater. Here's a switch on that. Robert Merrill, that handsome singing character who always wanted to sing like Bing Crosby, but his mother wouldn't let him, had us out to his Long Island home recently. He took us outside to show us his own version of the Grauman Theater gag. Seems a couple of months ago the streets were repaved in his neighborhood. The morning after Merrill's front sidewalk was paved, Bob went outside and discovered what he showed us-a big heart, obviously scratched into the not-dry concrete, in which were placed his initials and those of T. G. and F. C. And Bob thought that by moving out to Long Island he could escape his bobby sox fans!

Met Jackie Kelk the other day and he told us this cute tale. A couple of months ago, he and the other members of the cast of The Aldrich Family, were asked by our own Radio Mirror to go out and pose for a series of pictures to be used in a picture story. Usually, actors hate this kind of thing. They take a lot of time and trouble,
FROM
what with make-up to worry about, and locations to find. But the cast of The Aldrich Family enjoyed every minute of it.

The kicker on the picture piece was that Homer (Jackie Kelk) and Henry (Ezra Stone) had to pay for their "sins" in the story by making like bellhops in a hotel to work off a huge bill they'd run up. Jackie and Ezra borrowed the uniforms from bellhops in one of New York's better-known hotels and hied themselves down to the lobby to have their pictures taken in action.

And of course you know what happened. Of course, there had to be a real customer in a hurry who wasn't taking any sas, from a bellhop. Of course, he had to pick on Jackie Kelk to carry his suitcases out of the lobby to a taxicab. Of course, Jackie fell into the spirit of it and earned himself a nice fat tip. And, of course, Jackie kept the tip.

Phil Baker still hasn't got over the fast thinking of contestant Sgt. Bruce Shaw. Shaw was so fast on the answers that Phil Baker couldn't bear to stop when he got to the $$ 64$ question.

The Sarge picked the category that required him to name the baseball team after Baker had given the name of the pitcher and catcher. The sergeant snapped out the answers steadily, before Baker could even pronounce the second name. Phil was so astounded that he offered to double the $$ 64$, if the sergeant gave the right answer to the next question. He did. That made $$ 128$. Still incredulous at the contestant's speed and accuracy, Baker offered to double the $$ 128$ and pulled a nifty, hard one out of the hat. That's right, Sgt. Shaw got that one, too, and walked out of the studio richer by $$ 256$.

So-maybe it pays not to be ignorant.
We've always suspected that a very great many people nursed secret desires to perform on the radio-but we never had much idea just how many. Even now, we probably haven't scratched the surface of probability. But we have one figure. Bessie Mack, who handles auditions for the Arthur Godfrey's Talent Scouts program, says that close to 3,000 telephone calls alone are received from people interested in auditioning for the show. That's only telephone calls. There are more people who write in and a goodly number who hang around the studio and dog Arthur Godfrey's footsteps.

Songs sometimes get their names in peculiar ways. For instance-David Rose was burning the post-midnight electric to turn out an original tune for Holiday for Music. It was a last minute deal and a copyist stood by frantically to snatch it from Rose and have it copied in time for the show. Rose, finally, finished it with a hurried flourish -and then realized it had no title. He looked at his watch. It was $4: 20$ A.M. That became the title. Anyway, it's brief, and it's the kind of thing you're not likely to forget!

We hear that so many requests for pictures of the Old Dirt Dobber's garden poured in that the sponsors of the Garden Gate program are offering a $16-\mathrm{mm}$ color film of the garden for showing by garden clubs and other civic groups. Titled "A Year in the Old Dirt Dobber's Garden," the movie shows seasonal changes of blooms, as well as the most advanced horticultural techniques developed by Tom Williams, the "Dobber." The film runs for 40 min utes. There are seven prints of the picture and those are booked solidly through January by more than 300 clubs. Probably more prints will be made, if the demand keeps up.

"How to handle teen-agers"  by BING CROSBY

starring in Paramount's new hit film "BLUE SKIES" in technicolor

"Teensters are positively people! Remember, they have a lotta problems ...mainly parents. When their jive talk gives you the heebie-jeebies, and their rootin'tootin' clothes (Look who's talking!) make you despair for 'civilization'... . better bear up and shut up. They'll get over it, even as you and I. "Scratch most teen-agers and you'll find a solid citizen. And when they sound off with ideas for improving the world we made ... well, maybe us parents could learn sumpin if we'd stop snooting the kids and listen."

Bing's tip to parants is one of a series presented by Fleer's to promote understanding among families, friends, nations. Teen-agers and parents both agree Fleer's Gum is mighty fine gum. There's a trend to candy-coated... and Fleer's leads the trend. Extra lavor. Delicious! Enjoy it today!

News Analyst Cunningham of WNAC

chooses his side and fights haral for it

BILL CUNNINGHAM is a news commentator who takes a stand literally as well as figuratively. And sticks with it.

Let the effete analysts indulge in the comforts of the table mike if they wish, but none of your table mikes for this two fisted son of Texas; he uses the old fashioned standing microphone, plants himself firmly, legs apart, shoulders squared, jaw thrust forward, and at the signal from the control room he starts to talk with the vigor of a football coach.

This affection for the standing mike stems not only from habits formed during his long career as an afterdinner speaker, but also from the fact that Bill feels he can get more force into his delivery when he is on his feet.
The combination of forceful delivery, the renowned Cunningham talent for selecting hard-hitting words and the celebrated Cunningham policy of choosing a side and fighting for it, makes for 15 minutes of rousing commentary every Sunday afternoon at 2:30 over WNAC, Boston, and the Yankee and Mutual Networks, when Bill calls 'em as he sees 'em.

A man of strong likes and dislikes, Bill can toss verbal brickbats or verbal bouquets with equal skill. Quick to defend the underdog, his powerful voice has often caused reverberations around the nation on behalf of some little guy who needed help.

Born Elijah William Cunningham in Pattonville, Texas, February 11, 1896, he first reached national fame as an All-American center on the Dartmouth football team. World War I interrupted his college career, but after two years in France with the AEF he returned, to the campus where his scholastic reputation matched his gridiron glory.

He worked his way through school by serving as the manager and pianist of a movie theater in Hanover, N. H. It's a little difficult to picture this aggressive polemicist as a dreamyeyed musician, yet that's the role in which he is happiest. He was known as one of the finest pipe-organists in Texas, and he still plays frequently on the little organ in his home in Newton, Mass., with his wife and daughters as his customary audience.
He began his career as a sports reporter, and his knack for the colorful phrase soon won him a spot as regular columnist for the Boston Post. After many years with the Post, he moved his column to the Boston Herald a few years ago, and it is now syndicated throughout the nation.
No armchair analyst, Bill believes in getting his facts first hand. The Yankee Network has sent him as its special representative to all the news centers of the world. He flew to San Francisco to cover the first World Security Conference, to Europe shortly after V-E Day to observe the war-torn continent and again recently to Paris to cover the Peace Conference.

1-BMOTIONAL MATURITY

Radio Mirror presents the first of a series of articles in which Mr. Anthony will discuss the problems of modern marriage, and give his views on the building of successful relationships.

${ }^{10}$OT so long ago, divorce carried with it a certain social stigma. Today, very few divorced couples are faced with any degree of ostracism or criticism. In fact, today, divorce is accepted as a solution for many marital problems. If one marriage doesn't work out, you get a divorce and try again.

As far as I can see, unless the basic causes for failure in the personalities of the partners in an unsuccessful marriage are uncovered and cured, a divorce is no solution for either of them. They will take their weaknesses and failures with them, right into their subsequent marriages, and the whole thing will repeat itself. Add to this the fact that one failure at marriage always leaves behind it a sense of insecurity and insufficiency-failure at anything always does that-which can do much to hamper the free spirit of give and take that is so necessary in a healthy and happy marriage.

Go through the statistics of our rising divorce rate. You'll find many reasons given for divorce -infidelity, incompatibility, mental cruelty, nagging, excessive demands, lack of support. It is my belief that none of these reasons is the basic cause for marital difficulties, but they are obvious symptoms through which the real cause manifests itself.

In my experience, the most prevalent cause for divorce is immaturity. That seems like a contradiction. After all, in most states you have to reach your majority before the laws permit you to marry. But your age in years and your age in emotional growth can be two very different things, a discrepancy which can cause trouble.
Many marriages which go on the rocks could be saved, if the people concerned were mature enough to understand and appreciate what a good marriage means. But too many young people bring to marriage an adolescent attitude that dooms them to failure. Their heads are full of the romantic notion that love is a constantly singing thing that sweeps you off your feet and keeps you floating on a pink cloud forever after. They enter a marriage with this feeling-and it is right that it should exist at that stage of the game -but, when it begins to wear off, they are disappointed, disillusioned, unhappy.

Too many young husbands who are charged with infidelity-and, of course, they are unfaith-ful-are just seeking frantically, with one woman after another, to live over and over this first stage. The same goes for many women.

Like everything else, love goes through various stages of growth-and marriage is the open, proud expression of love. First there is the romantic stage described above. It is a fine and wonderful emotion, a mixture of awe, physical desire, wild fancies and illusions. This kind of love lasts, or should last, during the courtship and through the first months of marriage. (Continued on page 89)

What Silent Tlight 9 Means to 9 le

By bing orosby

IIVING always clocked in as a crooner who just goes along singin' whatever should sing a sacred song like "Silent Night" It's a little out of my league
But once in one of my braver moments 1 took a flyer on it. And because folks have a took a nyer on it. And because foiks have a time, you let me get away with it. The same reason that I've been getting away with it ever since, no doubt
I guess the answer to that is that in addition to being a religious song commemorating a very sacred occasion, "Slent Night" is as much a part of musical Americana as is "Sweet Adeline" or "Auld Lang Syne". Just let somebody give the pitch and the rest of the family all climb aboard. From there on it's every man for himself. If you go off-key or don't wind up together nobody minds. You step back as proud of yourselves as though you'd copped of hrst honors at he Mel. Chouces youl sing five or six choruses, so everyb crack at the tenor anyway
We air own a piece of "Silent Night". And the dividends aicks back to us whenever we hear or sing it connect with something that's happened in the past. It's the same all over. Whether youre Amarillo, or sitting beside a pickle barrel with a wreath around it in a country store. It takes you back to a sad Christmas. Or a good one. The time you played a bit in the Christmas school play. The importint occasion of trimming Junior's first tree. Christmas Eve in a thatched church in the South Pacific, the eerie chant of natives voices trying "Silent Night." An Occupation troop standing duty in Frankfurt listens to a record in the Red Cross club and wonders what the gang's all doing back home.
For the most part, I think it takes us back to our childhood. The years fall away . . . in some cases a pretty steep drop . . . and we're kids again. We get a kick out of remembering the Christmases we had then "Silent Night" always rings that kind of a bell with me. Takes me back to those days when I was just a little groaner back in Sokane.
We lived in a sturdy brown house in a full Irish neighborhood where you could pass the blarney around with folks like the Hardigans, Sweeneys, the Kellys, and my president of Gonzaga University now. $\int^{\text {HE story of how Les Tremayne and I met }}$ and married is a zany but a merry one. And our marriage, which is now almost a year old, is equally merry-and equally zany. Somehow we manage to have the fullest lives of anyone I know (in the smallest space-a one-room apartment!), and it promises to be even fuller. It's even resulted in a husband-wife radio show, Abbott Mysteries, in which I play Jean Abbott and Les plays Pat Abbott. And, of course Im still Chichi in Life Can Be Beautiful as $I$ have been for eight years now. Burst met tes two years ago, peght here in ne-room apartment which is now our very crowded mutual home, thanks to the housing shötage. A friend brought him to call, and all I knew ahead of time about him was that he was from Chicago and had been in radio as long as I had. He'd been the leading man in First Nighter for seven years, the leading man in Grand Hotel for five years, a co-star with Bob Crosby two years on the Old Gold show, and Bob in Betty and Bob for four years. But I didn't have the faintest idea he'd turn out to be my leading man, at all At first sight I liked him. To thumbnailsketch him, he looks like the hero of a drawing room comedy. He's sophisticated lookng, with light brown hair, blue eyes, moustache, and he's tall and slim, with big houlders. He sald later that he liked short, lim brunettes like me just as well as I liked him. But at the time neither of us mentioned ppearances.
He looked around my apartment for clues as to what I was like, and he found lots of them. My grand piano had the star position in the big room, and my walls are hung with pictures brought back to me by friends from ana, Jan, Che Maico, England, Ger ric. Even in New York, gardeners must garden. Furthermore, I was in the middle of knitting baby sweater for a friend's child- I 'm always knitting something

THINGS had been very quiet all day at Lum & Abner's Jot 'Em Down Store and Library. The party line phone had rung three fimes for Mrs. Ward, down the street, but the first two times it had just been Mrs. Ward's eldest daughter, Annie Miller, asking her mother what to do about the new Miller baby's habit of sucking his thumb. The third time, Abner didn't even bother to listen in. Lum was checking over the store's stock in an aimess sort of way, and Abner was books they'd gotten in for the library om the auction up the old Sumfrom the auction up at the old Sumner place.

TTHE Aldrich Family could be any American family whose life is complicated by the trials 1 and frenzies of adolescents. For years, Henry Aldrich has been getting himself and his family into and out of scrapes which have an all too familiar ring to delighted listeners. Henry is suffering through the pangs of growing up. He's driven by a strong urge to prove himself a self-sufficient, independent "man." For a long time, Henry's been heckling his parents to let him put himself to the real test-namely, to be allowed to go for an out-of-town weekend with his friend, Homer Brown. Finally, Mr. and Mrs. Aldrich have given in, although they have many doubts as to the wisdom of the whole thing.
(Henry is played by Ezra Stone; Homer by Jackie Kelk; Mr. Aldrich by House Jameson; Mrs. Aldrich by Katherine Raht.)

3. Henry is conscientious about his responsibilities, He's duty bound to upbraid Homer for letting hisc coat be brushed off. Thai

ISITORS to California who take the bus tour of fashionable West Los Angeles to see the movie stars' homes look in vain amonig the imposing Georgian town houses and the pillared colonials for "the house that Blondie built."
For the unpretentious Spanish bungalow where Penny Singleton, her husband, RKO Executive Producer Robert Sparks, and their two daughters live the most relaxed life in movietown is far off the beat of thẹ sight-seers.
If there is anything "different" about the house, Penny is wont to explain, it is that there are a million more in Southern California just like it.
Like all the other houses on its particular block in the flat, suburban San Fernando Valley, the house is ne-story, U-shaped, its red mle roof and open patios borrowed from the Spant of bedrooms, bathrooms and iving quarters the contribution of more recent migrants to California who built their houses for comfort and not for show, nd not for show the "den" rather than the living room is the heart of the family's life. ust as in all the other bungalows in the block, the bronzed baby shoes warrant a place of honor among the objets d'art. Just as in all the other bungalows in the block, the brand new "post-war special" washing machine is the most prized-and probably most expensive-possession. It could be-wait, it is-the home of Blondie herself.

The people who live there like it. If you drop in early on any warm evening, the fall o, Penny and Robert relaxing after rugged day in the studio, comfy in slacks and soft shoes, waiting for Sally, the Negro cook, to call them in to dinner. The visitor is expected, of course, to look in on Dorothy Grace and Suzie before settling down to more adult relaxing. There is always a project of some proportions in work which merits serious attention.
Suze is likely to be re-arranging her record collecton which is her particular pride despite downs from Dorothy Grace and on the cratchy sidc. Dorothy Grace, sprawled the the counterpane of her frilly (even mono rammed!) bed, the radio blasting out swing music in her ears, can often be caught

Sometimes Dorothy's friend Gretchen comes over and they cut up movie magazines together. ("I have to hide them," Penny will tell you, "or they don't last an hour in one piece.") The conversation that blows down the hall from that twosome is more fun than ginrummy. Penny and Bob say eavesdropping is their favorite indoor sport.

Let selting your table be the only just-before-eating task. You can, if you follow Kate Smith's plan which allows you, as well as the family, to enjoy Christmas dinner.

IIHAT shall we have for Christmas dinner? What shall we serve to celebrate this bestloved of holidays? These are the questions uppermost in our minds as the great day draws near and luckily for all of us there is a variety of deliciously satisfying answers-chicken or duck, goose or that favorite of favorites, turkey. Whichever you prefer, the dressing will be of major importance so here are a number to choose from together with a few cooking tips to help you to the very merriest of Christmases.

Bread and Sausage Dressing (for chicken or turkey)

2 cups stale bread crumbs
$1 / \frac{\mathrm{c}}{} \mathrm{cup}$ hot water
2 or 3 sausage links
1 medium onion chopped fine
$1 / 4$ cup minced celery leaves
$1 / 4$ cup minced parsley
$1 / 2$ tsp. salt
tsp. pepper
$1 / 4$. tsp. sage
Cover bread crumbs with water and allow to stand about 10 minutes. Break sausage with a fork and add to crumbs. Add remaining ingreclients and mix well. This is sufficient (about 2 cups) for a 4-1b. chicken. Increase proportions to make 6 cups for turkey.

Mashed Potato Dressing (for any fowl

2 cups hot mashed potato
1 tsp. sajge
1 tsp, salt
$1 / 2 \mathrm{tsp}$. perpper
1 tbl. melted shortening
1 egg, beaten
$1 / 4$ cup milk
Add seasonings, shortening and beater to milk. Combine mashed potato and beat About 2 cups.

HEROINES MAKE THEMSELVES

Bess McCammon would be the last person in the world to accept herself in the role of a heroine. Bess, who plays among other radio parts the one of Aunt Agatha in The Romance of Helen Trent (CBS, Mondays through Fridays at 12:30 P.M. EST) is calm, grey-haired, green-eyed.

Yet, in her gentle way, Bess McCammon has had to face life and fight for it, for herself and her two sons.

Bess was born and raised in Cincinnati, Ohio, brought up in the American tradition that the greatest career for a woman was that of being a good wife and mother.

For seventeen years, she acquitted herself very well. She ran her home efficiently and happily. She had two sons.

In 1932, that well being was shattered by the untimely death of Mr . McCammon and the startling realization that she had a seventeen-year-old son to see through college and a ten-year-old son to help through his formative years.

Outside of her home making, Bess had training for only one thing, the theater. Bravely, she tackled the powers-that-were at the Schuster-Martin School of the Drama and, with no trouble at all, she was hired as a faculty member of the school and shortly made the director of the school's children's theater. This was a job and hard work, but it didn't quite fulfill all the needs of her little family in terms of salary. It was this need for more money that turned Bess's efforts toward radio, which was just beginning to get a foothold on the nation at that time.

