An Amos ‘N’ Andy Christmas
John Liska

Beginning in 1940, the Amos ‘N’ Andy show did a yearly Christmas special. Its early versions were centered around Amos explaining the meaning of the Lord's Prayer to his daughter, Arbadella. By 1943 the show had expanded to a half-hour format and included Andy taking Arbadella around town and playing Santa to get her a talking doll.

It was previously believed that surviving example of these shows were simply replays year after year. After some close examination and a little help from Ms. Elisabeth McLeod, I have – so far – found eight different versions, ranging in date from 1941 through 1954.

While not all the dates are certain, the following will help you determine which version of the show you're listening to:

Amos explains to Andy how they saved their tree lights from the previous year, and added a string this year.
Andy brought a rattle for the baby.

Amos explains to Andy that they have extra bulbs for their Christmas Tree.
Andy brought a little something for the baby.

Andy bought perfume for Sadie Blake.
A little girl wants a toolchest and drums.

1946 (?)
A little girl wants boxing gloves and drums
Gabby wants a gift for his gal.

1948
Shorty wants a gift for his gal

1950
The announcer states it's 1950.

1951
Announcer lists the sponsor as Rexall, and states Christmas is just two days off.

1954

In addition to these, Ms McLeod informs me there were two separate releases of “The Lord's Prayer” segment on vinyl in 1947 and 1952.

Further identifying notes from Amos ‘N’ Andy Christmas episodes.

A History of Syndicated Radio
Jack French

“Donald Peterson presents: The True Adventures of Junior G-Men! (sound of siren) The Junior G-Men are on the air...speeding to your homes, ready for action! (sound of siren) Stand by, all Junior G-Men, stand by for thrilling details of the case of.....”

This introduction was heard in the 1930s on Junior G-men, a syndicated juvenile adventure series. While neither true, nor affiliated with the real G-Men, the program enjoyed a modest popularity within the ranks of American youngsters of that era.

Syndicated shows grew up with radio, beginning in the 1920s. A syndicated show was one produced in a studio for purposes of transcribing it on disk, for subsequent marketing to radio stations who would broadcast it. These syndicated programs were as vital to the success of of the independent stations as the network lines were to their web affiliates.

Although transcribed disks were rented or leased to independent stations in the 1920s and were the primary form of syndication, there were a few other options tried. In 1928, Fred Smith, a radio producer who came out of WLW in Cincinnati, created a syndicated news program by selling scripts of his news casts. Fred traveled throughout the East and Midwest and signed up hundreds of stations for his service. His show was called Newscasting; Fred wrote all the scripts, read them himself over the air at WOR in New York City and then sent copies of his scripts, via air mail, to all the stations under contract, who had their local announcers read these news scripts. Apparently local listeners didn’t seem to mind that they got their news 24 hours later. At any rate, Fred’s scripts were a vast improvement over having local announcers merely read teletypes from the wire services.

In 1929, Fred took this process a step further. He got over 100 stations to sign up for a five minute dramatized news show he called News Acting which he recorded on disk with 6-8 actors. He picked news events that were not time-sensitive and the local stations were pleased with the results obtained playing his group’s disks on the air. Some OTR historians are convinced that The March of Time, which began in 1931, was inspired by Fred’s syndicated program.

By the 1930s, syndicated shows were being produced by at least 50 different recording companies, most of them small but efficient operations. Some had only three or four title series, while others had literally dozens to offer. A station could pay as little as $5 for the rights to air one 15minute syndicated episode, although the rates would rise dramatically in the 1940s as big stars agreed to syndicate their programs.

Very few news programs were successful in syndication---for obvious reasons---and the ones in most demand were: juvenile adventure (including the exploits of pilots Jimmy Allen and Howie Wing), musical variety, mystery and detective shows, or comedy programs. Relatively few soap operas were in syndication in the 30s although they would become more available in the 40s. It was not uncommon to create a combination of these genre, for example, Detectives Black and Blue was a humorous mystery series. A few of the syndicated shows were pale imitations of successful network shows, i.e. Si and Elmer tried to copy Lum and Abner. The imitation series, produced in Los Angeles, had Perry Crandall as “Si Perkins” and William H. Reynolds as “Elmer Peabody.” Nearly a hundred episodes of this series have survived.

The recording companies usually sold the syndicated shows (minimum contract 26 episodes) to the radio stations, who would in turn would receive money from local advertisers. Toward that end, most 15 minute syndicated shows would have 60-90 minutes of music at both the beginning and the end of each episode, enabling the local announcer to read his commercial copy over the music. Thus it was not uncommon to find a popular syndicated show, such as Myrt and Marge or The Shadow with dozens of different local sponsors throughout the country.

While most of the syndicated shows were sold to individual stations or small chains, there was a second group of customers: advertising firms. These companies would pay for the syndication rights and then buy air time at selected stations to broadcast the shows, for which the advertising firm provided the commercials, either in written form or on transcribed disk.

In the 1930s, the Federal Communications Commission strictly enforced its regulation that all transcribed radio shows had to be clearly identified as such, both before and after the show, and in no event, less than every 15 minutes of the transcription. The preferred language to be used was “This is a phonograph record.” By the Forties, the FCC had relaxed this rule and the 15 minute requirement disappeared. Also, an introductory phrase (i.e. “Transcribed from Hollywood”) was sufficient notice to the listeners.