In no time at all. Bess was appointed to the dramatic staff of station WLW, For the next six years, she handled two jobs-one at the dramatic school, the other at the radio station, scrambling a bit to meet all her commitments without sacrificing her children to her career. And any woman who has had to work for a living and raise children at the same time, knows what a strain that can become at times.

By 1940, Bess was so much in demand for radio work that she was able to give up her staff work at the school. In the early spring of that year, she moved with her sons to Chicago, where for the next four years she was one of the busiest actresses on the air. In 1944, she moved to New York, that being the next port of call in her career, but also a place more accessible for her sons, who were both in the Armed Forces by that time. The war years were not easy for Bess, yet worry over her boys while they were overseas never ruffled her quiet, calm nature. She would still laugh, if anyone called her beroic.

FROM THE HORSE＇S MOUTH
When a radio producer in Chicago needs a mad cockatoo，a pink elephant，an over－ worked and complaining horse，or an alli－ gator noise，his automatic choice for an authentic portrayal is Wilms Herbert． Wilms is also greatly in demand as a lead－ Ing man and charaeter actor，being heard daily and weekly in many shows．He plays Keith Armour in NBC＇s Today＇s Children， Mr．Garrett in NBC and CBS＇s Ma Perkins and is the narrator on the NBC series，Tales of the Foreign Service．In addition，he portrays all the different animal characters that turn up in Mutual＇s Those Websters，

All this versatility isn＇t just a knack． It＇s the result of research，study and hard work．Wllms loves all animals and spends much of his time at the zoo，watching and listening to them and absorbing every nuance of the sounds they utter．That＇s what makes his animal imitations so authentic．His dialects come from in－ tensive reading and wandoring about the city listening to the way people speak．

Wilms．an attractive bachelor of some thirty－odd years，was born in Chicago．He began his acting career early，working as a professional actor while he was still a student at Lake View High School．He toured during the summer with Chautau－ qua and Toby shows．

The restlessness in him，which is now satisfled by wanderings in and around Chi－ cago，was always with him．On one of his tours about the country，he stopped off in Hollywood for several years．There he ran a darce studio，at the same time sing－ ing in the Los Angeles Opera Company and the Light Opera Company，with Hyers in musical movies，both singing and dane－ ing before the cameras．During his spare time－what there was of it－he wrote dance reviews for the Los Angeles Daily News．

A wanderer at heart，Wilms tired of staying in Hollywood and began traveling． arranging and booking musical units for movie theaters throughout the country． He finally got to Milwaukee and，in 1940， took over the stage direction of the Mil－ waukee Opers．He still commutes to Mil－ waukee once a week，where he is narrating for a children＇s opera company．

In 1942，Wilms decided to try his hand at radio and，after a very short time，he had a leading part in Lonely Women．Since then．he has developed into one of the busiest actors in Chicago．

He＇s not sure how long it will last，but for the moment，Wilms has settled down in Evanston，Illinois，where he lives with his mother and brother．One of the things which may anchor him for some time is his fine collection of rare birds and the modern，scientific aviary in which he breeds them．You can＇t just walk off and leave such a hobby to gather dust，while you gallivant about the country．

CHATTERBOX

Fran Allison's characterizations of genial, gossipy, gauche "Aunt Fanny" on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday broadeasts of the ABC Breakfast Club (weekdays 8 A.M. CST), are so realistic that Fran's mother, back in Iowa, is in a constant dither for fear that kinfolk might be offended.

Fran says that this puzzles her because the quaint people and rural events she describes a la Aunt Fanny are purely fictitious. There are really no such persons as Lutie Larson, Bert and Birdie Beerbower, Nether Hennicut and the rest of the rustics that pop up in her monologues. Fran makes them up out of her own head. When challenged, however, she does admit that certain characters are composites of actual people she has met and watched and listened to-but that's something else again. Where else should an artist go for material, if not to life itself?

Fran was born in La Porte City, Iowa, and spent her girthood, as she puts it, ". . in the shadows of the tall corn." She went to Coe College in Cedar Rapids, majoring in music and education. As a member of the college glee club, she discovered that she had a flair for putting vitamins into undernourished ballads, which talent resulted in an early debut as a singer on a local radio station.

Like so many successful characterizations, the creation of "Aunt Fanny" was spontaneous. Fran had strolled casually into the studio one day while an announcer was giving forth on the air. As a break, the announcer interrupted his program to remark, "Why, here's Aunt Fanny-why don't you come over and say hello to the folks?" The "Aunt Fanny" clicked in Fran's inventive brain and she went to the microphone and for five minutes ad-libbed ber first, hilarious Aunt Fanny routine.

Once born. Aunt Fanny took a firm hold on listeners who kept writing in for more of the loquacious lady. From that moment, Fran led a dual life, singing as Fran Allison and chattering as Aunt Fanny.

In 1937, Fran moved to Chicago, where she and Aunt Fanny became fixtures on the Breakfast Club.

Fran is a warm, friendly and unaffected person, who prides herself-as well she may-on maintaining an even temper at all times. That even temper is being sorely tried, these days, too. Through the last two and a half years of the war, while her husband. a lieuterant in the infaniry, was overseas, Fran spent most of her spare time trying to locate an apartment that had a lease of more than three months. Her efforts were valiant but not very iruitful. Fran claims that she spent most of that time changing apartment and phone listings. And now that her husband is back home again, she'd like to settle down and cook for him-a chore she loves-and get an effioient parson to keep bouse.

Jonathan Trimble's In-Law Trouble
no self-respecting town like Bellport should permit itself even a sidelong glance at a neighboring town that would harbor a reportory company-a town such as Bellport's neighbor, Flowerdale," the loungers around the stable heard. "Therefore we fully expect that all the refined and cultured people of Bellport will keep away from Flowerdale this weekend, when 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' will be exhibited on the stage

Women's and children's innocent minds can be warped beyond redeeming by so much as a glimpse of the charlatans and thieves who call themselves actors ..." And so on.

E wound up in a crescendo of shouting, and Martinson was duly appreciative. Jonathan felt fine. Contentedly, he clapped his bowler hat on his head, picked up his gold-tipped cane, snapped it against his gray spats, and barged homeward through the wide and tree-lined streets of Bellport. As he passed the livery stable, he bowed warmly to his unknown audience of loungers. Only one thing on the way home wiped the happy expression off his face-a sign advertising the acting troupe coming to Flowerdale. But once past that, Jonathan's face resumed its contented set. And once settled at the dinner table at his home, he was more than content-he was beaming.

As he ate his way through soup, fish, roast beef, creamed chicken, salad, two vegetables, potatoes (sweet and Irish), and a chocolate steamed pudding, he listened pleasantly to the conversation of his wife Alice, his twelve-year-old son Morgan, and his attractive almostgrown daughter Mildred. And he roared "A fine meal, Norah!" to the Trimble maid-of-all-work as she carried in, at last, the coffee. If his wife seemed to have been watching him with closer attention than was her wont, he didn't notice it. And if she seemed to clear her throat unduly before she asked him a direct question over coffee, that too missed his attention.
"Dear," she said then, "will it be all right if we have a house guest over the weekend? I know it's rather sudden" $"$.

Jonathan turned his contented countenance her way. "Depends on the house guest," he remarked cheerfully. "A man-no. A beautiful womanyes."
Alice looked relieved. "It's a woman, but I don't know how beautiful because I haven't seen her since I was six," she said. "It's my cousin Addie. She's English, and this is her first trip back to America since then-1 received a telegram this afternoon."
"Fine with me," Jonathan nodded. Then, pouring a little brandy in his coffee, he added, "What's she doing in Bellport this weekend-why the sudden visit?"
"Uh-I don't really know," Alice stammered, with uncharacteristic vagueness.
But Jonathan missed this too. He picked up his cup and headed for his library. Over his shoulder he called back, "Why, I'd be delighted to show an Englishwoman a real American home. She'll find out we've got more breeding and culture than her country ever dreamed of." He paused in the doorway and added, "The only thing more ignorant than a Britisher is-an actor!" Then he made a triumphant exit, on the wings of his near-épigram.
Behind his back, Alice jumped as if she'd been unexpectedly pushed, and a guilty expression hurried across her face and disappeared again. But she said nothing to her lord and master, who was now roaring out a song from Gilbert and Sullivan in his library as if he had forgotten that those two gentlemen were English-and also tarred with the theatrical brush.
The following Thursday's luncheon was a meal Alice was sure she'd never forget. It was the day her cousin Addie was due to arrive, and she had spent the morning scouring the house with Norah's aid. She sat down breathlessly at lunch wearing a dust cap over her hair-and listened in mounting horror to the news Jonathan had brought home.
"Bellport," he shouted, as if he were addressing a meeting of the town council instead of three Trimbles, "is to be honored tomorrow night by an unofficial campaign visit of our fine Governor!" He looked around for approval, reaped awed interest, and continued. "He's arriving on the 9:00 P.M. train, and the town council had an emergency meeting this morning to decide how to introduce him to all his loyal Republican followers in Bellport. It was finally decided to give him a garden party reception at a leading citizen's home."
He got ready for his punch line. "And now, my dears-guess whose home was chosen for the honor of giving that party?"

Alice croaked out the answer. "Our home-and I think I'm going to faint."

JONATHAN said, "Nonsense! Take a deep breath." "Then he went back to his triumph. "Our home was picked for two reasons-one, we have a magnificent garden; two. I edit the most outspokenly Republican newspaper in this part of the state!""That's fine, dear, and I'm proud of you," his wife said feebly. "But let's get down to details about this party. What do you want it to be like?"

Jonathan wanted it to be fremendously successful, that was all .... with sixty jack-o-lanterns decorating the grounds, plenty of chairs rented from the funeral parlor, a small stringed orchestra rented from the hotel, and the customary refreshments-ice cream, fruit punch, cake, lemonade, and so on.
He got up from the table, ready to head back toward his office for his afternoon's work, and paused. He had just recalled that their house guest was due that afternoon.
"I hope your cousin is presentable enough to fit into the party tomorrow night," he said, "Being British, it's bard to say. By the way, Alice, what's her name? Might as well begin memorizing it so I can introduce her around tomorrow night."
"Well.." his wife answered. Then she squared her shoulders, seemed to win some inner struggle, and said firmly, "Her name is Adelaide Summer, just as it always was. Miss Adelaide Summer."

Fonathan looked displeased. "Oh, one of those British old maids," he stated. Then he added with a shrug, "Still, that's a pretty name. Easy to remember too. Adelaide Summer . . say, hayen't I heard that somewhere before?" He frowned. concentrating.
"I don't know . ..." (Con't'd on p. 56)

"Oh, well," Jonathan dismissed the subject. In the doorway he turned to deliver a final speech. "There's only one blot on the Governor's comingthose disgusting signs along Main Street advertising that cheap theatrical troupe."

With that he left his home and set out to walk back to his office. On the way, he passed one of the repugnant signs advertising the arrival of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." He read it absently as he went past it, continued walking on for a few feet-and then made an abrupt U-turn and hurried back to study it. He had not been wrong. There was the name "Adelaide Summer" listed as one of the troupe!

E hastened right back home, trying to hold his agitated gait down to a trot. Once at his own house, however, he threw dignity to the winds and galloped across the lawn, over the porch and through the front door. As he went he was roaring, "Alice! What is this outrage! Don't tell me that your finefeathered British cousin is a vulgar member

He got that far in his speech, and his fiery progress had led him into the living room, when he came upon Alice. She looked as horrified as he-but for a different reason. She was sitting talking to her just-arrived cousin, Adelaide Summer . . . who was as beautiful a woman as Jonathan could have wished for a house guest.

Jonathan took in this scene and stopped his speech in full-stride. But if Adelaide had heard his denunciation - and how could she have missed hearing it?-she gave no sign. She said, "So this is your handsome husband! You're so kind to put me up!"
"Er-ahem-of course," stuttered Jonathan. But he looked like a man who was smothering. Finally he bowed stiffly to her, shouted to Alice, "I'll see you upstairs!", and charged from the room. On his way through the hall he couldn't resist stealing a look at himself in the mirror to check on his handsomeness.

But his attitude on her career was unchanged, as he roared to Alice the minute she appeared in their bedroom.
"Of course I cannot refuse to put up a female relative-no gentleman can do that," he shouted at her. "But I can and do refuse to have the town know I am putting up an actress. I shall have a talk with her about it."

Without waiting for Alice's answer, he tore open the bedroom door, advanced down the hall to the guest room door, and gave it a series of crashing knocks.
"Come in," called Adelaide sweetly. Once inside, he found his daughter Mildred watching Adelaide unpack with her eyes starting from her head.
"Look, Father," she called to Jonathan the second he entered. She held up a box overflowing with Iovely jewels. "Look at Cousin Adelaide's beautiful gems-and see, some of them are engraved in their gold settings: 'With love from Gilbert.'."

This news flabbergasted Jonathan. With his last breath, he said shortly to Mildred, "Please leave so that I can speak to my wife's cousin alone." He could hardly wait for the door to close on Mildred's reluctant back. Then he faced Adelaide.

Jonathan explained to her that the immorality of theater people was no secret to the world, although he was broadminded about it, of course. "But as a father and husband, I must ask you to stop flinging the trophies of your romances in my innocent family's face!"
"Yes, Jonathan," said Adelaide. Her lip seemed to be twitching unduly, and she clamped her handkerchief to it.

This was easier than he could have hoped for. He went on. "Furthermore, based on the fact that some people in Bellport regard all theater people as beyond the pale-it would help my standing in the community a great deal if there were some means of concealing your livelihood from Bellport. You are obviously a charming woman in yourself," he added graciously. "But as an actress you might be misunderstood."

DELAIDE settled this problem promptly. She explained that the play was "Uncle Tom's Cabin," and she would be playing in black-face; no one would recognize her.
"But there's still another problem," she added, working at her twitching mouth with her handkerchief again. "And that is how to get me to the theater? If I hire a carriage in Bellport, the driver might spread the word around "Impossible!" roared Jonathan. Then, after a moment of fuming, he announced that he himself would drive her to the theater. "I'll have time to get back before my party for the Governor begins; and by the time I have to call for you after the play, the party should be over ... Too bad you'll miss it," he added with obvious relief.

Everything was settled satisfactorily, He started for the door, then swung around. "There's the problem of your name! We'll have to introduce you occasionally to our friends, and the name Adelaide Summer is obviously wrong if you are to be incognito." Thinking, his eye lit on her jewel box. With his lips tightened, he said, "Now, if we could call, you Mrs. Gilbert-er -something .
Adelaide choked back what sounded like a giggle-probably of hysteria. But she said demurely, "Let's call me Mrs. Gilbert Reed. How's that?"
"That's fine!" Jonathan beamed. "You are a good sport. Adelaide, even if you are British and-er-an actress," and went from the room with satisfaction in every line of his black broadcloth ssuit. Downstairs, he boomed to the assembled Trimbles that for reasons best known to himself and Adelaide, she would be known as Mrs. Gilbert Reed to Bellport. And no mention of her acting would be breathed outside the house. Alice was to relay this news to Norah in the kitchen, too.

By the next evening, when he was due to drive Adelaide to the theater, Jonathan arrived home to find his household disrupted. All day the women had been getting things ready for the party that night-and Adelaide's influence was marked. Alice took him on a tour to show him the wonders her cousin had wrought-based on the British way of doing things. Jonathan found that Norah had made a special kind of caviar canape that was delicious. But the cost! Also, Adelaide had herself mixed a champagne punch that was sheer nectar. But again the cost! She had also arranged Mildred's hair in a new way, and fitted out Alice in one of her own fashionable gowns. "Makes you look like a London hussy!" Jonathan fumed, but he couldn't help admiring his wife's appearance nevertheless. And he had to admit that the garden, strung with jack-o-lanterns and set up with chairs and tables, looked beautiful.

B UT meanwhile he had made his barf) gain to drive the upsetting influence to the theater, and he was braced to carry it out. After gulping a sandwich, he helped Adelaide into the carriage -together with two suitcases of costumes and a make-up kit-and they were off for Flowerdale.
Once started, Jonathan made a chilling discovery: half of Bellport's finest carriages were on the road to perdition -headed for the theater in Flowerdale. He had almost turned into the main road to Flowerdale before he observed this unexpected turn of events. At once he yelled, "Whoa!" to his horses. and then, after a moment's thought, he turned resolutely around and headed the carriage in another direction.
"What are you doing?" Adelaide demanded anxiously. "We haven't any too much time, you know."
"I'm taking you to Flowerdale, all right," Jonathan told her. "But by the back roads. I don't want my fellow townsmen to think I too am made of clay !"

Adelaide said nothing more. But as they jounced along on rutted back roads she kept glancing at the tiny diamond-studded watch pinned to her shirt-front. And finally she told Jonathan that they were going to be so late that she would have to begin putting on her make-up in the car-"iage-she wouldn't have time, once they reached the theater.
"A thousand times no!" Jonathan roared at her, outraged. "You might as well take a bath in public!"
But in spite of him, she opened her make-up kit and began smearing charcoal on her face. It was half-on, and Jonathan was still bellowing his disapproval at her, when the unbelievably tragic happened-while they raced down a narrow back road lined with high hedges. Jonathan, still shouting at Adelaide, galloped his horses recklessly around a corner and ran smack into another carriage! And even as the crash sounded, Jonathan's carriage sagged to one side-a wheel had been torn off.
What made things worse was that Jonathan instantly recognized the face that poked from the other carriage. It belonged to Dunny Turner, the Mayor's son . . . and Mildred's most ardent beau. Right now, Dunny's round face expressed two thoughts in quick succession: the first was recognition of Jonathan, and the second was openmouthed astonishment at sight of Jonathan's beautiful companion-whose beauty was still evident, even if the left side of her face was coated with charcoal!

Jonathan sat transfixed in his lopsided position in his broken carriage for a long moment, peering at Dunny. Then he opened his mouth for a roar, changed his mind and sighed instead. Very quietly he said, "Dunny, will you be kind enough to drive this lady to the theater in Flowerdale?"

Dunny's gaping mouth closed, then widened in an interested grin. "Surest thing you know, Mr. Trimble," he said. "Fact is, I was sort of heading that way myself. Quietly."

THERE was something about the way he said "quietly" that jolted Jonathan back into his customary personality. He began roaring that yes, this was his wife's cousin; yes, she was an actress; and that if Dunny could keep his mouth shut in Bellport about her identity and the errand, Jonathan's answer to Dunny's marital hopes toward Mildred might be yes too!
"Yes, sir," said Dunny, instantly respectful-and instantly active. In a second he had helped Adelaide into his carriage, packed her suitcases around her, and promised to drive her back again after the theater. His carriage drove off in a sudden flurry of dust and excitement.

It took Jonathan an hour to fix the wheel to the carriage again. He finally drove home grimy, boiling with pent-up emotion, and an hour late to his own party. From his bedroom window, as he hastily attired himself in his white tie and tails, he could see the back garden already sparsely dotted with people dressed in their best, and lit by the bobbing jack-o-lanterns strung through the trees. He was just wrestling his tie into place when Alice came rushing in, her prettiness a little blurred by agitation.
"Jonathan!" she wailed. "It's not going well! The Governor seemswell, sort of listless. He's hard to talk to. I'm afraid he's hurt because the crowd is so small. Where is everyone, Jonathan? Could they possibly have gone to that-that theater in Flowerdale? ${ }^{*}$
"They could positively have gone to that theater in Flowerdale," said Jonathan glumly. He followed her down to the garden and joined in her efforts to make gay conversation with the Governor. But it was indeed an uphill task. The Governor seemed withdrawn and indifferent. Finally he looked openly at his watch and asked a flat question of Jonathan.
"Are these all the Republicans in Bellport?" he demanded.
"No-there will be lots of others here," Jonathan said unhappily, "They're-detained somewhere."

The Governor made his decision. "I too shall be detained somewhere," he said with finality. 'I shall be detained in my hotel room bed." He added that it had been a charming party, but that he had to get up to catch an early train -and it was time to go. With Jonathan and Alice trailing him unhappily. he started for the front garden.

There, just for a moment, it looked as if the party might yet be saved. For just as the Governor reached the front driveway, so did the first of a long string of carriages that began pulling up in front of the Trimble home . . . all of them splashed with the mud of Flowerdale, Jonathan noticed grimly.

But even this new rush of people couldn't turn the tide of the party. Despite everyone crowded around him the Governor firmly refused to be guided back toward the back garden again. "No, I have to get to bed," he said truculently. Then Jonathan saw further disaster headed his way!

Out of the corner of his eye he observed Dunny's carriage driving upwith a beautiful Adelaide inside it. As she put one small foot on the carriage step, Jonathan said pleadingly to the Governor, "Please, sir-back to the punch-bowl!"

He was too late-the Governor's eye had caught sight of Adelaide too. And once sighted, she remained sighted. The Governor stared at her as if hypnotized. Then, suddenly, he gave a shout. "Strike me if it isn't Lady Gilbert Reed!" he yelled heartily, "I haven't seen you since my trip to London."

Jonathan felt as if his knees were about to turn to jelly. Amazed, he stared at his wife, who stared amazed back at him. Meanwhile, the Governor was now holding Adelaide's hand and inquiring how dear Lord Gilbert was. "Fine,", said she, "and so are my two children."
Jonathan felt a slight giddy feeling in his head. But as the Governor swept Adelaide around the house and into the back garden, talking and laughing to her and followed by a swarm of guests, Jonathan tottered after them. He got there just in time to hear the Governor say that he must drink a toast in Adelaide's honor. With which he climbed on a chair and waved a glass of punch in her direction.
" WANT to introduce everyone in Bellport to Lady Gilbert Reed, one of England's most charming hostesses," the Governor announced into the waiting silence of the party. He bowed toward Adelaide. "She is also, as you must know, one of its most gifted actresses, under her maiden name of Adelaide Summer. To Adelaide Summer, then, alias Lady Gilbert Reed!"

A mixture of astonishment and fascination held every face at the party. Jonathan still felt as if he might faint any minute.
"And now a toast to our host, Jonathan Trimble. Esquire!" the Governor boomed. "A man so broadminded that while he denounces the stage in his newspaper, he cordially receives such relatives of his who act into his own home!"

Alice nudged Jonathan, who bowed suddenly and dizzily to his guest of honor and to his guests in general.

And then, suddenly, he was playing a new role. He found himself on a chair drinking a toast to the Governor -and offering to take His Honor and twelve guests to the theater tomorrow night to see Adelaide play ... if the Governor would stay over another day in Bellport.
"It might be arranged," the Governo said,"gazing with pleasure at Adelaide Young Morgan Trimble elbowed hi: sister Mildred knowingly, "Definitely," he whispered, "the old man has landed on his size-twelves again!"'
"Morgan!" said that young lady reprovingly. But she had to admit it was true, Sister Problem. Dorothy's cross is the heavier to bear.

"Your sister is eight and you are eleven," Dorothy has been heard to complain, "and that's only three years difference. But $m y$ sister is three and a half-not even four yet. That is eight years difference. Why, that's as old as your sister is! Why, I just broil, all the time," Suzie, far from being stung by this Light opinion of her worth, is scornful right back at her big sister. "Movie stars!" she snorts.
"But you like movies too, Suzie," her mother will remind her laughing. "Surn," Suzie will reply, "Smoky. Black Beauty. Horses, horses, horses,"
Which, in turn, reminds her that there is an errand she wants her daddy to do for her the next time he is near the book store. "Have him bring me Black Beauty and the Beast," she demands. She's crazy over horses.

Bob Sparks is a friendly and forthright fellow whose relaxed and casual manner in the family environment belies his important position in the motion picture business as an Executive Producer at RKO.

He is terribly proud of Penny, but insists upon staying in the background in so far as her career is concerned. He would never tell you-but Penny would-that she might never have been Blondie were it not for Bob.

He was the first producer of the "Blondie" films, and it was he who conducted the search for an actress to play the most beguiling young matron of the comic strips. When Penny's manager took her in to Columbia studios for an interview with Bob, she looked anything but the part . . . she had quite dark hair, and a look that was anything but young-matronly. But Bob felt that the voice-the personality-were what he was looking for. Penny was sent out for a peroxide job, made testsand there was Blondie!

He has had a comprehensive career in the thenter and films which covered the jepartments of exploitation, public relations, writing, stage managing and producing. At home, however, he is anything but the executive. It is he whom Suzie calls on to fix her radio when-as often-it breaks down. It is he who must take both kids to every circus, carnival and side show which comes to town.

The recent polio epidemic which, for safety's sake, restricted going-out activities somewhat, was hard on the youngsters-and on Bob, who has as much fum as the children when they're all turned loose together. But he tried to make up for it by arranging shows of his own, Mickey Mouse movies and Donald Ducks, in the projection room at his studio. Suzie, though grateful, was wistful for the glamorous past when children could go fearlessly into crowds.
"Donald is funnier," she said-her father thought, very discerningly"when lots of people are laughing at him."

Still, it's the horses Suzie prefers above all else. She wishes the magazines would print more stories about horse movie stars, so that she could have a clipping book of her favorite actor, just like her sister's.

If you insist, Penny will show you around the house, although she warns you that it's nothing fancy. Until she can build her post-war dream castlean S-shaped house with all the workparts, kitchen, laundry, pantry separated from the fun parts, living rooms, bedrooms, sum space by a long, tactful hall-the bungalow in the valley does just fine.

The outdoors is the best part of the valley house, so you look first at the vegetable garden, and the orehard with wainut, apricot, peach, avocado and fig trees-all bearing like mad.

Inside you start with the living room, which is cheerful with chintz-red mostly, with greyed accents of blue and yellow, Your eye catches the glint of Penny's collection of old pewter mugs, The handwoven rag rug in bright, primitive colors spills over, out into the hall and on into the other living areas of the house.
The dining room is early American, but not self-conscious about its antiques. Penny chose the brown and white ivy wall paper "just to be different."

If you have time, you'll come upon some of Suzie's handwork in the linen drawers. When a fan sent Penny a set of hand-crocheted lace table mats in a handsome oak leaf pattern, Suzie determined to improve upon the original. With her crayolas, she carefully stained every leaf green.
"A leave isn't a leave," she protested,

"unless it is green." The green leaves look very nice with the brown and white paper.
Down the hall from the dining room is a little room which the Sparks will tell you is the real reason they bought the house, It houses the stamp collection. Both Penny and Bob are impassioned philatelists, and not all the stamps they collect are from Penny, Kentucky, or Singleton, Texas, either!

Besides the big green leather chairs, the den has a vast and comfortable glazed chintz sofa, books and the radio, a red leather bar. The childrens' rooms are not "decorated," except by the girls themselves. Penny and Bob, however, gave some thought to their own room, which is warm and inviting with its maroon and white printed wallpaper, the soft blue chaise, and canopied four poster bed. Most important among the decorative effects is the collection of family daguerrotypes with all the Sparkses and Singletons framed and on display from Grandpa Sparks, through Penny herself prim in white organdy for her first Holy Communion, to Suzie on her christening day. Other decorations come and go. Current exhibit is a group of three "paintings" by Dorothy Grace Sparks: one of Johnny Toothbrush, the others versions of Dorothy's own invention, the Candy Cane Tree Very good they are, too, if Penny does say so as shouldn't.
The house isn't complete as yet. The Sparkses bought it when they were evicted from a rented house during the war. (As who in California wasn't? ) They had to make a fast move, They moved in with three beds-periodsince their furniture and belongings were stored at that time in the Navy warehouse in Quantico, Virginia.
Little by little since then they have got together the essentials for living -with emphasis on that new washing machine, which Penny loves so mucl she won't let anybody else touch it.
The war years were, all in all, fairly vigorous ones for the Sparks family. Bob was called into the serivice early, in the Marine Corps, and ordered to Quantico as a Major. Penny and Dorothy Grace joined him there for the only thirteen-week period Blondie has been off the air in eight years, giving Suzie the distinction of being the only "movie" child to be born in a Naval hospital.

When they returned to Hollywood, they went in for ranching on a bigand patriotic-scale, and Penny was A.WOL. from her vadio program for the one and only time in her life when they were snowbound at the ranch for nearly a week in the spring of 1944.
The ranch now has gone the way of the big and lavish houses in the Sparks's past. "Too much like work," sighs Penny, who as Blondie of films and radio probably does more solid, hard work than any actress in Hollywood.

Penny hopes there wil be no more moves for awhile. It's pleasant in the San Fernando valley - and plenty ritzy enough for the Sparkses and all their friends who will continue to be urged colloquially to "come right in and make yourself to home."
"Home is where you can let your hair down and relax," to hard-working Blondie.

There should be more such homesand there would be fewer broken families-in Hollywood.

"Divided hearts at our house..."

Somehow, somewhere, we'd lost our lovely, thrilling oneness. I didn't realize that 1 was at fault. Sure, I knew about feminine hygiene . . . or so I thought. But finally I learned, from my doctor, that the careless, now-and-then care I'd trusted to, was a frequent cause of marriage failure. He said a wife can't aftord such neglect . . . advised my using "Lysol" brand disinfectant for douching-always.

"Now it's one heart again".
"Two hearts that beat as one"that's us again! I wouldn't have believed careful feminine hygiene was so important in married happiness. But my doctor was right! I always use "Lysol" for douching, now, and can recommend its thorough yet gentie cleansing. "Lysol" is thorough - far more so than salt, soda or other homemade solutions. It's a proved germ-killer-it works-and it's so easy and economical to use.

More women use "LYSOL" for Feminine Hygiene than any other germicide . . . for 6 reasons Reason No. 4: CLEAN ODOR-'Lysol's" clean, antiseptic odor disappears quickly after use. Being an effective deodorant, "Lysol" helps to solve an important problem of personal daintiness.

phoning to ask me to drop in at her house that afternoon. She told me to bring my "little black bag" because the call was to be at least partly professional. That's all she told me over the phone, but when I arrived at her house, she pulled me gently into the hall and explained in a whisper that she wanted me to look at a friend of hers who was in the guest room upstairs. It was a girl, she said, a refugee girl who had arrived just the day before from Europe.
"Not Dorothy Meyer?" I asked in surprise. I knew how long Whit had been working on getting Dorothy Meyer over to this country. Dorothy had been the ward of Whit's Polish friend, Marya Valenti. Whit had evidently forgotten how much she had told me about Dorothy in the past few months, and I could see relief spreading over her face now.
"What's the trouble?" I asked.

WHE'S so thin and tired looking. And frightened. She's been in a Displaced Persons camp in Poland. I don't know much about what happened before that-she won't talk about it-but her whole family is dead. Marya Valenti told me that. It was just sheer luck that Dorothy wasn't killed, too. Her friends managed to keep her hidden during the worst of the war years. Poor thing. We'll probably never know what she's gone through."

I don't know what I expected to see in Whit's big canopied bed in the guest room, but as we went in and Whit opened the window curtains to let in the bright sunshine, I was aware of a sharp emotion of pity and surprise. The girl on the bed was one of the most beautiful creatures I'd ever seen-or would be with a few weeks of proper food and care. Shining coal black hair framed a small oval face. And out of that face, with its clear-cut, almost transparent structure of flesh and bone stared unwinkingly two huge wells of eyes-deep brown, they were, and looked as though they'd witnessed every sorrow on earth.

Whit was introducing us now, and the girl's sensitive mouth shaped itself into a faint smile as she said, "How do you do," in low cultured tones with just a faint hint of an accent. We drew up chairs, and as I came closer to her, I saw the fatigue and nervousness that overlay her beauty like tarnish on a silver goblet. Her small hands lay clenched at her sides.

I knew this was no time for a prolonged question and answer session so I merely said that I was glad she was here and that we'd been waiting for her for a long time. "And," I went on, "since I'm a doctor, I'm also going to see to it that you get well and strong and healthy so that you can enjoy life over here.'
She brightened up at that. "Oh, you have studied medicine? How nice. I had a friend at the University. . . ." her voice trailed off then, and she turned her face away for a moment. When she looked back at me, I could see that her lips were set to keep them from trembling. With a visible effort, she went on, "But she's gone now. And they say I mustn't think about it any more. She was-she was-Jewish, too."

I tried to hide the shiver that went through me as the import of her words struck me, and went on quickly to tell her that her most important job now was to get lots of rest and good food. Then, when she felt stronger, there would be plenty of time for her to make some friends, and figure out something to occupy her time and mind.
"Oh, yes," she responded eagerly, "I want to be doing something, useful. I can't just sit and do nothing."

When we got back downstairs, Whit said anxiously, "She's , going to be all right, isn't she, Joyce?'
"Yes," I said, "it won't take long to get her back on her feet physically. She's just fatigued, and rest and food will take care of that. But I think the real problem is-well-her soul has been hurt, Whit. Anyone can see that. She's been hurt so badly that jt'll take a long time for those inner bruises to heal. We'll all have to help her."
Whit's steady eyes looked into mine and she nodded her head slowly. "I know what you mean, Joyce. We'll do our best, won't we?'
I saw Dorothy almost every day for the next few weeks, and grew very fond of her. Gradually, as the rest and quiet and good food and sympathy began to take effect, the veil of fatigue and terror wore away. She had a true little voice, without a great deal of volume, and I used to love to sit and listen to her. She really knew musicWhit told me once that she had studied music most of her life-and her repertoire was made up of snatches of the great symphonies and concertos, Polish folk songs, Hebrew chants, and even bits of modern music that had been popular in Europe before the war. One day she came across some old Church hymnals in Whit's book-case and for the next few days all we heard was familiar Sunday-School music.
It soon became evident that it was time for Dorothy, to broaden her horizons a little. She'd had enough solitude and convalescence and was beginning to get a little restless. I felt that she was strong enough now, so Whit and I arranged a sort of "coming out" party.
People had heard about Miss Whittaker's European guest, of course, and were consumed with curiosity about her. And 1 must say that Dorothy fulfilled all the good reports that had gone around about her. She fairly glowed with excitement and subdued happiness. And she wore practically no make-up which, I could see, made a good impression on the older women.

It was interesting to see how the various people reacted to her. The young men were obviously attracted to her-het dark beauty and queer little foreign tricks of speech drew them like magnets. I particularly noticed young David Barden's eyes lighting up whenever she came near him. He couldn't stop staring at her. The girls were reserved at first. They scented a rivala stranger in their midst. But her friendiness soon broke down those barriers. Most of the older people, who understood perhaps a little more of her story and background, were curious about her and at the same time sympathetic. I could see that some of them almost had an impulse to pat her on the head and say "There, there. You're safe now."

I say, some of them. There were a few who watched her with hard impersonal eyes, as though she were a strange specimen in a 200 or a museum -something to study but not to make friends with. There will always be people like that, I thought with a sigh. They're so afraid of anything outside their own circle of understanding that they can't relax and be at ease. Fear of the unknown, that's what it is-almost a tribal fear that probably goes back to cave-man days. Well, I told myself, they'll get used to her after a while and then they'll warm up. It takes time.

10OROTHY was over at the piano now, with the young people clustered around her. She was piaying a Chopin Etude. David Barden was leaning against the piano, as close to her as he could get. When she finished, there was a scattered clapping of hands, and I heard one of the boys ask her if she knew "Sioux City Sue." She shook her head laughingly and some of the others suggested various popular songs. She had to admit that she didn't know any of them. Then, on an impulse, she struck a chord and asked them if they, knew this one. It was "Rock of Ages," They all knew it, of course, and atter a moment or two of surprise that she she should choose a hymn to play at a party, they began, one by one, to sing. My eyes met Whit's from across the room and we smiled at each other. Things were going well!

While all this was going on, I sat down for a moment next to Mrs, Barden, David's mother. Mrs. Barden was one of our close neighbors. She was not a clubwoman, but was considered a Pillar of the Church, her main interest being the Church choir and the musical arrangements for the various religious holidays and special Church entertainments. She was a plump merry little woman, perhaps a little hasty in her judgments and maybe a little too domineering, but she'd been a widow for a long time and was used to handling her own life and making her own decisions. David was her only son.
Mrs. Bardes was talking now about the Church organist, Ellie Danvers, who was leaving town in a week or so to be married. Mrs. Barden was very upset about it.
"You'd think," she laughed to me ruefully, "that I begrudged the poor girl a husband! I don't. I think it's wonderful that she finally got one-after all, she must be at least thirty by now. But I don't know what we're going to do about another organist!"'
"How about Mrs. Merryfield?" I suggested.
Mrs. Barden shook her head. "She can read the notes and punch the keys. but that's about all. You see, one of the duties of the organist is to trait the children's Christmas chorus. Anc that requires a general knowledge ot music-at least an ability to carry a tune. I've heard Helen Merryfield sing!"