As previously stated, some of the syndication firms created and maintained a large inventory of transcribed series. One good example would be the Conquest Alliance Company of New York City and Chicago, who in the mid-1930s, had over 40 different series, with anywhere from 26 to 350 individual episodes within each series. Several of Conquest’s offerings are still well known today, including Adventures of Charlie Chan, Blair of the Mounties, and Chandu the Magician. But many of their other series are now forgotten and may not have been heard after 1940, such as White Eagles, Congo Bartlett in Ethiopia, and Seal of the Don.

By 1941, probably the high water mark of radio syndication, there were approximately 100 companies devoted exclusively to transcription production. Not all of them were producing radio drama or comedy. Some specialized in newspaper features, using human interest material, not dated news stories. Other companies produced only programs in ethnic languages: German, Greek, German, etc. for distribution to the urban stations that had large immigrant audiences. About 15 companies recorded only commercials, which in turn, were used with other syndicated shows. Approximately ten companies concentrated on the creation and sale of sound effects on transcribed disks. The remainder of the firms usually marketed a variety of series for kids and adult listeners.

Here’s a sample of what several successful syndication firms were offering to stations and advertisers in the late 30s and early 40s:

TRANSICO: Cinnamon Bear, Irene Delroy, Detective (the first known lady detective on radio) and Police Headquarters

World Broadcasting System: Howie Wing, Air Adventures of Jimmie Allen

Teleways Hollywood: Danger, Dr. Danfield, Sons of the Pioneers

Mayfair Transcriptions: Box 13, Damon Runyon Theatre

Green Associates: Vic and Sade

Ziv Radio Productions: Boston Blackie, Easy Aces, Philo Vance

Transcription Sales: Captain Stubby, Singin’ Sam, Westward Ho!

Louis Cowan, Inc: Red Ryder, Tommy Dorsey, Murder At Midnight

Kermit-Raymond: John J. Anthony, Eddie Bracken Show

Charles Michelson, Inc.: The Shadow, Blackstone the Magic Detective, Nick Carter

This firm also marketed sound effects records through a subsidiary, “Speedy Q Records”

In addition to Charles Michelson marketing both syndicated radio drama and sound effects records, there were other variables in this industry. For example, Louis Cowan, Inc. not only produced their own syndicated shows for distribution (including The Smiths of Hollywood, Joe McCarthy Speaks (the baseball star, not the Wisconsin Senator), and Murder at Midnight) but they also produced live network shows. The company was responsible for the production of The Quiz Kids for NBC as well as both Hollywood Jackpot and The Fighting Senator for CBS.

Occasionally some small business would “recycle” syndicated shows by purchasing the rights to programs originally produced by firms that had gone out of business. One example of this is Bruce Eells Productions, which in the early 40s, bought the master recordings of several series from the defunct TRANSCO, including Police Headquarters, Nemesis, Inc. and Hollywood Casting Office, and continued to keep them in circulation throughout the early 1950s.

Another variable concerned radio programs that were produced live on network radio and those same programs were later released through syndication to independent radio stations. Green Associates syndicated Vic and Sade, which of course, aired live on CBS. Another CBS show broadcast daily, Myrt and Marge, was also in syndication, as was the Mutual Broadcasting Company’s The Shadow.

During the mid and late 1940s the prices syndicators charged the stations and advertising companies continued to rise. A fairly routine 5 minute program with no stars could still be had for $20, a 15 minute for $ 35 to $ 50, and a half hour show of similar content ranged from $ 65 to $ 100. However “big name” comedians and musical programs commanded heftier rates. The syndication firm of Chartoc-Colman charged up to $ 650 for a single airing of the Ted Lewis Show, during the height of his popularity. The rates were based upon the market region, the broadcast strength of the station, and how many series were being purchased in the same contract.

The syndication business provided some interesting radio arrangements. In 1949, Pet Milk, which was already sponsoring two programs, Mary Lee Taylor and Saturday Night Serenade, wanted to expand their radio listenership.
So they picked up two syndicated shows from Louis Cowan. They paid for the airing of The Smiths of Hollywood in 24 different markets, and in regions where that series was already being sponsored by another company, Pet Milk sponsored the Tommy Dorsey Show.

Of course now 50 years after most of the syndication business evaporated, we owe a debt of gratitude to these companies who produced the original disks, copies of which we enjoy today. Because they were transcribed, those series have had a much higher survival rate than some of the wonderful series of which we have only a copy of the audition episode and an occasional aircheck.
So we can celebrate the literally hundreds of syndicated shows that still in circulation, including Box 13 with Alan Ladd, Bold Venture with Bogey and Bacall, and the complete run of The Cinnamon Bear.

Documentation is Where You Find It
Ian Grieve

Researching old-time radio can lead us in many directions and introduce us to new and old friends and provide us with information from many different sources. Old-time radio is all around us, we just need to know what we are looking for.

It is no secret that I live and breathe researching Australian OTR. Spare time is spent in old book shops, second-hand shops, and other similar places that store treasure. I travel several hours in all directions to find shops I haven't visited before, or for a period of time.

What is it that I am looking for?

The ultimate would be transcription discs, followed by memorabilia and documentation. Books or magazines that include articles on shows or cast are hard to find, but slightly easier to find are books related to series/serials or characters. Radio tended to be, and as the BBC in England and ABC in Australia continue to prove, close extensions to book reading. So I tend to marry my radio hobby and pulp collecting hobby.

I have discussed finding transcription discs in other articles, so I will discuss a new documentation source; print advertising.

I have long collected radio magazines that were published between 1922 and the 1960's. These are great sources of information. Apart from programming information, cast details, interviews, gossip and news, there are ads for upcoming broadcasts, new stations opening and more. Finding these magazines is difficult, prices are rising, and radio collectors are also after them. So new sources need to be found. I had heard that there were ads placed in other weekly magazines in the 1950's, such as Australasian Post and the monthly Readers Digest. I have pounced on the magazines wherever I have found them, but whilst I have found issues of the Australasian Post containing interviews of radio actors, I have yet to find any radio show ads.