I smiled at her and sympathized with her predicament.
"Well," she shrugged. "It'll probably work itself out. Something's got to happen soon, though. Christmas is coming and the children haven't even been organized yet. They usually go around singing carols on Christmas Eve, you know, and then come to the Christmas party and sing there."
She leaned back in her chair and looked over to the corner toward the group around the piano. Dorothy was playing, "When the Roll is Called Up Yonder," and the young voices were booming out the song joyfully. "My." said Mrs. Barden, "it's been a long time since I've heard that one. Where do you suppose she picked that up?"
"Out of one of Miss Whittaker's old hymnals," I told her. "She's learned just about every hymn in the book."
"That's rather odd, isn't it?" mused Mrs. Barden. "A girl like that-a foreigner, you know-learning our hymns."
"She likes them," I assured her, "she says some of them are very like the songs her mother used to sing to her."
"Very odd," Mrs. Barden went or. "She plays them well, though, and she has a nice voice-what you can hear of it."

And then I had my inspiration. "Why, Mrs. Barden," I exclaimed, trying not to let too much excitement creep into my voice, "that's the answer to your problem!"
"What problem?" asked Mrs. Barden absently, her fingers tapping on the chair arm in time to the music.
"Your children's chorus! Why couldn't Dorothy train them? She'd bo perfect, and I know she'd love to do it."
Mrs. Barden stopped tapping her fingers and stared at me. "Are you out of your mind, Joyce?"
"No, of course not. I think it's a wonderful idea."

RUT-oh, it's ridiculous. Nobody knows her or who she is or where she comes from. And she's not a member of the Church. Why ...no, it's out of the question."
"Look, Mrs, Barden." I said eagerly, "this is the best way in the world for people to get to know her and who she is and where she comes from. And lots of regular church-goers aren't necessarily members. Miss Whittaker and I would vouch for her character."

She gave me a troubled look. "You know what I'm thinking. Joyce. Let's be frank about it. The girl's Jewish, isn't she?"

I'd been waiting for that. "Yes, she is. And when I think of the terrible things that so-called Christians have done ta her and to the rest of her people during the war, I should think every rightminded person in the world would try to bend over backward to right those wrongs. I don't think this is a matter of religion or what Bible you happen to read, Mrs. Barden. Dorothy believes in God, as all of us do. It's really a matter of simple kindliness and generosity. She wants to be friends with all of us in Centerfield. That doesn't seem like asking too much, does it? And what better way could there be than to let her help train the children's chorus? She needs you, you need her."

Mrs. Barden looked thoughtful. "It does sound simple the way you put it, Joyce. But. . . " Ther she made up her mind. "Olh, all right-let's try it! I'll get the children together some afternoon nest. week, and we'll let her go to work on them. There-how's that?"
I felt limp with relief. This had been Dorothy's first battle and it had been won without her even knowing about it! "You're wonderful, Mrs. Barden," I said, and felt like kissing her right then and there. "Let me know what day, and Dorothy will be there."
It was getting late now and there were signs that the party was ready to break 0 p. Dorothy and Whit and I stood near the door to say goodnight to the guests. Everyone had nice things to soy to Dorothy, and her face was shining whith pleasture, "Don't forget," one of the girls called out to her, "we're all going on a picnic mext week if it's not too cold," and Dorothy nodded eagerly:

When David and his mother came up to say goodinight, I noticed that he held Dorothy's hand just a triffe longer than neepssaty and almost stammered as he told her how much he had enjoyed meeting her. A quick fush of color rose to her cheeks and she shyly said she hoped she would see him again soon. I siow Mrs, Barden flash a penetrating glance at her son.

Flnally, after everyone had gone, the three of us settled down for one last cup of tea and an after-party talk. I lold Dorothy what Mrs. Barden had in mind. and she was enthusiastic.
"Oh, I'm so happy," she breathed ecstatically. "I never thought things could be like this. Everybody is so nice, and you two are wonderful, and I know II1 adore working with those children. I don't know how I can ever repay you,"
"Don't try," said Whit gruffly, trying to hide her own emotions, "We're having just as good a time as you are. We needed someone like you to stir up the town a bit. It was getting stale. Now the folks will have something new to think about and discuss."
I couldn't resist a little teasing. "Especially David Barden, eh?"
Dorothy burst out, "Oh, my goodness, was it that obvious?" Then, as she saw our delighted grins, she flushed and lowerel her eyes.
I probably wouldn't have felt so gay and confident about things if I'd had any idea of some of the results and complications that were to arise from that simple little "debut" of Dorothy's. Perhaps it's just as well we can't see into the future! As it was, everything went along beautifully for a while. Dorothy began the training of her group of little angel-devils, as she called them, and from the few rehearsals I watched. I realized that she was doing an excellent job.
The children were fascinated. After every rehearsal, they'd all gather around the piano and beg her to sing some of the little old-country folk songs that she loved so much. Good, I thought. when I saw this happening. She's learned their songs, now let them learn some of hers.
Whit's old-fashioned little house was becoming quite a young people's rendezvous, too. More and more often in the evenings, as time went on, the windows would be ablaze with lights and passersby could hear the happy sounds of music and laughter from inside. David Barden, Whit said, was always there, sometimes with the rest of the group, sometimes just he alone, gravely discussing life and the world with Dorothy. Whit said they looked charming together-David so blond and tall, and Dorothy so dark and tiny, and both of them so earnest and courteous with each other.
It wasn't long before trouble began to brew. Mrs. Barden couldn't help realizing, sooner or later, what was going on, and when she finally understood, she must have gone through some bad moments. I knew how she'd feel about it. It was all right for Dorothy to train the children's chorus. Mrs. Barden felt she'd been very big and understanding about that. But her only son, David -that was another matter, and a much more important one. She'd always thought of David as settling down eventually with one of the Centerffeld girls he'd known all his life-one with a good solid American background, and preferably one whose family attended the same Church that Mrs. Barden did. That she was resigned to, But for David to begin to show too great an interest in this little nobody of a girl-this foreigner from Lord knows where in Europe-this-this Jew! It was intolerable!

She began finding excuses to keep David home in the evening or inventing errands for him to do which would prevent him from dropping in at Whit's. When he did get over to see Dorothy, inevitably there would be a phone call from Mrs. Barden, asking him to go here or there or to come home and keep her company because she was lonely. Lonely! She knew everyone in town, and I don't think she'd spent a lonely hour in her whole life. But David didn't complain or criticize. Maybe he didn't realize what she was trying to do. Anyway, he loved his mother, and it didn't occur to him to defy her.
Then she began to show her displeasure to Dorothy. She would drop in at the chorus rehearsals and just sit there disapprovingly and watch with narrowed eyes, trying to find something to complain about.

It was after one of these rehearsals that Dorothy came over to my house, her shoulders sagging with discouragement, and her eyes bright with unshed tears. "I think she hates me, Dr. Jordan," she burst out, "she said I was teaching the children all wrong and that I was a bad influence on themsinging my 'foreign trash' songs to them after rehearsals. She said their parents didn't like it and didn't want me to train the chorus any more."
"Sit down, Dorothy," I told her gently, "we may as well get this thrashed out right now."

She sat down quietly enough, and I started to explain as simply as I could. "First of all-and let's not have any false modesty or embarrassment about this-you and David are in love aren't you?"

She looked straight at me for a moment. Then, slowly, she nodded her head. "Yes, Dr. Jordan, we are."

IIELL. you know what small towns are like. You've lived in them. And you know what ordinary people are like-especially mothers with only one son. Dorothy, think how your own mather would react in a similar circumstance. And Im not trying to be cruel-I'm just trying to make you see Mrs. Barden's point of view. Suppose your brother were to fall in love with a girl from another country-another culture-another religion, Dorothy! Do you think your mother would have accepted it calmly without trying to stop it?"

Two big tears began to form in Dorothy's eyes, and she hastily lowered her head, In a muffled voice the honest answer came. "I don't think she'd have liked it, Dr. Jordan. I know she wouldn't. She was oldfashtoned and very religious."
"Then," I went on, "you know just what is going through Mrs. Barden's mind, Except that she's trying to avoid coming right out and saying it. She thinks she's modern and broadminsed. But those old ideas and'standards are hard to forget. And she hasn't forgotten them. She doesn't want David to be in love with you, Dorothy."

Dorothy lifted her head then. "But it's too late to stop it now. I love him. and he loves me. Oh, what am I to do? Must we stop seeing each other? Must I give him up? Is that the only way? Is America no different from Europe?
My heart cringed at her words. There it was-stated at last. Was there a place in our great country for someone like Dorothy? Could she have a part in our life, in our hearts? I knew there was a place for her in my life-in my heart.
"Dorothy," I said gently, and took her hand. "you don't think there's any reason why you and David shouldn't be in love and eventually get married and live the rest of your lives together, do you?

She didn't trust her voice. She just shook her head violently.
I went on. "And David feels the same way you do?"
"Yes, he does," she said tiredly. "I know how he feels. He feels that love and decency and kindness are the only things that matter. He feels that people like us are the only solution to the world's problems. Because we love each other and try to understand."
"Then wipe those tears away. It's up to you and David to prove to the world that you're right. Get up on your two feet-both of you-and fight for what you believe."
She stared at me unbelievingly througls her tears. "But what about Mrs. Barden, and-and-all the other people who feel the way she does?"
"She-and they-are partly your problem. But it's their problem, too, you know. You can't live for everybody. You can do everything you can to help them-up to a point. But from there on, they've got to do it for themselves. In the meantime, you've got yourself to consider. You and David. I don't believe in martyrdom. You do what you think is best for the two of you, and I'll back you up to the limit -or at least as far as I can go. And always remember-there are two things to consider:-your own happiness, and that bigger principle that both you and David believe. I'd say that included the children's chorus, too. It's a job you've taken on, you're doing it well, and I don't think you should give it up for anybody!"

Dorotiy's eyes had gotten bigger and bigger as I talked. The tears had disappeared now and a soft lustrous light was beginning to shine through. Speechlessly, she rose to her feet and came over and threw her arms around me. "That's what I've been wanting to hear," she said breathlessly. "Now I can do anything!"

IFELT a little frightened after she'd gone. I was really in for it now. Right up in the front lines, not just in an observer's seat. And I needed help. Wise, understanding help. Because, although I was whole-heartedly with Dorothy and David, there were other things to consider. There was Mrs. Barden.

It finally came-a solution so simple and obvious I wondered why I hadn't thought of it before. Or, if not a solu-tion-at least an approach to one. The Reverend Williams-pastor of Mrs. Barden's church. She respected him probably more than she did anyone else in town.

So the next day I called on Reverend Williams. Stumblingly at first I tried to explain what was happening-who Dorothy was, why Mrs. Barden was so upset about David's feeling about her, why I was mixed up in it.
"I have a feeling somehow," I told him, "that David and Dorothy are symbolical of the world itself -of the chance we have now for more love and understanding than we've ever had before. And if it doesn't work out for them. I'll know in my inner heart that nothing will ever work out for any of the rest of us-the United Nations, the Four Freedoms, winning the Peaceanything!"

His wise old eyes twinkled as they looked into mine. "Well," he said, "perhaps you're right. Perhaps everyone would be better off if we could always manage to see the bigger things behind the small ones. And, as far as religion goes, we doc't have to look very far in the Bible to find guidance. The good Samaritan wasn't concerned over whether or not the wounded man in the ditch was of his own faith. Jesus didn't ask to see people's identification papers before he stretched out his hand to them-even if it did get him into trouble occasionally. St. Paul preached to Jews and Gentiles alike.
"Those precepts are good enough for me." He paused for a moment and his eyebrows went up in a gentle quirk. "What I say is-what has Centerfield got that the Founders of Christianity didn't have?"

I laughed with him. That was the wonderful thing about Reverend Williams. He could be serious in one breath and gently ironic in the next. You felt that he had an intense awareness of life about him-that he understood people. It was a comforting thought.
"We'll figure out something," he promised, "and-I was just thinkingdon't you suppose it might be a good idea to have the children's chorus sing at the Midnight Services on Christmas Eve as well as at the Christmas party? It would give them something to work especially hard for. And I'm sure I could persuade Mrs. Barden that her young friend, Miss Meyer, will be able to give them the proper training in the short time that is left."
Oh, that wonderful devious man! I felt like singing. "Reverend Williams," I chuckled, "if you ever skin your knuckles or bark your shins, just let me know. I'll come running with the iodine bottle!"

$T$HINGS seemed to move swiftly after that. In spite of his mother, David spent most of his time with Dorothy at Whit's or at my house and managed, gently, not to be available when his mother telephoned. I ran into Mrs. Barden once at the Post Office. She glared at me through narrowed eyes and said, "I just want you to know, Joyce Jordan, than I hold you responsible for whatever happens." She didn't explain further, and I didn't ask her to, and that's all she said.
In an unbelievably short time, it was Christmas Eve, and the whole town was bright and shining with Christmas trees, holly wreaths and fat red candles. 1 was sitting in front of my fireplace, trying to read a book but not being able to keep my thoughts in order, when the doorbell rang. It was David, a rather high-colored, excited David, with his hair rumpled as though he'd been running his hands through it, and his eyes burning with a desperate gleam

Come in, David," I greeted him, "I'll fix "you a Christmas egg-nog."
"I'd love it," he said "but first I've got to tell you something. I've done it, Joyce; I've told Mother. And she's fit to be tied."
"Told her what?" I asked, although I knew very well!
"That Dorothy and I are going to be married. I thought she'd hit the ceiling. She said she knew that I was up to something behind her back. She said Id disgrace the family and the whole town. She said she'd never be able to hold her head up in public again. She said lots of things-all of them bitter and cutting. So I just left the house and ran-over here. Joyce, will you go to the Services with us tonight? I don't think I can face Mother alone again for a while."
"Of course I will," I told him. "Now you sit down here in front of the fire and admire my Ghristmas tree, and I1l get your egg-nog. Take it easy. Things will work out-see if they don't."
When I came back from the kitchen he was sunk deep in the easy chair, with a worried look on his face. "This is the first time in my life we've ever had a row," he said. "I don't like hurting her, Joyce, but what else can I do?" "She just has to get used to it," I soothed him. And we talked quietly for a while as he sipped at the egg-nog. It was about nine o'clock when we heard the first thin little treble of familiar music-"Oh, little town of Bethlehem-how still we see thee lie..." "Oh, David," I exclaimed, "there they are!-Dorothy , and the children singing their carols." Quickly I ran to the window and flung it wide. And my heart seemed to expand as I looked down on the little group below. There were the youngsters-almost twenty of them, their cheeks pink with the night air, their eyes bright with excitement, their little mouths wide open as they sang those old well loved words: "Above thy deep and dreamless sleep-the silent stars go by."

And there, to one side, was Dorothy, leading them, giving them confidence by her very presence, urging them on to sweeter purer tones as they sang about the birth of the Saviour. She was snugly wrapped in an old greatcoat of mine and wore a perky little beaver bonnet that she'd made from a long unused fur collar of Whit's. Her face was lifted to my window and I turned to whisper to David, "Quick, come look. They're like a choir of angels."
He stood by my side at the window, and I could see a happy smile illumine Dorothy's face, there in the shadow.
David left shortly after that, and I sat and dreamed in front of the fire. Two hours later, he was back. "Come on," he said, "Mother's outside in the car. Time for Church."
Mrs. Barden tried hard to speak cordially to me, as we climbed into the car, but I could see that it was an effort for her. Her back was stiff as a ramrod. and her chin was high in the air. I wondered if her lips were trembling, but it was so dark I couldn't see.
The Church was beginning to fill up when we arrived, and we took our places in a pew down front. Soon everyone had settled down, and Reverend Williams came out to greet his congregation and offer a prayer. The air was sweet with the scent of pine boughs and bayberry candles, The Church choir sang, and then slowly they filed from their places, and Dorothy led her little group to the choir loft. People held their breaths. This was the first time a children's chorus had ever sung at the Midnight Service. It was something very special,
The children were ready to sing now, their eyes solemnly on Dorothy, the hymn-books in their hands, their little faces lifted and shining. The organist struck a soft note, the children took a deep breath in unison, and the high soprano voices rang out-"Hark the Herald Angels sing
It was a moment of poignant beauty, and everyone in the Church that night reacted to it.: I think, if applause had been possible in Church, the whole building would have rocked, with it. As it was, when the tender voices finished on "Glory to the new-born King," and sank away, there was a long ecstatic pause, and people looked at each other with shining eyes. The children began another hymn then, and I saw Nirs. Barden wipe a tear away.

After that hymn, the children sat down quietly, and Reverend Williams took his place in the pulpit. He looked around the congregation slowly, his eyes seeming to come to a full stop when they rested on Mrs. Barden.
"I had intended," he began, "to bring you now the usual Christmas story, as I always have at our Christmas Eve services in the past. But tonight, for reasons which seem to me very urgent, I have decided to take my text from the 25 th Chapter of Matthew, the 40th Verse: "Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."
And then, to my astonishment, and evidently to that of the congregation. he proceeded to preach the most beautiful sermon on tolerance I've ever heard in my life. I can remember only a small part of it now, but I'll never forget the feeling of hope and faith that swept over me as his beautifal words poured out.
"And when the Pharisees asked Him what was the greatest Commandmen: of all, He answered them with two. The first, He said, was Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. The second, He said, was very like the first. It was; 'Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself'

EVEREND WILLIAMS paused for

 just a moment, and his eyes sought Mrs. Barden's. "Who is your neighbor? You know in your heart who it is. It is the one you can help in an hour of need. It is the one who helps you when every other hand is withdrawn. Not just the friend next-door whom you've knowil all your life. Not just the person who sits next to you in your own Church. Not just the individual whose beliefs happen to coincide with yours. No. It is he who has mercy in his heart, or to whom you show mercy, That is your neighbor. And now, in the words of our Lord, our gentle Saviour who gave his very life that we might be saved,-Go, and do thou likewise',"He ended his sermon and began the Benediction. Mrs. Barden sat as though stunned. I don't know what thoughts were going through her mind, but her head was bowed. Slowly, she slipped a handkerchief from her bag and wiped her eyes. Lifting her head, she looked toward the choir loft where Dorothy sat with the little ones. And slowly she turned her head to David: Finally. with a smile of utter acceptance, she took his hand and pressed it. She listened quietly and lovingly while Dorothy led the children's chorus in the final hymn of the evening.

I don't feel that there's much to say. now that this story is told. It says enough of itself. But III always know that that Christmas Eve, I saw a miracle being performed-a miracle of love and generosity and understanding. And, knowing that it happened ance. I'll always have faith that it can happen again-wherever people stop to think. Peace on earth-good will toward men. That's what we all want. And that's what we can have-if we will only love one another.

Lum 'n' Abner Mind Somebody Else's Business

I never want to hear about the war again-it was enough to last me for two lifetimes." His voice thickened. "And, most of all, I want to quit remembering those empty beds in the barracks after a mission." He turned his head away for a moment, and his throat worked oddly.
"We know what you mean, Harry," said Lum softly, "and I can't say as we blame you. Well, the mill will likely be glad to have you back. They been short handed ever since the war started. You ought to be able to get a right good job over there now."
"My old job is good enough. In fact, it's got to be the old job or none at all. I want it to be like it was only yesterday that I left."
"But, Jimineties, Harry," objected Abner, "your old job didn't amount to a row o' pins. Pushin' carts and stuff around! Anybody could do that. It was all right for a young kid just startin' out, but you been gone four years now and you're growed up. You oughta get somethin' better."

ARRY'S jaw tightened, and the lines that appeared in his young face gave him a strangely old and weary look. "It's those four years I want to forget about," he said sharply. "I want to wipe 'em right out. And the only way I can do it is to pretend they never happened. I want to pick up at the mill right where I left off-as though there hadn't been any time in between. Can't you understand that?"

Lum motioned Abner to be quiet and hurriedly cut in. "We understand, Harry. Course you'll probably find there've been some changes out at the mill-but everybody's got to do things their own way. And you sure earned your right to do things your way for a while."
Harry relaxed. "Thanks, fellas. And -let's change the subject. What's been going on down here lately?"

Abner looked at Lum, and Lum nodded imperceptibly. "Well,", he began cautiously, "Annie Miller's got a new baby. I hear it's takin' to chewin' on its thumb all the time, but likely it'll get over that. Arrd Squire Skimp's finally puttin' some new shingles on his roof. And Mose Moots is usin' some new-fangled kind of bay-rum a drummer sold him a few weeks back. Gettin' so everybody has a haircut these days comes out smellin' like Granny Masters' lilac bush. What else, Lum?"

Harry was smiling delightedly now, so Lum joined in. "The County put in a new bridge over the Mill River and now there ain't no place for the kids to sit when they go fishin'. They're mighty upset about it. Oh yes, the young Sumner boy got a good job out in Denver, so the Sumners had an auction couple weeks ago and moved up to Denver, lock, stock an' barrel."
"Yeah," interrupted Abner eagerly. "And we got a bunch of new books for the library from the auction, Maybe you'd like to read one of 'em, Harrylooks like a humdinger to me-called 'Sink or Swim'. Brand new author feller, too. Lum says he's pretty good." He held the book out to Harry, who looked at it and tucked it under his arm, his eyes twinkling.
"It sure is good to be back," he said. "And now I guess I better be shoving off. Got to get out to the mill and see about my job and then find out if my old work clothes still fit. Be seeing you."
He opened the door. Lum and Abner said goodbye and watched him as he closed it softly behind him and walked off,

With Harry a safe distance away, Abner shook his head and sighed. "What do you s'pose is eatin' on him?"

Lum shrugged his shoulders. "Seems plain enough," he answered "He just got too much of the war and now he wants to forget it. Can't blame him for that, can you?"
Abner sighed again. "I guess not. But he's goin' to have his troubles. Folks are goin' to want him to tell about all those German planes he shot down, and they ain't goin to understand about him goin' back to work at the mill in his old job. Gee whilikers, Lum, that boy's a hero! He's been writ up in the newspapers. They said he was an Ace. He was the leader of his whole squadron. He can't just throw all that in the junk heap and go back to bein' a mill-hand."
"Well, that's what he's plannin' on," said Lum, "and I guess folks'll have to take it, whether they understand it or not." Then his eyes narrowed and he looked at Abner speculatively. "Say, Abner, ain't Betty Holden workin' up to the mill now?"
"Yeah," said Abner, "she's doin' secretary work for the manager. What's that go to do with it?" Suddenly his face lighted up. "Say, that's right, Lum. Harry used to be sweet on her, didn't he? D'you reckon she'll be able to talk some sense into him?"

Lum got out the inventory book again. "You never can tell," he said.
DUT the reports that came into the 1) Jot 'Em Down Store And Library during the next few weeks about Harry Johnson weren't any too good. Folks said he'd gone queer-like. They said he got a blank look on his face when they talked to him, and wouldn't answer questions. They said he'd lost all his ambition and would probably end up as nothing but an unskilled millhand till the day he died. They said they were beginning not to respect him any more.

One day Betty Holden came in for a library book. There wasn't anybody else in the store, so Lum edged over and started talking to her.
"How're things out to the mill, Betty?" he asked casually.
"Pretty good, Mr. Edwards," she replied. "We've still got so many orders we can't fill them, but we're doing the best we can."
"I hear young Harry Johnson got back his old job."
"Yes," she said, and slid a look at him out of the corner of her eyes.
"How's he makin' out?"
Her pert little nose twitched ever so slightly. "I really wouldn't know, Mr, Edwards."

Lum had expected something like this. "Now, Betty, you don't need to get on your high horse with me. I've known you ever since you were kneehigh to a grass-hopper. And I know how you and Harry used to feel about each other before the war. Betty, I'm worried about that boy. Both Abner and me are worried. I thought you might be able to help us figure out what to do about him."

She looked straight at him then, and the pert little nose wasn't twitching

now. Instead, the corners of her mouth had turned down despondently and a quick moisture gleamed in her eyes. "Oh, Mr. Edwards," she said, "I wish I knew what the matter was. He hasn't been out to our house even once since he got back. I tried to ask him about it one day-jokingly, you knowand he said that Id gone up in the world so much, being Mr. Ellis' secretary and all, that I was too good for a mill-hand any more-that I'd changed so much he'd never catch up with me."
"Well, this is the way we figured it, Betty," said Lum slowly. "He wanted things to be just exactly the way they were before he went away. He thinks he can be the same person he was four years ago, and I guess it bothers him because other people ain't exactly the same. He's tryin' so hard to forget those four years that he don't want to admit to himself that other people have been livin' right on through them. He's kinda like that old king in the fairy story that tried to hold back the tide just by holdin' up his hand."

IGUESS so," Betty nodded miserably. "It's sort of like that combat fatigue you read about in the papers all the time. Lots of times they don't even know they've got it. It just gives them peculiar ideas, and they think it's all very reasonable. I think the worst of it all is A1 Middleton."
"What about Al Middleton?"
"Well, he's just back from overseas, too, you know, and he's foreman at the mill now. He was a Corporal in the Infantry, and according to him the Infantry didn't think much of the Air Force-especially Air Force officers. He says they were a bunch of 'Glamor Boys'. Anyway, be makes fun of Harry all the time, and pushes him around every chance he gets. He says Harry may have been a fighter pilot and a Major and all that, but the war's over and now he's back where he be-longs-working in a mill as a daylaborer. And the horrible thing about it is that Harry seems to agree with him. He never talks back. He just shrugs his shoulders and does everything Al tells him to."

She choked back a sob at this. "It just makes me kind of sick to my stomach, Mr. Edwards-it really does. Harry is a lot smarter than Al will ever be. But you'd never know it out at the mill these days. He's like a Zombie, that's what he's like-a Zombie!"
Lum patted her on the shoulder sympathetically. "I can see how it'd be kinda hard,for you, Betty. But I don't think we can do much about it for a while. Just wait and see what happens. What is it they say in the Army - 'sweat it out"?"

After Betty had gone. Lum sat down and tried to figure it out, but the more he thought, the more mixed-up the whole thing got. It just didn't make sense. There was Harry-as bright a boy as Pine Ridge had ever furned out. The Army had recognized that, and had promoted him as fast as they could -had given him a lot of responsibility and a big job to do. And then there was Al Middleton. He'd never been very long on brains or ability. He was no master mind, and evidently the Army had recognized that, too. He hadn't gotten any farther than Corporal.

But now, suddenly, Al was Harry's boss and was gloating over it. And Harry accepted the whole thing as right and natural. Just because Al had quit school in the eighth grade and had gone to work in the mill instead of going on to High School, he had reached a higher position there than Harry could in the short time he had put in at the mill. But did that make At smarter or more able than Harry, just because he had a better job? Lum didn't think so.

Harry was a better man than A1 Middleton, any day in the week. He'd bet his right arm on that. But if Harry didn't think so, how could it ever be proved? Lum sighed, and went to get the broom to sweep off the front sidewalk. Folks sure could get their lives mixed up, he decided.

He didn't have any occasion to change his mind about that, either, during the next few weeks. From all he and Ab ner could find out, Harry was still behaving just the way he had when he'd first come home-going to work doggedly every day, doing his job-no more and no less-and taking orders from AI, no matter how insulting or inefficient those orders might seem. Everybody in town was beginning to accept the fact that the Army had ruined Harry. Everybody but Betty and the proprietors of the Jot 'Em Down Store And Library.
Harry dropped in at the store now and then-more as a matter of habit than anything else-and Lum and Abner tried to get him to talk, to bolster up his lost pride a little. It usually didn't work out too well.
"How about them German pilots?" Abner would ask. "Were they as good as everybody says they were?"
[JUT Harry would wave a deprecatory 0 hand. "The old Eagle Squadron boys had it tough in the early days, but by the time I got over there, we outnumbered 'em-ten to one sometimes. We had American production backing us up. And there's no glory in just plain weight of numbers."
"The Army must have thought there was some glory to what you did," Abner would suggest cautiously, "or they wouldn't have given you all those medals and a whole squadron to lead."

But Harry wouldn't accept that. "It was a different world over there. Everything was different-and abnormal. It wasn't life. It was a bad dream. And the Army was built to fit. Sure-I was a big shot-a big shot in a nightmare. So what does that make me now? The nightmare's over. I'm awake again and it's the next morning and I'm right back where I started. I'm just plain Harry Johnson, a mill-hand in Pine Ridge, Arkansas. And nothing that's happened in that bad dream can change it. Besides, 1 don't want to think about it any more."
So Lum and Abner would lapse into unhappy silence and pretty soon Harry would say it was time for him to go, and they wouldn't see him again for a long time.

Then the spring rains started, and all of Pine Rídge was a sodden dispirited place where people stayed indoors as much as they could, and only ventured out when they had to, in raincoats and umbrellas and rubber boots. It had been a dry year so far, and it seemed as though the weather were trying to balance itself with a continuous downpour. The Mill River began to rise, and the lower road-the old dirt road that wound through the back country-was washed out in two places.

Harry came stomping into the store one evening, shaking the rain from his hat and mopping his dripping face with an already wet handkerchief. "Gosh," he said, "I sure hope this lets up pretty soon. The river's up another foot tonight. Sixteen more inches and it'll be up to the 1927 level."
"How's the dam holding?" asked Lum. The dam was the one built by the mill people years ago, to furnish the power for their operations. In case of flood it was the one thing Pine Ridge had to fear-the lake formed by the mill dam would practically wipe out the town if the dam were to burst. The town had long stopped worrying about that, though. The dam never had burst, and in the usual human way, people figured that since it never had it never would. The rain, to the people of Pine Ridge, was just a nuisance that would stop eventually. Almost no one was giving a thought to the dam and what would happen if it burst.
Harry's next words, then, were a little startling. "The dam seems to be all right," he said, "but I don't know how much more pressure it'll stand. The thing that worries me is the machinery the mill has set up to divert the water in case of emergency. You know-the breakwater farther up the river where that other channel cuts in? They diverted the water years ago into its present channel, to get enough power for the mill. But the breakwater can be lifted and the water rediverted if necessary, right from the engine room at the mill

Well, then," cut in Lum, "there's nothing to worry about. I didn't even know about changin' the river bed."
"There wouldn't be anything to worry about," Harry told him, "except that I took a look at the engine room today, and I've never seen a junkier mess of old rusted machinery in my life. It's never been used, of course, and I guess the mill people figured it'd never have to be used. They've just let it go and neglected it until now I doubt if it could be started with a sledge-hammer."
"Did you report it?" asked Abner.
"All the bosses are up in Chicago at a convention or something," said Harry. "Al Middleton's in charge. I told him, but he doesn't like me much anyway, and he told me to mind my own business." He shrugged. "Well, at least I told him, so it's not my responsibility any more. And maybe it'll quit raining before morning anyway."
But the next morning it was still raining, and Lum and Abner heard to their alarm that the river had risen another eleven inches. That afternoon Betty Holden telephoned to them. Her voice was tight with panic as she told Lum she had phoned the store because she didn't know where else to turn. Could they come out right away, she asked. She'd feel better if they were there. She had wired to the mill superintendent and manager in Chicago, but the weather was so bad they wouldn't be able to fly, and it would take too long for them to get back to Pine Ridge in time by train. Al Middleton didn't seem to know what to do about the dam, and Harry wouldn't say a word to her.
Lum said they'd be right out. They locked the store, putting up a sign that it would be closed until they returned, climbed into their old car, and drove through the mud and rain to the mill.

The mill was in a turmoil when they arrived. Al Middleton had every man in the place loading sand-bags on top of the dam and along the sides. His face was perspiring and his voice was hoarse as he urged them on. "Can't talk to you now," he roared at Lum and Abner as they approached him, "too busy." So they backed away and looked for Harry. They found him coming in from a trip to the dam, his wet shirt sticking to his shoulders, his face grimy from sand and mud and rain.
"Harry," called Lum as he walked toward them, "isn't it about time somethin' was done about that engine room?"
Betty had joined them and listened anxiously as Harry replied, "It sure is. Those sand-bags are just a drop in the bucket. They won't hold the dam two minutes when the water gets up, six inches higher-and it's rising fast.
"Well" said Abner, "how about the engine room?"
"There's the boss over there," said Harry grimly, waving toward Al.
"Please, Harry," pleaded Betty, "if that dam bursts, the whole town will be flooded."

IIARRY just jerked his thumb in A1 Middleton's direction.
"Maybe we better try talkin' to him again," suggested Lum, and they all walked over to Al. "Listen, Middleton," began Lum, "Harry says the only way to save the dam is to divert
But Al interrupted him. "Can't you see I'm busy?" he shouted. "The only thing we can do is get more sand-bags out there. And we can do that quicker without you buttin' in."
"It won't do any good, $\mathrm{Al}^{\prime}$ " said Harry quietly. "Six more inches and that dam's a goner-sand-bags or no sand-bags.
"I told you once to mind your own business," yelled A1.
"But if that machinery could be made to work . . " insisted Harry.

A thick vein in Al's forehead stood out as he turned to Harry. "Who's the boss here, you or me?" he demanded hoarsely "You learned to obey orders in the Army, didn't you, you stuffed shirt? Well, obey them. Get on back to "that pile of sand-bags." He turned away from them, and began to shout once more to the men.

Harry's jaw set and his lips tightened, but he didn't make a move, and there was a long moment of silence. Then in a small voice, Betty spoke.
"It's not the mill I'm worried about. It's the town-all those people who live down there-the little children and the old people and the mothers and fathers. That water getting ready to break down the dam is sort of like the Germans were when the war started-getting ready to break out and drown all the little innocent people who couldn't get out of their way . . . Isn't there any way to stop it?"
"The Allies stopped the Germans," suggested Abner, almost as though he were saying it to himself, "and scems to me I've heard tell that when a Commander wasn't big enough for his job, he got replaced by somebody else. Ain't that right. Harry?"

Harry looked at each one in turn, and he looked longest at Betty. Then he shook his head violently, as if to clear it. "Okay," he said finaliy, "I guess you're right-all of you." Then, straightening his shoulders and taking a deep breath, he strode over to AI.

Catching him by the shoulder, he spun him around. "Pull your rip-cord, Middleton," he said softly, "this is MayDay for you." With that, he hit AI squarely on the chin, with a blow that seemed to send a quiver all through the man's body. Al's head snapped back, and he slumped soundless to the floor. Harry looked wonderingly at his fist.
"Attaboy, Harry," Lum told him quietly, "now all you got to do is get that machinery working."

Harry flashed him a quick smile. Picking out a nearby bench, he walked over and jumped up on it. Then be raised his voice and shouted to the men.
"Listen, fellows," he said when he'd gotten their attention. "There's only one way to keep the dam from bursting, and that's to divert the river into its old bed, a mile upstream. There's machinery in the engine room right here to do it with. It's in bad shape and maybe it won't work, but we ve got about half an hour to try it. What do you say?
There was a stunned silence. Then a man called out, "What's Middleton say about it?"
"Middleton isn't saying a word," Harry shouted back grimly. "I just knocked him out."
More silence. Then came a long, low whistle from the back of the big room, and somebody laughed. That broke the tension. "Okay, Harry," came a voice, "what do we do first?"
Harry's eyes gleamed and bright color rose into his face. Briskly he issued his orders, and quickly the men dispersed under his directions.

The engine room was the whole problem, of course, but the men who followed Harry into it knew their business. Wordlessly they settled to their task of cleaning, oiling, filing, and scraping away the years accumulation of dirt, grease and rust. Harry himself went to work adjusting the delicate starting mechanism that was to set off the heavier machinery. He found that the principle it operated on wasn't much different from that used in automobile or airplane engines.

TWENTY minutes passed before Harry straightened up. Lum and Abner, who stood with Betty by the wall, out of the way of the workmen, could see the tension in his face.
"Tve done everything I can to it," he said to the others. "You all set?" The men nodded in turn, making final adjustments and last-minute polishes at the now gleaming machines.
"Let's try her, then." said Harry, and grinned palely as he held up two crossed fingers. The men stood back and held their breaths as Harry pushed a button. Nothing happened. He reached over and twisted a wire, fastening it more securely. Then he pushed the button again. A sudden whir rang out in the hushed room. Then, almost as though a giant were waking up after years of death-like sleep, the engines shuddered and came to life. There was a sputter and then a hum. They were working!
"The breakwater should be lifting right now," said Harry breathlessly, and watched a gauge that began to move slowly in the central engine. When the needle pointed straight up in the air, he pushed a lever and the engines stopped. Everybody just stood and waited, then. If it were a success, the river should now be pouring into its old bed-to lose itself harmlessly below the town and eventually join the larger river of which it was a tributary.