Last Saturday I did a sweep to the east, visited the city of Ipswich, picked up some Larry Kent - I Hate Crime pulps and a couple of old Ellery Queen Digests. I then moved on to Brisbane. In an antique shop I visit on a regular basis, I found a pile of Readers Digests dating from 1954 to 1957.

Bingo! Macquarie Broadcasting Service had a full sized ad in each of the sixteen books I found.

What is so exciting about that? Well, as you can see from the enclosed example (see page 18, ed.), the ads are somewhat different from the usual style. These ads include a cast photo, the cast is named, the stations the show is broadcast on, and the times are all included. Almost all the information needed is contained in the one ad. All the sixteen ads I found are unique, whilst several shows are advertised more than once, the ads are totally different. I do not know the start date or end date of the Macquarie Broadcastings ad campaign, but I have a period of time that indicates that there are about twenty more ads to be found and possibly more.

The cost? One dollar each and some fuel and time. I happen to think it is worth it. I now have some ads for shows I knew the name of, but had no further detail to indicate the genre of show. I even have them for shows I had never heard of personally, but which we have included in our database.

You can bet on one thing; Readers Digest in the 1950's will get a close look from me in the future as I search through the second-hand shops.

Next Saturday I head North East to the Sunshine Coast!

I hope that in the February issue I will be able to bring you the story Ryan and I had earmarked for this issue. I have the opportunity to provide the story straight from the actor's pen and it is an opportunity too good to miss, so the story is held back at this stage.
Mp3’s Bad Name (And What We Can Do About It)

Travis Conner

First of all, mp3 is poison to the ears of most of the big traditional collectors. Why is that so? It’s because most mp3 recorded at a 32 bit-rate sounds like garbage! However, I’ve been gradually educating people about the role mp3 can play in the old-time radio hobby.

I share a fairly good amount on usenet and my posts are always appreciated and praised highly by the people there. You, too, can have the same quality by following the basic principles of collecting, and obeying the fundamentals of a good recording.

First of all, let’s define mp3’s role. It’s a wonderful convenience format, and at the right bitrate (I do most of mine at 80/44 mono), one can’t tell the difference soundwise from the original .wav. However, it’s a lousy archival format. Why so? By definition, mp3 is a loss format – it filters away frequencies that the ear can’t hear. This is okay for listening, but for a quality archival format stick with .wav, as the .wav file can be altered at a later time (time-corrected, etc) without further loss.

I keep all my original files as a mono .wav (16 bit, 44khz). For a while now, I’ve been keeping a separate folder on each CD with the mp3 encodes of the same files for easy access.

Now, what can be done to improve mp3’s reputation? It’s because non-mp3 collectors have heard so many poor-quality shows in mp3 that they think it’s all trash and cannot be quality. That’s why a quality original source is so important! Your mp3 is only as good as your source. 95% of my collection comes from transcription discs or as low-generation as I can get.

Here are the top reasons why most current mp3 encodes are bad:

• SPEED: 90% of OTR mp3s in any bitrate are generally 20 seconds or more offspeed, I’ve found, mostly on the slow side. A “30” minute show was NEVER over 30 minutes, except if something else is on the original recording, or in the rare case of an audition. A network show is generally about 29:05 to 29:45. I’ve worked with a lot of transcriptions, so I learned the correct pitch of most major shows, so I can correct the speed of reels pretty accurately.

• SOURCE Most mp3s come from cassettes, a loathsome format that is the enemy of quality. I have less than 20 keeper cassettes in my archive, and they all came from a reel-to-reel source. Anyway, most mp3s came from multi-generational cassettes (i.e. they are far away from the original source) and sound muddy, offspeed, bassy, etc.. I never collect any show that is not very low-gen or from transcription. I’ll tell you later where to find quality sources.

• BITRATE: I’m going to come out and be honest; 32 is never, never okay! Why ruin a quality show by doing a 32/22? There’s no reason to. One never sees Terry Salomonson or the people from the First Generation Radio Archives doing that. It’s because they know better! CDs are cheap nowadays; one doesn’t need 50,000 shows per disc. Use at least 64/44 MONO for OTR – I use 80.

• DIGITAL ARTIFACTS: I was listening to some 32s of 30 minute Yours Truly, Johnny Dollar shows, and they were a perfect example of what not to do in an encode. They had bad digital artifacts (glug-glug-glug and such noise), which comes mainly in low-bitrate, but it’s when the computer can’t keep up because there are too many tasks going on. You don’t need to be playing a video game while encoding OTR! When encoding, have only that open. The Yours Truly, Johnny Dollar shows were also offspeed, 32nd generation, and just a pain to listen to.

• BAD CLEANING: This is also related under digital artifacts – it’s also a reason that I don’t clean up shows. If a show has any kind of significant surface noise, even the best softwares are going to leave an undesirable digital chatter noise. CEDAR is the best hardware/software (it comes in both types) but as it’s grossly overpriced (tens-of-thousands of dollars), most people, including myself, don’t have access to it. My advice if you do clean a show, always keep the unaltered original, too. Technology is always improving.

• BAD EQUIPMENT. Even if one has a from-transcription dub, it’s going to sound poor if it’s from bad equipment. This is true of a lot of 1960s and 70s dubs in which the dubber used a transcription turntable from the 1940s. This is generally a big no-no, as most cartridges, except the GE VR-1 and VR-2 sound like garbage, and the turntables generally have very high rumble.

A seemingly little thing like RCA cables is important too. Esoteric Sound (http://www.esotericsound.com) sells reasonably priced high-end RCA cables. You don’t want the cheap stuff to hook up to your equipment. Monster (Continued on Page 10)
cable works, but is unnecessarily expensive, and Esoteric Sound’s Audio Advantage cable is cheaper and better.
Now, to where you can get good-quality OTR sources. There are transcription discs, but they’re quite expensive, and you have to have expensive equipment to properly do them. A lot of dealers are selling their original reels now. Ted Davenport is selling his master reels at 1.50 each postpaid – they’re not quite as good as Ed Carr’s but if you get the right ones, they sound nice. I can spot most of the old-school dealers’ /collectors’ reels by sight, so I’ve bought a bunch at the convention.
• Ed Carr (edcarr@enter.net, I think that’s still his email); The rare times I buy OTR, he’s my go-to guy. His prices are $2.50 each for audio CDs, which is unbeatable for that quality. I usually have to time-correct stuff from his reel-to-reels, but that’s normal for any reel, and that’s easy to do. I prefer his reel stuff, but his cleaned-up audio CDs are generally nice.
• Terry Salomonson (http://www.audio-classics.com); Terry has the largest collection of OTR around and he has access to a ton of stuff from the original source. His cleaned-up CDs are well done.
• First Generation Radio Archives; I don’t like certain facets of this group (http://www.radioarchives.org), such as members having access to a miniscule fraction of their library, but their sound quality is (generally) top-notch. Their shows are very expensive unless you catch it on sale.
• Of these, my top picks soundwise are Ed Carr, the First Generation Radio Archives, and Terry Salomonson. The rest of the mainstream dealers are pretty much hit and miss. Radio Spirits is not a good quality dealer in my opinion. Their older sets are chopped up and time compressed (the Cinnamon Bear #1 episode, for example is 11:57, the correct time is 14:50.), and the newer ones are very poorly cleaned. I’m not picking on them to be mean, but the “cleaned” samples on BRC Productions site are absolutely dreadful. I’ve heard their uncleansed stuff can be pretty decent though. Pat McCoy (reels, cassettes) is hit or miss. I’ve never tried Crabapple Sound, but I believe they have a lot of band remotes, which most other dealers don’t have. Heritage Radio Classics (Thomas Heathwood) has pretty decent sound.

There’s a vast amount I can cover on this topic, but that should cover it for the first installment. If there’s interest, I’ll revisit this topic in further columns.

In conclusion, mp3 is a super format if one uses it in the way it’s intended – as a convenient format for storage and listening, and not as an archival format. I have written a “How to Encode Properly Guide.” I’d like to work out a central place where to have a reference copy, so I don’t have to keep emailing copies.
Ted Davenport Follow-Up

Doug Hopkinson

Late last week it was brought to my attention that the man who has been using the name “Radio Memories” for his podcast website was once again at the center of some heated conversation within the Yahoo moderators group. He surfaced to defend himself claiming that he could not change the name as he had already incorporated before he knew about Ted’s company with the same name.

If one is to believe this, it would mean that he would have had to have incorporated months ago when many, many people pointed this out to him. As you all may recall, he had also previously claimed to have registered for trademark rights, which has now been proven false. A concerned member of the moderators group contacted me for help in verifying the gentleman’s latest claim.

With the help of the internet and the State of Texas’ Comptroller’s and Secretary of State’s offices, I learned that this man had indeed registered a Limited Liability Company using the name “Radio Memories Network.” According to the Texas Secretary of State’s office, an LLC is not a true corporation and therefore has no date of incorporation. It only has a formation date, which was officially recorded as December 29, 2005.

At the time this was less than two weeks from the date I made the phone calls to Texas. Less than two weeks ago and several months ago are significantly different. After I relayed the information, the concerned member confronted the man via a posting in the moderator’s group and, after an overnight delay, responded quite defensively that he owed no one anything, that he would not change the name, and that this was his final answer.

The member’s response to the man was that that was not the answer that was wanted, but it was the answer that was expected. The next day the man replied once again. This time he said that he will make changes. He has an opportunity in the next 60 days to make a name change. He hopes that by doing this he will earn the good will of the OTR community. He is asking for suggestions for a new name for his site. Interestingly, he closed his post by saying that he cannot make an immediate change but will do so within the next 90 days.

I’m not sure why the beginning of his post said 60 days and at the end he needed 90 days. The fact is that he has now stated that he will change the name and has given a time frame in which it will be done. This is a good thing. We can all wait and watch. I know I will. Anyone wanting to offer a suggestion for a new name for his site is welcome to do so. Please forward them to OldRadioTimes@yahoo.com and we will make sure they go to the proper person.

Standards for OTRR Certified Series

Roger Hohenbrink

The Old-Time Radio Researchers are always working to bring out better and higher standard certified series so the latest series will always be a higher standard than the older certified series.

Anytime we redo a certified series we will bring it up to the newer and higher standards. Even some of our older certified sets may not have the correct id3 tags that we have started to put out certified sets. I did not redo the id3 tags but this will be corrected in the future as we put out a new version of the older certified series.

This was all about growing pains and not knowing what we needed to make a certified set. When I get a series in it takes many hours to get it ready to burn a certified series. It is like a director doing a final cut of a movie: taking all the pieces and putting them in the right form for that series.

* We run the series through a mp3 gain program so all the episodes will be approximately the same level. Older series will be run through the gain program as we redo them.