Suddenly there was a shout from the outer room. A man stationed out on the dam had reported that the water was going down. Har:y drooped and sat down tiredly on a bench. It was all over. That desperate last-minute effort had worked. The dam was not going to give way, and the town was saved. He could only grin faintly at the men as they crowded around him to shake his hand and thump him on the back. And Abner was the only one who noticed that his eyes sought out Betty's, as she stood against the wall. swallowing hard.

The next day, with the irony of nature, the rain stopped pouring down, and the sun came out to shine dimly on Pine Ridge, Life took up its normal comings and goings, and Lum got out his inventory book again to check on the store's stocks. A week had gone by and they hadn't seen or heard anything of Harry. And then Betty came in for a library book. Lum stopped inventorying and went over to talk to her.
"How're things going up at the mill?" he asked guardedly, and Betty smiled delightedly at him.

"II"ELL," she began with the fond air of a doting mother about to distribute lollipops, "Mr. Ellis and the others got back from Chicago, and of course they had to have a full report about what happened. So they called Harry in. And you should have seen him while he was talking to them. He was just Jike a different person-sort of brisk and sure of himself. He wasn't a bit afraid of them-or subservient-or anything. He just told them what had to be done under the circumstances and how he did it. It must have been just like when he was a fighter pilot, reporting back to his Colonel after a mission."
"So what'd they say?" asked Abner.
"Well, first they asked him all about himself, and he answered all their questions, without hedging a bit or getting embarrassed like he used to when people asked him things. And then they offered him Al Middleton's job. But he wouldn't take it!"
"He wouldn't take it?" gasped Lum.
"No. He said he didn't think he'd like being a foreman. He said he had other things in mind. Besides, he told them that Al was a good foreman. Al's only trouble during the flood was that he was mad at Harry and that momentarily affected his judgment."
"Well, if that don't beat the bugs a-fightin'," breathed Lum. "Did he tell 'em what other things he had in mind?"
"Yes, he did," said Betty, and her eyes sparkled. "He told them he'd gotten interested in flood control. He said the control measures they had at the mill, if they hadn't been allowed to get into such bad shape, were about the best things he'd ever heard of. They liked that, I can tell you! And he said he'd like to study flood control and then work into some kind of job having to do with it."
"What'd they have to say about that?" asked Abner eagerly.
"They thought it was fine," said Betty. "They told him they'd find out all there was to find out about it and help him get started. And then when he got going, they said they'd recommend him to a group of engineers or something that advise a whole lot of different mills about their various prob-lems-maintenance, emergency controls and that kind of thing. They said it was a great field for a young man and they were delighted that one of their own men was going into it. They will help him, too, like they said they would. Mr. Ellis has got a lot of influence."

'Well, by Grannies," said Lum, 'that's about the best news I've heard in a coon's age. I guess that flood was the 'something' that had to happen to Harry, eh, Betty?
"I guess so," said Betty, and then her face dropped a little, "But he still hasn't been over to our house yet."
"Say," broke in Abner out of a deep thought, "I tell you what-we ought to have a kind of a celebration."
"A celebration?" asked Lum in surprise.

Sure," said Abner. "For Harry. We still got some cider left from last fall. We can throw a party.'
"Who'll we ask?" inquired Lum a little doubtfully.
"Well--Harry, and-uh-uh-and-Betty-and,-shucks, that's all we need. Just us four. We'll have a whackin' good time."
"I think maybe you got somethin' there, Abner," said Lum, looking sideways at Betty. "All right with you, Betty?"
"Why, yes, Mr. Edwards., That'd be fine, I guess. When'll it be?"
"What's the matter with tomorrow night?" asked Abner triumphantly, and they decided then and there that tomorrow night would be fine.

It was a whackin' good party, too, just as Abner had said it would be. Betty was looking her very prettiest, in a pink outfit that almost matched the color in her cheeks, and Harry's shoulders were straighter and his head higher than even before he'd gone away to war. Lum had found an old victrola, and they had music with their cider.

About half way through the evening, Harry jumped to his feet and held up his hand. "I've got an announcement to make," he said, his eyes sparkling. And then he turned to Betty. "I didn't really intend to say this in public," he grinned, "but I can't think of any better audience. The thing is, I've been a big jerk and a bigger sap, but I think I've finally got my feet on the ground again, and it looks as though things are going to go all right from now on. What I wanted to say was . . "he hesitated for just a fraction of a second, and then blurted it out, "Betty, will you marry me?"
They all turned to look at Betty. Her eyes dropped in confusion, and then they opened wide and her chin came up. She faced Harry and said firmly, "What else do you think I've been waiting for all these years?"
Abner whooped, and Lum put another record on the victrola. Harry walked over to where Betty was sitting and bowed deeply. "May I have the honor of this next dance?" he asked gravely.

Just as gravely, she rose and walked into his arms. They danced around the room twice without a word before they stopped, with their arms around each other, and proceeded to forget about the music, about Lum and Abner, about everything else in the world except each other.

Two minutes later, by the Jot 'Em Down Store and Library clock, they sat down again and the party went on. But this time the talk was no longer about what had happened before-it was all about what was going to happen from now on. And Lum and Abner couldn't get a word in edgewise.
Then, so suddenly that it startled all of them, the front door banged open, and Al Middleton strode in. As they stared at him speechlessly, he walked over to Harry and held out his hand. Harry rose to his feet, looked at Al for a long moment, and then accepted the hand and shook it heartily.

Al's set face broke into a big smile as he said, "I was hoping you'd take it like that, Johnson. I got some apologizin' to do, and I think now's the time to do it. I just want to say that maybe the Army wasn't as wet as I been sayin' it was. I guess maybe you deserved your Major's leaves and them medals. And I guess maybe they stretched a point to even give me stripes."

Harry grinned at him, and Lum came forward with a glass of cider and a plate of cheese and crackers. Al sat down on an upturned orange crate and accepted them humbly.
"Just the same," he said, "I figure that if I keep my nose clean, and work a little harder mindin' my own business, and act like a grown man instead of like a spoiled kid, maybe I'll even work up to Sergeant's stripes some day. And when that happens, I'd like to be in your Squadron, Harry!"

Harry thumped him on the back, and Lum put another record on the victrola. Abner blew his nose loudly on a big red and white bandanna handkerchief. The Jot 'Em Down Store and Library was once again at peace with the world.

Cover Girl

But throughout her childhood and young girlhood Mercedes always had a home, and it was always Joliet. She went to a convent for most of those years, and then attended Mundelein University in Chicago. While she was a sophomore there she idly auditioned with NBC. Two days later the college year ended and she happily left for a long vacation in Bermuda. She got as far as New York before outraged NBC executives tracked he: down and dragged ", her to a microphone. "Your audition," they told her, "was highly successful. From now on you're working for us!" That was nine years ago, and she hasn't had a single vacation since. And very few homes, since she lived in Hollywood and New York duxing the worst part of the housing problem.

SHE'S called "Mercy" by her friends, 5 and shows none of it in expressing her opinions. She flatly despises gossip, gin rummy, bridge, indifference, and people who waste time. She also loathes harsh voices, corsages, and books wrapped in stores. Gold fish, she's convinced, are bad luck.

But she's equally strong-flavored in hēr Itkes-which include people with imagination, the late President Roosevelt, and such writers as Dostoievsky, Thomas Wolfe, Eugene O'Neill, Ibsen, and Shakespeare. She loves books and has collected 4,000 to prove it. She also loves spare-ribs at midnight, Chinese food any time, and playing the piano all the time. But more than anything else she loves acting. She began loving aeting when she was five and first recited a poem at a church bazaar. When the audience applauded, she stepped forward and began reciting the poem over again-and wept when she was stopped!
What she doesn't love at all is her own taste in clothes. Not that her shopping system isn't a boon to her acquaintances. She drifts through a store, saying "I'll take it" toward anything that strikes her fancy, and drifts out again laden with purchases. Nothing is ever tried on until she gets home -with the result that half of her clothes wind up on her friends, regardless of price.

You don't beliove this? Well, recently she bought a platina fox coat. She loved it dearly until she got it out of the store. Then her passion waned. She threw it in the back of her closet until she ran into a friend wearing a gay pink hat. Mercedes' eyes lit up. "Want to swap?" she demanded. "I'11 give you my platina coat for that hat!"
She meant it, too. Only the friend's unnatural honesty spoiled the deal. And some day that coat will walk off on some one Mercedes runs into!

For the most part, Mercedes turns up for rehearsals and broadcasts in clothes that are well- and strictly-tailored. Man-tailored suits that show off her small, trim figure to great advantage; plain shirts; no stockings when the weather is at all warm. And, whenever she can get away with it-no hat! She dresses, in a word, for comfort.

But that gives you a very neat idea of Mercedes, the girl who rehearses while she drives, who doesn't have a home-but who nevertheless manages to be one of the best actresses on the airwaves!

Room With View

Great Dane, Thor, had eaten a big hole out of it! Meanwhile, I had to send down to Mexico for a second serape, so as not to disappoint my first "client"!

But to tell you about how he proposed to me: this happened a couple of weeks after my return from Mexico. We had started taking Spanish lessons together down in Greenwich Village, and after one of our lessons we dropped into a little restaurant there for dinner. I remember there was a lot of commotion in the restaurant when we went in, with three policemen present-because four people had just walked out without paying their bill.

Anyway, we sat down and ordered. 1 can even remember what we orderedtomato soup, steak, salad, coffee. We both began eating our soup hungrily. In the middle of it, Les suddenly looked up and said very quickly, "Would you like to marry me?'

WAS stunned. I said, "Are you kidding?"
"No," said he, hastily swallowing another mouthful of soup.
"My answer is-yes," I said then.
He said, in a stricken tone, "Good heavens!" And then both of us felt stricken. Because of our previous sad marital experiences, we were in terror of matrimony. But stricken or not, we wanted to go through with it. "We'll have to find a big apartment," we told each other in hollow tones. And that was the romantic way we plighted our troth!

That was September 26, 1945. We began apartment-hunting like mad. We hunted through October and November and part of December, with no luck. Then we decided that it was better to be married in one room than not at all. We chose my apartment as our home because my one room was bigger than his one room . ., and we were finally married at two o'clock one afternoon early last December, at the Park Avenue Methodist-Episcopal Church. Reverend Haas officiated, and fifty of our friends were there-including Mary, my maid.

The wedding itself was lovely in many respects-and slightly zany in others! In the first place, Les and I didn't look our best by any means. Each of us had had en accident just before the ceremony.

I arrived twenty minutes late, wearing a custom-made chocolate brown silk dress. It was short, with a plunging neckline-the kind Les likes best on me; and it was dark brown to match his suit. Since I'd hardly ever worn brown before, I only owned a very old and seedy pair of brown oxfords; and Id ordered a stunning pair of high heeled brown pumps for the wedding-which didn't appear in time!

So I arrived in a brand-new sophisticated dress . . , and my run-down old brown oxfords. Meanwhile, I noticed that Les seemed a little ill at ease too. Later I found out why. In his nervousness just before the ceremony, he'd stepped into the men's room for a glass of water-and spilled it right down the front of his trousers! Nobody noticed the water stain, I think, because of the darkness of his suit; but naturally be was miserably conscious of it.

Otherwise everything went off beautifully. Carl Bixby, Life Can Be Beautiful writer, gave me away, and my friend and fellow actress Kathleen Niday was my attendant. Actor Arthur Kohl was Les's best man. Our friend Gene Parazzo played the organ, and among the wedding guests were so many radio actors that when a little four-year-old boy began applauding by mistake, when the ceremony was ovex, they all had to catch themselves to keep from applauding too! And Les told me later he almost took a bow!

But if there was any lack of dignity in our wedding, my ring made up for it, Les designed it himself, and it is so lovely it is beyond description. But I'11 try. It's a platinum band half an inch wide, with a coronet design worked into the metal. Thirty square-cut diamonds edge the top and bottom of the band, and set among the coronets are six emeralds-my favorite stone, and also $m y$ birthstone.

However, back to the church-which we left almost at once in order to rush to Les's apartment. He hadn't finished packing yet, and I helped him. Then we were finally off on our honeymoon.

We had five days of it. We stayed at a little Inn in Goshen, New York. The famous trotting races are held there in the summer, but in the winter it is utterly quiet-except for honeymooners. We discovered that everyone in the Inn was honeymooning. We also discovered that the Inn had strict rules -breakfast at nine in the morning, lunch at twelve, and if you were late you went hungry.

But we didn't much care about the rules. We had brought champagne and caviar with us, which we kept chilled on the snowy window sill outside our room. We went for long hikes through the white countryside, and took pictures, and once we climbed Bear Mountain. But of course even ous honeymoon was a little confused

We arrived on a Tuesday, and Thursday we had to rush back into New York to move Les out of his apartment and into mine. That took us about eight hours. Then we came straight back to our little Inn, and stayed until Sunday when Les had to appear on The Thin Man in New York. And that definitely ended our five-day honeymoon and started us off as Mr. and Mrs. Les Tremayne, in my apartment, in Manhattan.

There's so much to say about Mr, and Mrs. Les Tremayne's life together that I don't know where to start. There are Les's interests-hobbies, you might call them-that have almost crowded us out of house and home. He is a sculptor, and a good one. He makes maskstragedy and comedy masks, devil masks, all kinds. He's an excellent amateur photographer, and has won prizes for his Leica shots; and also he owns (and uses) two motion picture camerasan 8 -millimeter, and a 16 . He also is an enthusiastic collector of classical music, with thousands of records by this time.

After hearing all this, you won't be surprised to learn that taking Les into my home meant taking a ton of furniture and equipment too! I had to store my grand piano, my sofa and my dressing room set to make room for his twin beds, Capehart, dropleaf table, record cabinets, and-finally-his enormous specially-built wardrobe which houses his clothes, his motion picture projectors, and his hundreds of camera slides and rolls of film!

You can imagine the turmoit in which we live. You can also imagine how hard we are looking for a larger apart-ment-since Les now has in storage three rooms of furniture, a complete dark room, all of his sculpture equipment, fifteen hundred books, and fourteen pieces of electric-driven machinery for a wood shop! And I have five rooms of furniture stored, including my piano and all my silver, china, and linens.
Naturally, we can't entertain at home which breaks my heart because I love giving formal dinners. We let only Mother come to share our hodge-podge way of eating. All our other friends we entertain at restaurants, out of necessity. And I must say that between us we have a big assortment of friends. Among, them are Fibber MeGee and Molly, Perry Como, Andy Russell, Judith Anderson, Johnny Johnston, Don Ameche, Bob and Bing Crosby, Helen Hayes, Ramon Navarro, Ed Sullivan, Shirley Booth-and sculptors like Gutson Borglum and Loredo Taft.

SIDE from entertaining, we've only had one minor problem since we married: what to do with our two wonderful dogs, since my terrier and his Great Dane don't get along with each other the way Les and I do. We solved that by alternating their visits with useach dog stays in the kennel two months, while the other lives with us.

But this puzzle too will be answered when we find a big apartment. I hope nothing else about our lives will change ... especially our habit of present-giving, which happens unexpectedly and all the time. For instance, I mentioned to Les that I needed a new compact. So for the Fourth of July he bought me the most magnificent gold combina-tion-of-everything you can imagine-a compact, cigarette case, lipstick container and rouge box all in one, It's initialed "A. R. T."

As far as my clothes go, Les has made me over. I used to wear suits a great deal; now fourteen of them gather dust in my closet because he doesn't like them. Instead I wear custom-made dresses, with $V$ necklines, and several of them in colorful prints. Also I wear high heeled ankle-strap shoes to please him. And how I ever shopped alone, 1 don't know; now Les goes with me to the dressmaker's, and has more ideas a minute than I had in months!

But most of the time I'm showing off my clothes only to Les, because we have so little time left over from our careers. Our favorite time together is when the rest of the city is going to sleep-that's when we get started. You see, Les eats at least six meals a day, and his favorite one comes at midnight. Every mid night we raid the ice-box for a hug cold dinner-cold meats, milk, cake fruit, cheese, sandwiches.

Then we get into our twin beds-an read aloud to each ather until four i the morning! We've read endlessly and everything Kipling, Shakespeare, "Alice in Wonderland," Defoe's "Journal of the Plague Year," Browning's"poems. Right now we're reading Kravchenko's "I Chose Freedom." And some nights (just to make sure we never get any sleep!) we vary readin aloud with a three-hour game of Guggenheim.

Yes, except for the housing problem Mr , and Mrs, Les Tremayne love the lif they lead!

LIVING IN YOLR HEART

Dear Papa David:

For many years I was a nurse in a sanatorium for tubercular patients. It was an institution run by the state and most of the patients were not only worried by their disease but also greatly troubled by the financial cares of their families. One of my patients had been hospitalized for twelve years and there was no hope for any cure. In the side rooms off the ward two young boys were dying, nice young boys who didn't ask much of life except life itself, and were not going to get it. Day after day seeing the sorrow of most and the hopelessness of many I became so depressed I decided to give up nursing.
"I can't bear it," I thought. "All their misery had become mine." I felt like crying both in the hospital and out of it.
Then one day one of my nicest patients left his dinner untouched and kept his face pressed against his pillow for hours. At three o'clock when I went to take his temperature I said, "Maybe it isn't as bad as you think." I had found out that the doctor had advised a rib operation called a thoracoplasty in which pieces of the ribs are removed to collapse the diseased lung. It was bad enough.

The patient looked at me and there was so much misery in his face I nearly choked.
"Think I want to be a cripple like Bill and Steve?" Tommy asked bitterly. Bill and Steve had gone through with the operation and they did look quite deformed.
"But they are only two out of hundreds," I reminded Tommy. Then I named others, since discharged from the institution who had only a slight disfiguration.

Tommy didn't answer. He had a body like Apollo and to look at him it seemed incredible that one lung was so badly infected as to endanger his life.
"Besides, Tommy," I went on, "aren't we all cripples? I have a tin ear and a rheumatic heart. You know what they call people with rheumatic hearts? Cardiac cripples. There are many things we can't do." I lowered my voice. "Take Benny across the way from you. Good old punch drunk Benny. The tough little relic from the ring. He's certainly some kind of mental cripple, isn't he? And Dr. Burns with his arthritis, Notice his fingers. Getting out of shape. Not the nice tools they once were. Crippled fingers. You, see, Tommy? If you notice you'll find out that nearly every adult is some kind of cripple. After the 'op' you won't look nice in a swim suit but with your clothes on you'll be as handsome as ever."

It was the first time I had realized myself that most of us are given some kind of a handicap. The thought helped

Tommy too. He decided to accept the operation and seemed cheerful about it. Which gave me an idea. Life is life no matter where you live it, even in a hospital, and most of our living is done right inside our heads. From then on instead of brooding over misfortunes I couldn't help I'd scratch up ideas and thoughts for my patients, things that would make the living they did inside their heads a happier living.

BETTER WIFE, BETTER HOME

Dear Papa David:
Irvin and I were married in November 1941 and I was terribly jealous with no cause to be at all. I was eighteen then and for a year I realize now that I made life almost unbearable for him. In December 1942, Irvin was drafted into the army.

I had already filed for a divorce and it became final in February-just a month before Irvin was sent overseas to Europe.

I missed him after I knew he was no longer within traveling distance. We didn't write to each other but since his mother lived close, I always knew where he was.

My daughter, Patty, was born in May 1943 and shortly afterward my mother and I moved to a distant town. There I secured a job clerking in a store which took most of my time.

Irvin's mother wrote mother and asked her to bring Patty to see her. It was on that visit that she told my mother that Irvin was missing in action over Germany, In his last letter to her, he asked his mother to come to see me and write to him and tell him how I looked and if I had changed any. The letter she wrote about me returned to her however as did all those she wrote afterward. And then came the telegram declaring him officially dead.

Papa David, you can never know what I went through when his mother came to see me and told me. She also let me read the letters he had written and he mentioned me in nearly everyone and also Patty.

And as is often the case, I realized how much I loved Irvin-but only too late. I tried to make it up to Patty and gave her everything money could buy. I worked constantly and bought a small home and a second-hand car.

You can imagine how I lived again when his mother came to see me and told me that Irvin was coming home! That was in March 1945 and in June he came. He was thinner and not so brown because of his stay in a German prison camp. He was also minus his left leg and his left arm. He limped pitifully and he was clumsy with the claw which replaced his left hand-but I loved him so much!

I
DIDN'T see him often and then only on the streets. It was sheer luck for me that he and his mother and father had moved to the same town as had my mother and I. His father was head of a plant there.
Irvin came over to see mother and Patty nearly every day but I was always at work.
It was in September when he came over after supper. He asked if I would like to go riding. It was on the tip of my tongue to refuse when Patty exclaimed joyously that she wanted to go, so the three of us climbed into Irvin's car which he managed with some difficulty.

He came over more often after that and would meet me at work and take me to lunch. He finally asked me to marry him again and we planned to be married in April of this year.

But when April came, Patty was in bed with diphtheria and was very slow in recovering. She was able to go out in May and again we planned to be married. But the first of June, Irvin's mother and father were both killed in an automobile-train collision. His father had bought the plant of which he was head and Irvin took his father's place in the plant learning about the work.
Irvin and I will be married on my birthday and we are going to have a church wedding. Not a big affair but just a small number of close friends with my mother and our daughter, Patty, who will carry the rings and we are going to have a double ring ceremony.

I honestly don't think there has ever been a bride as happy as I, Papa David, and I believe that Irvin and I love each other more than we did when we were first married. And I know that I will make a much better wife and a better home for him now than before.

SHE WANTED TO BE wORTHY

Dear Papa David:
My little son taught me that "life can be beautiful" if you will let it be.

After several years of reverses, big hospital bills, and so on, my husband took to drink and I soon began drinking with him. One morning after an all-night drinking party I awoke with the usual headache and got up to find a headache powder．A glance in the mirror showed my bloodshot eyes and disheveled hair ．．．not a pretty sight，I must admit．As I sat looking at my－ self my little boy returned from Sun－ day School．It was Sunday，God＇s Day． I felt unclean．
Laying his Bible and Sunday School leaflet on the table by me he placed his arms around me and told me what some ladies had said to him at Chureh ．．．he was such a good boy his mother must raise him right ．．．and they would like to meet his mother．
I found my headache powder，took it， kissed him，and went back to bed to sleep off my＂hangover．＂But I couldn＇t shake off his words．If those nice church women knew his mother they would pull up their skirts and cross on the other side of the street．Finally I closed my eyes and prayed humbly to God to make me worthy of that son and to save me from myself．

THE next day I told my husband what I had happened．I also told him I was going to quit drinking，with or with－ out him，and would quit him，too，if necessary to stop drinking．

Neither of us have touched a drop for a long time now．We are working to beautify our home as we never did before．We are happier，healthier，and are making plans for the future．We want to be worthy of our little boy．

GIFTS FOR GRANDDAUGHTER

Dear Papa David：
Our first grandchild took her first steps recently．Watching her，I was amazed at her fortitude．She must have fallen a dozen times in thirty minutes． In my mind I began picturing her in later years，using this same deter－ mination to get what she wanted from life．Then a familiar rebellion started arising within me．

Why，I asked myself，should my granddaughter have to fight for any－ thing？Why hadn＇t we been able to save or make more money，that we might pass on to her ．．．so that she would never have to fret and scrimp and worry about material things？Why indeed，had my daughter，（the child＇s mother）not married some wealthy boy who could provide his child with the many things to which I felt she would be entitled？I wanted her to have the best of everything，to be able to do and have all of the things which I had missed as a child，and more than I had been able to give her own Mother．

Resentment stirred deeper and deeper within me，and soon I became disagreeable to my whole family．I would，I vowed，see that she had the things I thought she deserved get them for her somehow．
I tossed，and planned and schemed all of one night ．．．planning a campaign． I meant to tell my daughter that she must insist that her husband get busy and earn more money．Also，my own husband who had retired－he could find something to do in his spare time be－ sides work in his flower garden，visit with his old friends，and run errands for all the families in the neighbor－ hood．True，he had worked hard for nearly fifty years ．．．but we must all strain a point for this precious grand－ child＇s sake．

Early the next morning，I opened my newspaper．I would look through the want ads．Maybe there was something there for both of us，something which we could do that would add to our in－ come. Then we could sell this shabby old house in which our own children had been raised, and buy a newer, more modern one in a "tonier" neighborhood. Our granddaughter would go to the best finishing school . . . she would be invited into the town's "best" homes.

However, because of habit I read first the headlines and a brief summary of news of the day. Then, I turned the first page, and there I saw a picture of a famous heiress. She was suing husband number four or five for a divorce, while husband number two was suing her for custody of their child, claiming that she was an "unfit" mother. The child, also pictured, wore the most pathetic expression on its baby face which it has ever been my misfortune to behold.

I turned the page quickly. There, staring back at me was the face of one of Hollywood's most beautiful and talented actresses, along with a whole column relating the story of her suicide, because her wealthy play-boy friend, and father of her unborn child, had refused to marry her.
HEARD voices and laughter outside my window, and looking up I saw my son-in-law, dressed in his work-clothes, and riding his beautiful little daughter "piggy-back" while a doting grandfather playfully grabbed at her feet. And a sweet young wife and mother looked adoringly at a handsome youth, who would probably never be more than her own father had been fine, generous honorable and loving husband.
Tears filled my eyes, for this, Papa David, was the picture I had so nearly destroyed.
"No" I told myself, as I watched them, "we will never be able to give her gifts of money-value, but there are many other things which she will inherit, and to which she can point with confidence and pride."

First, I could give her the gift of Faith. Faith in herself, because she was created in the image of Him who taught, lived and died by faith. Faith in her fellowman because she will inherit an instinct which will make her want to look beyond the hard, cynical eyes of a worldly man or woman and there find, perhaps, a hungry soul.
Secondly, she will receive a gift of Tolerance. This will enrich her life, because it will enable her to appreciate, understand and practice the teachings of Christ when He said, "Judge Not, Lest You be Also Judged.'

She will inherit a tolerance which will make her know that although the deeds and actions of some poor, criticized person might have, indeed, been an offense against the laws of society, still there could be much in them to love and trust. Because, behind the wrong moves there might have been the highest motives. At any rate, there was adventure and curiosity and hot-blooded restlessness and generosity, and without these impulses the race would soon perish.

Courage she will receive $\qquad$ a nice large portion of it. Courage which will help her to face any issue in life. I mean to see that she develops a courage which will help her to struggle, and dream and rebel at some of her failures, and then to brush the angry tears away, and fight again for her ideals.

Love, big endless bundles of it, we can give this child. We can teach her love ... not for one person, one family, one group, or even one nation, but love which will embrace every race, color or creed. For she will know, as she grows in knowledge and grace, she will attain her birthright by opening her heart, and giving freely of her own precious love.

DAY-BY-DAY LIFE

Dear Papa David:
I just want you to know that I have found that an ordinary, uneventful, every-day sort of life can be very beautiful, indeed.

I have two wonderful reasons for knowing this is true-my husband and my son. To an outsider, both would seem quite commonplace, I'm sure. But they have filled my life with a happiness so complete, I want to tell you about it, in the hope that perhaps another wife will look at her husband and children in a different light-and make her Iife beautiful, too.
My husband and I have been married for ten years; and, as so often happens, the business of living had assumed a rather dreary aspect. But for the last three years, we have shared our lives with a young son-and it was through the eyes of our child that I began to see my husband anew. To Jimmy, his father is a never-ending source of companionship, entertainment, and inspiration, and now I feel again the enchantment I had lost in the humdrum years before.

${ }^{1}$Y husband has a beguiling way of asking a favor, that I had come to think of as just demanding. He has a trick of smiling at us when he doesn't think we are looking-and, indeed, I had long forgotten to notice. His storytelling is superb-and I listen with an interest equalling his for whom the tale is told. His kindness is love expressed in a way I failed to recognize until I saw my son grow and develop under its influence. Even my husband's appearance has changed for me. Jimmy loves his daddy's black hair, loves to see himself reflected in his daddy's dark eyes. Now, I, too, think him handsome.

Yes, my husband is wonderful-and it took a little child to show me that the wonder had not disappeared, but that I had just forgotten to look for it.

just have patience
Dear Papa David:
I am a girl going on thirteen this September. I live on a farm and have my own chores to do and have to help in the house and field. I used to complain about having to do so much work and said life wasn't beautiful.

One night I lay awake thinking. I thought how wrong I was to complain about the work I did, because the farm bought in a large enough income so that we can put money in the bank. This money will help put my brothers, sisters and myself through college. I love school and this proves that even if Life isn't Beautiful right when you want it to be, it will be beautiful when the time comes. You just have to have patience.

for life. I had to resign myself to that. My father made my first wheel chair and he wheeled me to school every morning. It was not long before I was able to manipulate it around the school grounds myself. There were always plenty of friends who would wheel me home. I was able to attend games and even dances. It pleased me to be able to help pass out refreshments.

Our pastor who was an elderly man used to spend hours with me and I many times would have been discouraged but for his encouragement. He seemed to sense the longing I had to jump around and it was always then that he would suggest that we exercise. This form of exercise meant being lifted out of the wheel chair and with my legs being held off the floor I would use my hands to get about. It was a welcome change from sitting. As we finished he would say very tenderly:
"Robert, make use of what God has given you."
I GRADUATED from high school and 1 earned a scholarship to college. Again I soon made sympathetic friends in college and was able to attend games both in town and out. The fellows would carry me on to the train and have a car waiting. In return I helped tutor them, for which they were very grateful.

As graduation neared I found I had been chosen to give the Baccalaureate sermon. I hesitated because of the awkward situation involved. However the president assured me he would bank the platform with ferns and my chair would not be noticeable.

Graduation was a wonderful day in my life, for after I had given my address the scholarships were awarded and much to my surprise I had won another which would enable me to do research work. As the president presented it to me the entire audience arose. Tears of gratitude filled my eyes-God had indeed blessed me with a keen mind. Through my tears I glanced down to the front row and there sat the three people who had been my inspiration, father, mother and my pastor.

Imprinted in my heart were his words:
"Robert, make use of what God has given you."

SOUTH PACIFIC SONG-FEST

Dear Papa David:
The most outstanding experience I ever had was while serving as Chaplain in the Armed Forces in the South Pacific.

We were to go into the island and see what condition the natives were in and I might say that we many times found them pitiful enough. Already tired to the point of exhaustion we left our landing barge and began to climb the steep hill ahead. Suddenly we found ourselves almost surrounded by natives. They looked anything but friendly and so we immediately began to show our good points.

Our doctor unrolled his kit and prepared to show them how broken arms and legs were mended-I being the subject. This procedure only brought a few grunts from them. One other member turned handsprings to show our friendly attitude. Nothing impressed them. Finally our men flopped on the ground and said, "It's up to you, Chaplain."

I'll admit I didn't know the next approach, so began to hum an old familiar hymn while meditating. Suddenly I heard a sound and looking up into their faces, knew that I had found the right chord-Religion-we spoke the same language. In no time the entire group was singing, they in their native tongue and we in ours.
Suddenly from nowhere, it seemed, an old man handed me an old hymnal which he had treasured through the war. It had been left there by some foreign missionary. With that book in hand we sang practically everything they knew. What a song fest that was! Our stay among them was pleasant indeed and when we went down to the shore preparatory to leaving they began to sing that old favorite:
"Jesus loves me this I know
For the Bible tells me so."
As long as we were able to see them they were still singing and waving their hands.

"YOU HAVENT CHANGED A BIT!"

Dear Papa David:

After more than two years service overseas, I recently got word that my husband was at last coming to the States and home to me!
And I literally walked on air until friends began saying that I'd probably find him very changed, and that he, in turn, would find me a different person, too. And the more I thought about it, the greater the possibility of his seeing flaws in me loomed. For neither of us are young . . . he had been stationed for the most part in the South Pacific where loneliness and tropical heat could have drastically altered his emotions.

THEN too, he must have met many pretty young native girls . . . stunning nurses and other snappy looking Government employees. Yes, I must be at my prettiest when he did arrive. So, I rushed downtown, bought a new youthful looking suit, a perky hat, a small bottle of the new, exotic "Remembrance perfume, had a new and softer hair-do and dressed with great care for his arrival on the day I had been advised he would return. But, no Walt and no explanation.

However, I thought he would wire then as to why the delay and definite time of his reaching town, so I was buried in sweeping and dusting the house and myself in hopeless disorder and grime, when one morning the front doorbell rang, and I thoughtlessly rushed to answer it.

Will I ever forget . . . for before I had time to think how awful my dingy, soiled housedress must look pale lips and cheeks... and worse my my frowsy hair . . . I threw open the door and was swept into Walt's open arms like leaves before the wind hearing only his heavenly throaty and sincere voice as he remarked
"Darling, you haven't changed a bit you're wonderful!"

Mrs. W. H.
Those are all the letters we had room for in this issue. Don't you feel, after reading them, that each of the people who wrote to us has found one of the keys to happiness?

No two people find the same key, or discover it in the same way; that much is certain. Maybe the experiences from which our letter writers learned would have meant nothing to you. But in that case, isn't there something in your own memory that taught you the meaning of happiness? Why not write us a letter about it?

What Silent Night Means to Me

tried out the new records, "Ida, Sweet as Apple Cider," "Margie" and "Melancholy Baby," on the new cylinder phonograph Dad soaked the family bankroll to buy. You'd always find half the neighborhood there on Sunday nights dancing or harmonizing, with Dad doubling back and forth on the mandolin and guitar. Mother always felt better when she could count our noses.
During the summers I "worked" on a farm that belonged to the Hardigans, who lived next door, and my chief chore consisted of riding a horse around all day. Mother used to take us swimming, too, out at Liberty Lake, a few miles out of town, and let us spend the whole day . ., mostly to get us out of the neighbors' way. I had a pretty fair homemade breast-stroke . . . nothing flashy .... but it kept me on top most of the time. Other times we'd sneak off and go swimming in the Spokane River and in the mill pond at McGolderick's saw mill a few blocks from home. We swam and dodged logs and generally raised Cain. Then when we got home Mother and Dad raised some more. I can still hear my Mother saying to Dad anxiously, "Harry, you really should speak to Bing." And Dad, who's always ducked any speaking-to's, suggesting mildly, "Why don't we just throw him out?" instead. I'd like to have a wishbone for every time he's suggested throwing me out of the homestead.

There's the memory too Mother's turkey, plum pudding, and the hot raisin bread she used to make. A sadder one . . . of the wood it took to bake it. We had a super-size range, the hungriest stove you ever saw-and a wood box that must have had a stout leak in it somewhere. I could usually find a lot of important things to do elsewhere until the box filled up again. Until close to Christmas, when 1 always managed to cart some up from the basement and pointedly kick a few chunks in.
We all had our chores but I kept mine down to the required strictest minimum. Figuring generously that the fewer I did the bigger it made the other boys look. Larry was always Mother's No. 1 helper, and I didn't want to split his billing or chisel in on his racket.
I'd usually start the old Christmas warm-up a week or two beforehand to set myself in solid with Santa. Get so good cranberries would melt in my mouth. There were so many of us I was always afraid Santa Claus would scrape the bottom of the sack before getting down to me. There were some tough nights up in that four-poster upstairs, doing a little Christmas calculating, adding and subtracting good and bad deeds for the year. A sad score, but I always got more than my share of presents anyway.

We had our tree on Christmas Eve, the folks figuring no doubt that the quicker they got it over with the better. Sometimes Brother Ted would go out and bring in a Christmas tree. But I was always allergic to axes, and besides a man came down the street selling them for two-bits apiece, and I didn't think it was fair to muscle in. Dad always passed the presents around. Following which we'd render our own Crosby Christmas clambake of carols, with Mother singing soprano, Larry and Dad on the harmony, the rest of us doing our usual. With accompaniment by Sister Catherine at the old upright piano and Dad filling in with a strumming Hawaiian treatment of "Silent Night" on his guitar.

Next morning after church we'd grab our respective Christmas loot and put it to work. All of us got ice skates, and I can still see Mother and Dad flooding the backyard and letting it freeze over so we could try the new skates out. Sometimes we'd go over to Liberty Lake, or to another lake at St. Michael's Jesuit Monastery, a few miles out of town. Or maybe go over across the alley to the Gonzaga football field and practice trying to kick a goal.

Christmas dinner was always a big deal. Dad worked as bookkeeper for a local brewery and there wasn't too much Christmas money in the budget, but somehow Mother always managed to bring it off in high style. We usually invited some of the boys around Gonzaga who couldn't get home for Christmas. They all accepted, glad to get a free Christmas meal. Mother never knew how many to expect, but somehow there was always plenty. That Christmas turkey was a mighty accommodating bird. So elastic.