* We make up audio briefs for each series. These will be added to older series as updated.

* We redo id3 tags for each episode.

To help maintain the high standard of a certified series I hope that all members of this group and of other groups will work to keep these standards by including all files on that certified CD that are part of the certified series. Do not add or take away any files when creating a copy for yourself or for others. Keep the certified CD the same as received.

Remember, it takes all the members doing their part to maintain the higher standards. Any changes to the certified set that are made by a member of our group or another group after the set is made public negates its status as a certified copy.
Broadway Follow-Up
Irene Heinstein

David Oxford's report on his Broadway is My Beat research mentioned the Anthony Ross shows. He gave the time period as 2/27/49 - 6/12/49. I think it is actually 2/27/49-5/29/49, a total of fourteen episodes.

The New York Times shows air dates for the East Coast show under the name Broadway's My Beat or Broadway is My Beat. However the last listing for the program in the 5:30 time slot on Sundays is for 5/29/49. On 6/5/49 and 6/12/49 the Green Lama was listed in that time slot. If 5/29/49 was, as it appears, the last program, that would be fourteen Anthony Ross programs. The first listing for the Larry Thors [sic] tenure is Thursday 7/7/49 at 8:00 on WCBS. They eventually got Larry's name right and dropped the “s”.

Anthony Ross in Broadway is My Beat aired on Sundays in NY at 5:30 pm. on WCBS (In the March 6, 1949 edition of the Times there is a picture of Anthony Ross).

About Anthony Ross: (1909-1955) - In brief he was a notable Broadway actor, originating the role of “The Gentleman Caller” in the premiere run of Tennessee Williams “The Glass Menagerie” costarring with the great actress Laurette Taylor. When I was in high school I saw Anthony Ross in the original run of “Bus Stop” which I just learned by reading my old playbill. He died during the run of the play. He appeared in quite a few films in the early 1950s.

The 3rd Revised Ultimate History of Network Radio Programming and Guide to ALL Circulating Shows - A Jay Hickerson Publication

Jay Hickerson announced the 3rd revision to his excellent book in the fall of last year.

The rise of the computer and mp3s has brought an influx of collectors who may not be familiar with Jay and his work, but he has been involved in the old-time radio community for many years, and is one of most well known and respected researchers working today. He is one of the sponsors of the Old-Time Radio Convention that has been held in Newark, New Jersey for the past 24 years. He has also published “Hello Again”, an OTR newsletter for over 35 years.

The Ultimate History had its origins back in the late 80s and has evolved over the years to become one of the “must have” books for any serious collector of old-time radio programs. I bought one of the first copies and have made sure that I stay current with each edition and supplement.

This edition is 540+ pages, spiral bound, 8x11 for laying flat. Mine is always open beside the keyboard for easy reference. It contains listings for over 6,000 national, regional, local, and international radio shows, and covers years ranging all the way from the late 20s to the current period.

Each listing contains broadcast dates, sponsors, air times, network, and in a lot of cases names of performers. Each listing also contains the number of shows that are known to exist for that series. Additionally, and a big plus for collectors, he lists the source of those shows for people wishing to obtain them for their collections.

This book represents a lifetime accumulation of information and materials. Much research went into this and Jay continues to update as newly discovered sources become available.

If publishing this fount of material was not enough, Jay includes many pages of extras, such as the addresses you can obtain many of these episodes from, addresses of folks helping prepare the logs, OTR publishing companies, and publications and clubs devoted to old-time radio.

I can truthfully say that this is one book that I could not do without, and I strongly urge each of our readers to get this book. Jay is offering it to our readers for only $42.00 (ten dollars off the normal price), which includes shipping. You must mention that you read about it in ‘The Times’ to get this special price.

Old-Time Radio Memories
Frank Passage

I was born in 1949, as dramatic radio was in its decline. I have no recollection of hearing any shows in my early years, possibly because I grew up in the shadow of New York City. I suspect TV took an early hold there.

My parents would talk occasionally about the old radio shows but that was about it. Still, radio always held magic for me. My dad was a casual shortwave radio listener and I got interested in it at an early age. Eventually, I got my ham radio license.

In the early-1960’s, my main interest was listening to distant AM broadcast stations. I remember hearing some CBS Radio Mystery Theater shows during that period and I enjoyed them. In the mid-1960’s, a local station aired old radio shows on Sunday evening, starting at 6PM and running to 11PM. It included mostly crime and mystery shows, always starting with the Lone Ranger and ending with the Haunted Hour or a similar spooky show. A friend and I used to listen to them in our “radio shack,” a storage bin in the basement of our apartment house, on my Grandfather’s 1935 RCA with only the dial light to relieve the darkness. Fond memories, those!

I bought my first radio show around then, Orson Welles’ War of the Worlds, on record. I still have it.

In high school I was into building projects. One of them was an AM transmitter. I had a friend who was into audio and he set up a recording studio. For a short time, we joined forces. I wrote scripts for my own radio shows and we’d record them and transmit the results over the AM transmitter. The range was terrible! We were lucky if we could hear it in the next room! But it sure was fun hearing your own production.

After high school, I went to tech school for electronics and eventually went on to college and forgot about OTR until 1994. That’s when I discovered the Internet Old-Time Radio Digest and was surprised to discover people actually collected OTR!

Remembering how much I enjoyed listening to them back in the 60’s, I subscribed to the Digest and started finding out what was available and where I could get tapes of the shows. I procured a bunch of OTR vendor catalogs and poured through them, making lists of series I wanted and shows that were available in those series.

I soon realized I had written logs for myself. I cleaned up a bunch of them and started posting them to the OTR digest. Lou Genco (who maintains one of the best OTR sites out there, http://www.old-time.com) started putting my logs on his site. Over time, I got better sources of information and the logs improved.

I’m often asked me why I write them and post logs. I write them to learn more about the shows. It’s amazing how much you can learn by just trying to find enough information to write a short description!

Of course, there’s definitely an element of fun in putting a log together, like working on a jigsaw or crossword puzzle. Why I post them? A fellow researcher

December Web Report
Jim Beshires

The OTRR website continues to do big business and draws many new people to our group who might not otherwise enjoy this great hobby. When I went to compile the figures for December I noticed that our server had a different web analyzer in place.

Upon inquiring, it appears that the one we were using was under-counting hits and events. This new one showed a dramatically different picture - one that more accurately reflects the popularity of our site.

December 2005 shows 12,976 visits to the site from 115 countries. 309,645 hits were recorded and 235,310 files were downloaded. This represents a threefold increase over December 2004.

Totals for 2005 include - 97,498 visits, 2,098,918 hits, and 1,497,180 files downloaded.

The art gallery continues to be one of our most popular features with over 2,000 downloads. I believe that we have the largest collection of old-time radio related artwork on the web.

Of course, OTTER is a great draw for the site with 225 downloading the complete program, 603 downloads of the database, and 1096 downloads of the OTTER manual.

The WIKI is probably the second most popular feature. A large number of people visit there to check to see if their episodes are correct. We invite everyone to contribute to the ‘First Lines Of Dialogue’ project that the WIKI hosts.

The program I use to check the ratings of the site in various search engines was basically a draw this month. We increased and decreased in the same number.

once pointed out that we're just building on the hard work of researchers that went before us. That’s so true! So, posting the logs is my way of saying thanks to those individuals, of “giving back” to the hobby. Hopefully, having the logs freely available will help to keep the hobby alive.

It's also a great way to meet new friends. So many times, I've received emails from folks who found an error or wanted to add something to a log. I believe my logs are as good as they are thanks in a large part to reader feedback.

Besides writing logs I also collect the shows. I have a small but respectable cassette collection of about 6,000 shows. My kids discovered that they could get those 20-tape Radio Spirits sets pretty cheap from Price Club and they made great presents for a guy for whom it's hard to get presents.

Besides those, most of my cassettes came from OTR vendors such as Ed Carr, Steve Kelez, Ted Davenport and scores of others. I've got a lot of mp3 CDs but SO often, the audio quality is just not there and the shows are very difficult to listen to, especially in a car where I do most of my listening. They make a long commute go by very fast! Have you ever got SO wrapped up in a show, you missed your exit? I have!

In the past few years, there's been an increasing amount of pressure from work and home, curtailing the amount of free time I have, especially with kids now in college. I'm hoping that will change in a couple years. In the meanwhile, I try to keep my hand in the hobby by updating the logs, occasionally introducing a new one.

I'm very gratified to see others are picking up the torch. I believe mine were among the first OTR logs available for free on the internet. When I started there were only a few OTR-related web sites. Now, there are thousands of sites offering a lot of quality information. I believe these old shows will never disappear, just change the media on which they're available.

The 39-Man March

International Jack Benny Fan Club President (and OTRR member) Laura Leff is leading an effort for the United States Postal Office to issue a Jack Benny stamp in 2006. Look for a write-up of her efforts in coming months. In the meantime, some of you may be interested in the 39-Man March, a rally scheduled for February 15 in Washington, D.C. Below is the itinerary as outlined on the group’s website (http://www.JackBenny.org).

What: The 39 Man March is a march on Washington to demonstrate support for Jack Benny on a 39-cent stamp. After the rally, private meetings will be held with Congresspeople supporting the stamp, and other attendees will be invited to join an after-rally event

When: Pre-rally planning, sign making, etc.: February 13, 2006, 7:00 PM
The 39-Man March and rally: February 14, 2006 from noon to approximately 2:00 PM
After-rally event: February 14, 2006, time TBD

Where: All events will be held in Washington, D.C.
Pre-rally planning, sign making, etc.: Location TBD
The 39 Man March: Starts at Washington Monument and ends at the U.S. Capitol
The 39 Man March rally: U.S. Capitol
After-rally event: Location TBD, either Library of Congress or Smithsonian Institute

Contact Laura (president@jackbenny.org) for more details
Researchers Make the Cut

In further recognition of the work being done by the Old-Time Radio Researchers, Jim Beshires was notified via email that our group is referenced in a new old-time radio book written by David and Susan Siegel. Following is a summary of the book by David.

Bitten by the bug that has affected so many of us OTR fanatics, Susan decided that scholars writing about popular culture during the 40 year period that marked radio's golden age as well as OTR collectors and enthusiasts needed a comprehensive resource that would identify the libraries and other institutions that held the scripts, recordings, contracts and personal papers of thousands of professionals who worked in the industry during its most productive years. More information would be uncovered, Susan believed, and more books and articles written, if only there was a reference that would serve as a road map to the right sources.

After almost a year of research her efforts have uncovered
-- 2,300 Special Collections in academic and public libraries, historical societies, museums, corporate archives and privately held collections.
-- 1,400 Bibliographic citations grouped into 54 subject categories
-- 100+ non commercial research oriented Internet sites
-- A comprehensive Index that integrates all 3,800 listings and which can be searched by program, person or subject/genre.

The book sells for $48.00 plus $5 for media mail shipping and handling or $10.00 for priority mail and can be ordered from our web site, www.bookhunterpress.com/radio or by calling us at (914) 245-6608. We accept Visa and Mastercard.