FTER dinner the girls repaired to the A living room with our sister for some Christmas chatter, or whatever girls do. And we men always repaired to the top balcony of the Orpheum Theater to catch the new vaudeville show Maybe Joe Frisco, or the Brox Sisters and usually a grand opera troupe of some kind. We had carfare, but, we always walked the three miles from our place to downtown, in order to soak our wad on ice cream.

"Silent Night" was mixed up in all of this. I was always contributing my quota of it. At school . . . church and Christmas parties around the neighborhood I was especially willing to contribute on programs ... say the Elks' club . . . where it involved dough. If such thrifty traditional traits are passed along, no doubt that's the reason my four fullbacks, Gary, Philip, Dennis and Lindsay, always ask for a handout whenever we descend on Bob Hope, Mother and Dad, or Dixie's father, and let loose with a musical offensive on Christmas now. They expect full payment in nickels and dimes, candy, or some little left-overs. Which is exactly what they get at Hope's house . . where there's rarely little left over anyway. We've worked up a pretty fair arrangement on "Silent Night," and if I beat Gary to the downbeat sometimes I get to sing the lead.
These are the kind of flash-backs that "Silent Night" brings me. Let's hang on to the hope that it will always bring similar happy ones for our kids

The old heart hits a pretty low Crosley when you think of the children who are going to be minus memories like these. Kids in hospitals with infantile paralysis. Others who don't have a dad back to hang up the kolly .... or put the red scooter or ice skates under the tree. Children who are wandering around lost in bombed-out countries, who wouldn't ask anything of Santa Claus but a meal and a place to light.

Kids like Monique . . . a little eleven-year-old girl I came across in Commercy, France, mothering four brothers and sisters, and taking care of a father who'd been crippled for life in a German prison camp. Just a child with sawed-off bangs and wistful brown eyes in a too-thin face.

While I'm sounding off , ,, the way I figure it . . . "Silent Night" is a little like the old Christmas sock. You get out of it just what goes into it. Let's level on the lyrics and make them work. And keep those stars out of the windows forever . . . and right where they are now at the top of the Christmas tree.

About Marriage

Then comes the period of adjustment. Any marriage is a difficult social process. It calls for the blending of two very different personalities into one unit in the eyes of the world. In this blending there are many discoveries, many compromises, many re-evaluations. In the course of these, the exciting and breathless quality of the romantic stage will fade. Even the first flush of mutual passion and desire will grow, through understanding and mutual gratification, into a stronger and richer, if less dizzying, relationship.

Out of this adjustment, gradually achieved and with both husband and wife contributing an equal share and taking on an equal proportion of responsibility, will come the third stage, the stage of real companionship, based on understanding and tolerance. A marriage which develops this way becomes an ideal marriage, a marriage in which love, passion and true friendship are so firmly blended that nothing can tear them apart.

To marry is to assume the cloak of maturity. Unfortunately, too often today, maturity is only that-a cloak, an illusion, which has no basis in real emotional stability. The difference between immaturity and maturity can be stated very simply. The immature are dependent. The mature are independent and ready for responsibility. The immature think only of themselves and their pleasures. The mature know that some unpleasantness in life is unavoidable.
A marriage between two mature people is bound to be successful. Such people can trust their emotions and be sure of their choices and will be able to make all the adjustments needed to establish a home and raise a familyand to be happy together. But a marrage in which even one is emotionally immature is in danger.
If one partner, husband or wife, is completely dependent emotionally and physically, constantly avoids responsibility, seeks only self gratification and pleasure, wants a steady diet of flattery, pampering, protection and the total enslavement of the other partner-such a marriage is not a marriage, at all. It's nothing but a substitute for the emmature person's childhood days.

It could be questioned whether in childho $I$ such complete dependence and $\lambda$ Aton to the pleasure principle shot oe permitted to continue beyond the st two or three years, but that is nc within the province of this article. The thing that does fall within our province is that there is small likelihood that such an immature person will ever make a successful marriage. It is not a divorce the immature person needs. He, or she, needs to grow up emotionally and if it can't be managed through self-examination and personal efforts to overcome childish tendencies and faults, then, by all means, the professional help of doctors, psychologists, even psychiatrists should be sought.

Possibly, even after the emotional lmmaturity has been overcome, a divorce will still be indicated. There are such things as people not really being suited to one another. But, at least, then the decision will be a mature one and not based on disillusionment because the first gay rapture of love-as it is described in thousands of love storieshas worn off and the people concerned are not ready to face the next step in the growth of love.

PSORIASIS

Often attractive women are unable to wear lovely formal and afternoon "revealing gowns" because of unsightly psoriasis lesions. If you suffer such dress handicaps-try SIROIL which may solve the problem for you. SIROIL tends to remove the crusts and scales of psoriasis which are external in character and located on the outer layer of the skin. If or when your psoriasis lesions recur, light applications of SIROIL will help keep them under control. Applied externally, SIROIL does not stain clothing or bed linen nor does it interfere in any way with your daily routine. It is sold to you on a two-weeks'-satisfaction-or-money-refunded basis.

Cornbread Dressing

 (for any fowl)2 cups cornbread crumbs
$1 / 2$ cup hot milk
$1 / 4$ cup melted shortening
1/2 tsp. salt
2 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
2 tbls. minced onion
Combine crumbs and milk, then add remaining ingredients and mix well.

Oyster and Giblet Dressing (for any fowl)
${ }_{1 / 2}^{2}$ cups bread crumbs
$1 / 2 \mathrm{pt}$. oysters with liquid
$1 / 2$ tsp. salt cooked and minced with liquid
$1 / 2$ tsp. salt
$1 / 4$ tsp. pepper
1 tbl. granted lemon rind
medium onion, minced
Combine liquid from oysters with liquid in which giblets were cooked to make 1 cup. Pour over crumbs. Add oysters (chopped fine) and add giblets. Combine with other ingredients. Makes about 2 cups.

Apple and Peanut Dressing

(for any fowl)
$11 / 2$ cups breadcrumbs
cup hot water
large apple, cored, pared and chopped
medium onion, minced
$1 / 2$ cup peanuts, chopped
2 tsp. salt
4 tsp. pepper
Pour hot-w
Pour hot-water over crumbs and allow to stand about 10 minutes. Combine with remaining ingredients. Apple and peanuts should be rather coarsely chopped, not minced. Cooked wild rice may be used in place of crumbs. Makes about 2 cups.

Sweet Dressing
(goose, duck or chicken)
2 cups breadcrumbs
$1 / 4$ cup boiling water
4 cup orange juice
1 beaten egg
2 tbls. melted shortening
2 tsps. sugar
2 tsp. salt
${ }_{4}$ cup chopped nuts
4 cup currants
2 tsps. grated orange rind
Combine hot water and orange juice, pour over breadcrumbs and allow to stand about 10 minutes. Add other ingredients and mix well. Makes about 2 cups.

If you decide on turkey consider the quick frozen variety. They are ready to be cooked, requiring no bothersome picking and drawing. A $9-1 \mathrm{~b}$. quick frozen roaster is equivalent to a 12lb. bird which is to be drawn.

Allow 5-6 cups of dressing for a 10-1b. turkey; about 2 cups of dressing for a 4-lb. chicken, goose or duck.

Turkey should be larded (thin slices of bacon or salt pork toothpicked to the breast), covered with white cloth moistened in melted fat or basted frequently during roasting. Remove pork or fat-moistened cloth during last 30 minutes of cooking so bird will brown.

Be sure to cook duck and goose on a rack and pour off fat as it collects in bottom of pan. Additional helps in overcoming fat when cooking gooseprick skin with fork or cook for first half of cooking time in a steamer, then transfer to roasting pan.

Roast at 325 degrees, 15 to 18 min utes per pound for chicken, duck and turkeys up to 12 pounds, 18 to 25 min utes per pound for goose and larger turkeys. As with other roasts, longer cooking at lower temperature produces better results than shorter cooking at a higher temperature.

Baste duck or goose with orange or apple juice during roasting, and bake orange or apple halves in roasting pan for final hour.

clambake out of this. I forgot to tell him to tip his hat over one eye and keep it on no matter where he is and be sure to talk out of one corner of his mouth so that he will impress this Quakdiddle-Quikpaddle-that he's a real, big-time reporter. What if he doesn't get the story-and we go to press in an hour!"
The door banged and a burly figure plunged through.
"Dream Girl! Princess in the Ivory Towel! You art as fair as moonshine-" Lochinvar Polaski braked himself to a stop with his hands on the desk and gazed at the girl with what he thought was a loyerlike expression.
"Lockie-you're the answer to a maiden's prayer!"
"I am?"
"That's not exactly what I meant," she amended, hastily. "I mean I have a job for you to do."
"Command me. I am at your feet, my head is in the clouds, my nose is to the grandstand, my heart deposits in your hands-'
"Stay in one piece, Lockie. I need you. I need you to go over to the hotel and interview a suspicious mug who has registered there under the name of Quentin P. Quikpaddle. Find out who he really is and what he is doing here in Middleton."
" H -you mean this jer-this visitor is A traveling incompleto? He's denonomous? He's got a nombly-plume?"
Familiar as Maisie was with Lochinvar's high-rianded approach to the King's English, she was stumped for a second. Then her face cleared. "That's right, Lockie. He is indeed anonymous and incognito. The Beacon needs the story for the front page and I've sent Bill over but he may need help. You've got to get it-if I don't get a good story soon, I might just as well start running The Five Little Peppers in serial form as far as our subscribers are concerned."
"I go, fair lady. Even as knights of old jousted in the turn-abouts and did brave deeds to find honorable mention in their lady's favor, so I, too, take up my lance," clenching the pencil in one big fist, "and am off to prove my medal. I go!"

And he went.

But still Maisie's pert face was troubled. Between Lockie's unbounded but often mis-directed enthusiasm and Bill's complete lack of it, there wasn't much choice. Neither of them was exactly dependable. So when Terry came in shortly from his morning errands, she hustled the youngster over to the hotel, too.
"I'm counting on you, Terry. You've been begging for a chance to be a real newspaperman and now you have it. Corner this Quikpaddle, even if you have to break down his door-but get the story!"

After all, Bill shouldn't mind if he had competition. And, anyway, Lockie and Terry were only going to help him. With all of them interviewing the stranger, they were sure to bring back all the facts. At least, the Beacon was assured of a front page splash and maybe she'd get some new subscriptions and the bank balance would stop shrinking so alarmingly. Maisie hummed a little to herself as she picked up some copy for proof-reading.

The minutes went by. Ten . . . fifteen a half-hour. Now she was beginning to get a little nervous again as her eyes kept glancing at the clock. One of the three should be back soon-Mr. Elspeth had said the new guest would

So it was with relief that she heard the door suddenly open. She swung round in her chair-but then stopped, disappointed.

It was only a timid-looking little man who had stepped gingerly inside the office. He kept twirling his hat around in his hands as if he didn't know what else to do with them. His feet seemed to be edging him back out of the door, and his eyes stayed on the floor-which wasn't the usual reaction of a man on seeing the blonde editor of the Beacon for the first time.
"Yes?" she asked, trying to sound prim., "Is there anything we can do for you?"
"We?-are there more like you?-as beautiful as you, I mean?" the little man's voice was awed and shaken.
"Oh, no. That is, I mean-is there anything I can do for you?"

He seemed to pluck up his courage and moved towards the desk. "I'd like to run a little ad in the paper. If you wouldn't mind," he added hastily.
"If I wouldn't mind! Mister, I hear those words in my sleep and they always, somehow, sound like the tinkle of money in the cash register. How many lines do you want? Shall I help you write it?"

$\mathrm{N}^{\mathrm{o}}$O, thank you, I have it all written out. He cleared his throat as Maisie snatched at pencil and paper. "This is it-
"Wanted, enterprising young men to sell farm machinery. Old established firm. Good future. New territory. Write, Box-"
"Box 254," Maisie supplied.
"Box 254, care of the Middleton Beacon. ,That's all of it, Miss, and thank you." He sidled away towards the door and then, seeing Maisie's eyes on his questioningly, he blushed. "Oh, I forgot to pay you." He came back and dug in his pocket for change. "Will you run it for three days?-it's really all right, Miss, it really is an old, established firm and I have the agency. It's on the level."
"I'm sure it is," she said, kindly, as she took the money. "We'll run it, starting today, and I hope you get résults. Though-frankly-I have my doubts. I'm having a little trouble that way myself.
"You're in the farm machinery business?" he asked, startled.

No-I want an enterprising young man." "Oh."
He backed out of the door, sheepishly. She had a sudden desire to pat the little man on the head and assure him that everything would be okay. He was just like a cute little bunny rabbit, with his button nose twitching that way.
As the door closed behind him, Maisie glanced at the clock again. Twelve-thirty! They went to press in ten minutes and not one of her reporters was back yet with the story. Why hadn't she been smart and gone herself?-why hadn't she known bet-ter?-where were Bill and Terry and-"Lockie!" While he was still turning the doorknob, she had raced across the office and flung the door open. "Have you got it? Did you interview himwho is he? What's he doing here? What kept you?"
"Let me catch my windpipe, Dream Girl. I sped with the wings of Mercurochrome all the way from the hotel."
He gasped for breath and then tore a sheet of paper out of his pocket. It was covered with something that looked like doodling, as Maisie found out when she tried to read it.

"That's my own invention," Lockie assured her proudly. "I am the Alexander Graham Crackers of the longshorthand world. Let me read it to you, and rest your beautiful eyes in your beautiful face. Vision of Loveliness, this is indeed a beat-up for the Beacon!"

He cleared his throat and the noise bounced off the walls. "Mr. Quentin P. Quikpaddle, Espired, is none other than a world-famous exploder, a global-trotter, a big-games hunter from the far corners of Madagooscar, Pathay, Burmoose, and the Congo-although I always thought that was something you wiggled to music. Howsomever, he has fought tigers in the Chinese and India jungles and he is a real 'safari'!'
'But his name, Lockie! His real name!" Excitement shone in Maisie's face. This was a front-page story if she ever heard one.
"Gee," Lochinvar was crest-fallen. "I forgot to ask him. I had to be so sub-rosy about this entrayvoo, I didn't dast let him know what I was up to.

SHE patted his arm, quickly, symjust run a head on this story something like Middleton Plays Host to WorldFamous Explorer and hint he is here for a vacation and doesn't want his name known. I'll make it sound so our readers won't dare admit they can't recognize such an important man," And, whistling gaily, Maisie rolled copy paper into her typewriter and began pecking out the story.
"Go on, Lockie, tell me more about him. Is he big? Dark? Light? Handsome?"
"Why-gee-he's mediocree, that's what he is. Dream Girl, you ask more questions than those commonpotaters on the radio!"
She sighed, finally, with satisfaction and ripped out the page. "Well, it will just have to do. I've padded that story till it sounds like the adventures of Tarzan and the Ape Man. If this doesn't sell copies!-why, nothing as important as this has happened in Middleton since the First National VicePresident took a powder with the bank funds and ran away with the Widow Abernethy . .. and that happened ten years ago! I've gotta run down with this, Lockie, and give it to Pop Webster.

And she rushed the copy to the old typesetter.
"You're just in time!" he shouted above the clatter of his machine. "We go to press in five minutes."

Saucily she blew a kiss at his bald head and jauntily she ran up the steps to the office. The job was done; the Beacon would be on the streets soon with-
"Oof!" she clutched her middle. A figure had catapulted itself through the door and nearly knocked her down. "Terry-!"
"Stop the presses! I've got a scoop! I've got the story on Quikpaddle!'
"Take-it-easy-Terry," Maisie gasped. "We've already got the story. Lockie found out he was an explorer in India-"

Terry gave Lochinvar a withering glance. "What does he know about it? I'll bet he didn't get up into Quikpaddle's room, like I did. He's no ex-plorer-he's a Government big-shot from Washington! He told me, confidentially, he had just come from Washington, D. C., and he had a new commission that would mean a lot to Middleton farmers and he called General Eisenhower by his first name and-what's more-" Terry drew himself up straight and proud-"didn't I get a peek at a letter on his desk and wasn't it signed by the President of the United States, himself?'

The evidence was overwhelming. Lockie tried feebly to discount it. "Huh -that's mere hearsee. Didn't I get an apostle from the President, myself, a few years ago? And didn't it say Greetings at the top?"

But Maisie was eyeing him with disfavor. "Lockie-do you know for sure he was an explorer?"
"Well-no, Dream Girl. But he did say he had been fighting tigers in China and India."
"Oh, gosh! I'll bet he just does that for a hobby! Now I've got to write that story all over again. Lockie, run down and tell Pop to hold the press for a minute. Terry, give me all the dopeand give it fast!"

And her fingers went racing over the keyboard in her own scrambling system of hunt-and-peck, as the story unfolded. Quikpaddle, the mystery man right-hand man of the Administration the secret envoy of the Government to Middleton statesmen and diplomats of glory and honor to Middleton "Couldn't we say that maybe they're planning to move the United Nations to Middleton, Maisie?" Terry's eyes were shining with excitement. "He asked a lot of questions about the land around here and the farmers."

NOT stopping her typing, Maisie shook 1 her head. "I hope not. The only language I can say 'no' in is American." She jerked the copy out. "It's ready -Lockie, did you get the other story pulled?-here, Terry!-rush this down to Pop Webster-gee, if only ,we knew this Quikpaddle's real name!"
"I can tell you his name."
"Well, tell it to me, quick." Then Maisie did a double-take. "BILL. WHERE HAVE YOU BEEN!"'
'Hi, everybody." Bill lounged through the door and yawned. "What's all the fuss about? What's everyone shouting for?"
"Bill-his name! Tell me his name!"
"Whose name-Quikpaddle's?"
"Yes!" With both hands Maisie hung on to her self-control. Downstairs she could hear the clatter of the typesetting machine; precious seconds were flying; how could Bill be so slow when they needed that name?
"Quentin P. Quikpaddle?"
"Yes-Quentin P.-what's his name, Bill Doolittle!"
"That is his name. Quentin P. Doo-little-I mean, Quikpaddle."
Disgusted, Maisie sat down hard in her chair. Lockie and Terry gazed at Bill in pitying silence. Only Bill, himself, was unconcerned as he strolled over to the desk and leaned against it.
"Boy, am I tired. I didn't know being a reporter was such hard work."
"If you are a reporter, Bill," her tone was ominous, "where's the story?"
"Oh-that. Sorry, honey, but there isn't any story. Whole thing was a waste of time . . . when I might have been here with you, holding hands, and whispering sweet nothings. The guy is some kind of a traveling salesman, now."
Terry hooted. Lockie looked superior. Maisie cupped her chin in her