Newspaper Research Update

Jim Jones

Researching archived newspapers continues to reveal substantial OTR information. The following includes some of the research effort by members of this group.

Mr. and Mrs. North: Last month Ben K., Phil H., and I collaborated on a Mr. and Mrs. North effort. The results were nothing less than outstanding. All play dates for the series was either confirmed or established. About fifty new show titles were discovered. Additionally, another thirty show synopses were also found. OTTER has been updated to reflect these new discoveries. Confirmation of accurate play dates allowed the addition of episode numbers. Obviously, our OTTER log is the most complete, most accurate and only numbered MMN log available. Sent updates to Jay H and will offer MMN log to Jerry H.

Barrie Craig: All Barrie Craig play dates have been confirmed. In doing so, an additional thirty new episode titles have been discovered. OTTER has been updated and play dates have been forwarded to Jay H. I have provided a BC log for Jerry H. However, Jerry possesses one show which is in conflict with the OTTER log. Clorinda has ordered this show, and once it arrives we hope to resolve this conflict. As this show seems to be unique we will also make it available on the hub.

Bold Venture: Being a syndicated show (vs. network), Bold Venture is very difficult to track. Newspaper logs indicate only 52 shows were broadcast. However, Mike Martini, of Media Heritage (owns Ziv Production archives) has assured me that 78 shows were indeed produced. He is also trying to provide me with titles for the missing episodes. Since it does not appear the show ran for 78 consecutive weeks WE WILL CONTINUE TO USE THE PROJECTED PRODUCTION PLAY DATES INSTEAD OF ACTUAL PLAY DATES. Hopefully, more updates next month.

FBI at Peace and War: Ben tackled this mammoth project. The show ran for fourteen years. By researching several newspapers for all available play dates and titles, he was able to establish an accurate log confirming 689 episodes. This updated log has been submitted and OTTER has been updated.

As reported in last month’s Old Radio Times, the practice of researching scanned archived newspapers is a fairly new process to those of us in the OTR collecting field. This vast and previously unavailable database is providing a virtually untapped resource of OTR data. New broadcast dates, episode titles and show times are being uncovered from archived newspaper logs. Discoveries of forgotten series with new dates and episode titles are being found daily.

Most of this new information confirms older data obtained from previous sources. Some conflicts with older information making us realize the need to update some previously acquired data.

Remembering

Harvey Markfield

Sharing groups are more then just offering, distributing and burning; it goes much deeper then that. Many deep, lasting friendships have been formed from these groups and besides distributions much knowledge has been gleamed.

I may have a more intimate relationship with many of the members then most as my phone service allows unlimited calls through out the US and Canada. I have taken advantage of this situation by being in voice contact with well over 75 members, many on a quite frequent basis.

One individual that I spoke to at least four times a week was Jim Rambo. Jim was grateful for all his blessings which included his daughter and granddaughter. He loved the hobby and was not just a collector but enjoyed not only listening but viewing all the material received. He always made it his business to thank me for all that he received from myself and the groups he was a member of.

It was a pleasure to speak to him as the best that I can say was that he was truly a “man.” He told me about five weeks ago that he was diagnosed with pancreatic cancer and it was inoperable. I spoke to him daily while he was in the hospital but for the last two weeks of his life it was impossible as he had high doses of morphine to kill the pain.

I miss Jim and I miss the moments we shared together.

Arch Oboler’s Devil and Mr. O
Roger Hohenbrink & Ryan Ellett

Stay with us and be on the lookout for the next certified series the Devil and Mr. O, soon to be released by the Old-Time Radio Researchers Group.

The Devil and Mr. O was a syndicated series of twenty-six episodes broadcast between 1970 and 1973, during a wave of old-time radio nostalgia. Rather than consisting of original material, as the CBS Radio Mystery Theater would when it debuted in 1974, the Devil and Mr. O was rebroadcasts of Arch Obler’s Lights Out series broadcast between 1942 and 1943. Arch Obler, considered one of the most influential writers of the old-time radio era, introduced the episodes himself during the ‘70’s repeats.

Lights Out first hit the airwaves in 1935 under the direction of Wyllis Cooper, himself considered a pioneer in radio drama. A year later Obler took over writing and directing duties. Though the episodes, like many horror programs of its day, do not hold up as well as other old-time radio genres, the series is nevertheless noteworthy for its sound effects. Whether portraying electrocuted bodies, broken bones, cannibals, or, most famously, a body being turned inside-out, the soundmen never failed to provide a chill.

Fortunately, though little of Cooper’s Lights Out work has been uncovered, a generous sampling of Obler’s horror and gore are readily available, in part because of the episodes repeated as the Devil and Mr. O.

The Old-Time Radio Researchers are especially proud to include in this set of the Devil and Mr. O a station promotional done by Arch Obler himself from the original early-70’s run. Member Paul Urbahns was working as a DJ at a radio station during the time the series aired and had the promo on reel to reel.

This set will also have some great audio briefs done by Michael Myers (owner of OTRDAYS Yahoo group, one of the other radio groups that distribute our certified series). Also on the set will be the Wiki first line for each episode and some great art done by Dennis Hager and Roger Hohenbrink as a joint project.

Further thanks goes to the members who worked long and hard on this series:

As one of the researchers, I’ve needed access to the Otter database to check dates, titles and the existence of episodes. I’ve also wanted to use it to manage my old-time radio collection. However, because I use a Mac and Otter is a Windows-based program, that hasn’t been possible. I’m pleased to say that this is about to change.

Mel Patrick of Wabbit Wanch Design has completed beta testing his software, “OTRapedia,” which is capable of downloading the Otter database so it can be searched by series and episode title. It will also globally search all episodes within all series for a particular date or for a particular word in a title (perhaps a guest name).

OTRapedia features a “file manager drawer” that allows you to open and view the contents of a series folder on any drive, CD or DVD, and it will play the episodes to help verify that they belong in that particular folder. The program’s main window displays Otter’s episode information so you can match your file titles with Otter using shortcuts that do away with manually entering dates, titles and ID prefixes, and after this is done, you will be able to reassign ID3 tags to the files. Importing the files in the file manager drawer creates a link so OTRapedia knows where your files are located.

Another feature is a dialog window that displays a show’s title, years of broadcast, number of episodes, the genre, an ID prefix and on what media the series folder can be found. You can also write up your own description of the series and add in artwork to this window.

A demo version, with all of OTRapedia’s functions working as described in the manual, is available for download. You are allowed to work on two series titles and all of their episodes to test the software. The cost of this shareware program is $12 and it can be downloaded at http://www.wabbitwanch.com.

Wistful Vistas
Notes From the Editor

Happy 2006! I hope everyone had a safe and enjoyable holiday season and is off to a good start in the New Year.

We here at the Times were thrilled with the enthusiasm generated by our premier issue. While we certainly thought we had a good product, there was a bit of anxiety as it was mailed out to everyone.

I’m proud to say that, as good as the first issue was, I think this issue is even better. We received a lot of constructive feedback and have addressed many of those concerns. Article slicing has been kept to a minimum, creating a more readable format. We’ve included more pictures and old-time advertisements from our website to break up all the text.

As I stated last month, this is your newsletter. Continued feedback will only raise the quality of future issues.

This month we are extremely excited to include an article by Jack French, a legendary old-time radio researcher. This is another step in solidifying the place of the Old-Time Radio Researchers in the greater OTR world.

Though Mr. French is not a member of our group, the editorial board believes that a long-term goal of this publication is to be a central source of information not only for this organization, but also for the entire OTR community. Our work with Ted Davenport (who was not a member of the group when that story started) and publication of Mr. French’s article both further that goal.

Fear not, however! You’ll find plenty of news provided by group members. John Liska has written an excellent review of his work in identifying the existing Amos ’n’ Andy Christmas episodes. Travis Connors builds on his previous article and explains how mp3 does not automatically mean poor listening quality. Famed OTR logger Frank Passage gives us a glimpse into his OTR background. Prominent Australian old-time radio historian Ian Grieves makes his first contribution in a discussion about unheralded sources he’s used to uncover information.

Another goal of this magazine is to provide a forum for the discussion and review of old-time radio research. In this spirit, Irene Heinstein follows up on last month’s piece on Broadway is My Beat (penned by David Oxford) by offering further clarification about some air dates.

As I said last month, read the Times, share it with others, and consider how you can contribute.
Pending Series Upgrades

Otter News

While researching archived newspaper articles for OTR information we sometimes come across a show description which does not include a formal, published or correct title. These descriptions, or show synopsis’, along with the published newspaper date can be an essential element in correctly identifying a particular show or series episode. When titles are unavailable, we have begun to include these short descriptions in the OTTER log.

The following example from MMN illustrates this new format:

55/01/04 583 <synop> (A stool pigeon, cop, thief & two-timing woman are partners in crime)
Buy – Sell – Trade

Anyone interested in trading raw ET .wav dubs please contact Cliff at cliff_marsland@yahoo.com.

Don’t throw away those old OTR newsletters from other groups. Contact Ryan at OldRadioTimes@yahoo.com. I can’t pay much for them, but I can probably cover shipping.

Reader Feedback

Just a quick note to wish you well on your new venture. It is always nice to see a new publication on otr and your group seems determined to approach the research and enjoyment of otr in a fresh and considered fashion. I do have a comment on the format of the letter. I think it might be better to keep the articles complete and do away with the jumps. In Adobe format it is difficult to keep scrolling down to find the continuation of the article. I read 20-40 newspapers a day for my work and find jumps to be hard enough to follow by flipping through a paper and back to the beginning, but jumping back and forth on an e-document is difficult. I found myself asking if I wanted to finish the article at all and the information was too valuable to blow off by reason of formatting.

I'm looking forward to your next issue and am taking my time enjoying the wealth of features on your website. I really think your group is starting with a bang and will make an important contribution to the otr world. Thanks for your hard work.

Steve

Many readers noted the difficulty of following articles which were continued over many pages. We tried to remedy that problem in this issue and believe it makes for much smoother reading.

Neat idea & format! Thank you so much.

Joe S.

Wow. Fantastic. [Insert your own favorite superlative phrase here.] Thanks so much for putting together a robust, informative, and entertaining newsletter. I do quite a bit of writing and publish in my own field regularly. I know how much effort it takes to put together a quality publication. Lots of people THINK they can put out a 16 page 'zine with very little trouble. In my experience, most of them are delusional; it takes a tremendous amount of effort and time. I strongly encourage you to continue your magazine and I hope to be a regular contributor.

Troy H.

Thanks, Troy. We don’t expect future issues to always be quite so robust but it is a testament to all the great work being done by members of the group.

I thought the newsletter was great. It really had a lot of information in it. Who do I need to contact to see about contributing to it. Any help is appreciated.

Thanks

Shane W.

Anyone interested in making a contribution should contact Ryan at OldRadioTimes@yahoo.com. It takes a lot of writers to put this newsletter out every month so everyone is encouraged to participate.
