NICE WORK, H-H! BUT HOW'D YOU SAVE ME FROM EXECUTION?

IT WAS EASY! I VOLUNTEERED US FOR A

SPECIAL DIPLOMATIC ASSIGNMENT! WE GOT TO PREVENT A WAR BETWEEN THE DOG PEOPLE AND THEIR DEADLIEST ENEMIES!

YOU DIDN'T SAVE ME--YOU ONLY CHANGED THE EXECUTION SITE!

IT SHOULDN'T BE HARD! THESE OTHER PEOPLE--THE PEOPLE OF SKINTREVIN--LOOK MUCH LIKE HUMANS! SO THEY'LL WELCOME YOU!

NOT IF I SHOW YOU, DOG FACE!

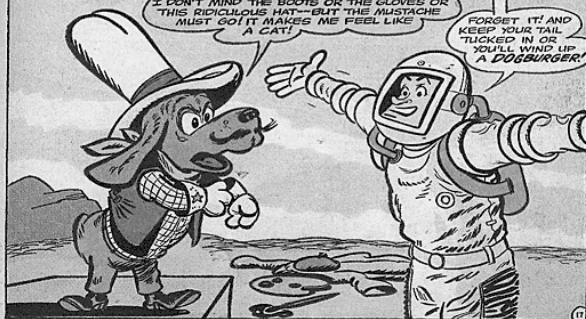

HMM! BEFORE I WAS THE OUTSIDER IN A LAND OF DOG PEOPLE! BUT NOW THE SHOE IS ON THE OTHER PAW! I'VE GOT AN IDEA!

THIS WILL BE MY MASTERPIECE! I HAVEN'T CREATED A DISGUISE LIKE THIS SINCE THE NIGHT I SLIPPED MY 80-YEAR-OLD UNCLE HOBART INTO A BROWNIE MEETING!

PERFECT! I'VE MADE YOU THE FINEST SYMBOL OF EARTH--A MIDGET COWBOY!

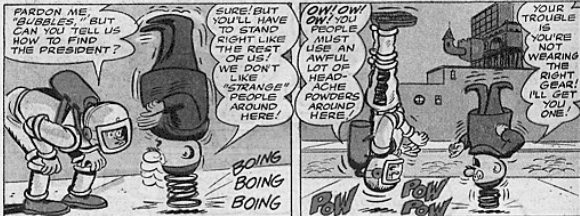

I DON'T MIND THE BOOTS OR THE GLOVES OR THIS RIDICULOUS HAT--BUT THE MUSTACHE MUST GO! IT MAKES ME FEEL LIKE A CAT!

FORGET IT! AND KEEP YOUR TAIL TUCKED IN OR YOU'LL WIND UP A DOGBURGER!

One of my friends took his dog to a veterinarian on Wilshire Boulevard. "My dog is always chasing sports cars," he complained.

"So what?" said the pooch doc. "That's not unusual."

"I know—but he catches them, and buries them in the back yard!"

Which reminds me of two of Harvard-Harvard's pals who met on a street corner. "I feel so poorly, just tired all the time and nervous," complained the first hound.

"You should do something about that," said the other. "Have you thought of going to a psychiatrist?"

"Good gracious, no! You know I'm not allowed on couches!"

Here's a sign I spotted, incidentally, on the back of a sports car zooming down the Freeway the other day: "HIT SOMEONE YOUR OWN SIZE."

But I couldn't help overhearing a conversation recently that went something like this. The policeman was very angry as he approached a woman whom he'd flagged to stay on the sidewalk instead of crossing against the traffic. "Lady," he shouted, "don't you know what it means when I hold up my hand?"

"I ought to," she cracked. "For the past thirty years, I've been a schoolteacher!"

And my favorite comment is the one made by one woman driver to another: "The part about parking I don't like is the noisy crash!" How about that?

Let me make one more crack about the subject, and I'll quit. This remark I made some time ago has become a classic because a lot of joke books have reprinted it. "Teaching your wife to play golf is the reverse of teaching her to drive a car. With golf, she never hits anything. With a car, she never seems to miss."

By the way, did you hear the one about the baby sardine who saw its first submarine and swam off in terror to its mother. "Don't be frightened, darling,"

she calmed him. "It's only a can of people."

Because of the subject matter of this issue's story, I should get in at least one story about the men of our missile age. Not long ago, I had the opportunity to meet a space scientist. His face was cut in several places and patched with adhesive strips. "What happened to you?" I asked, after introductions had been made.

"I was shaved this morning by a man who took highest honors at college, graduated from the country's top technical institutes, speaks four languages and is considered to be one of the nation's leading authorities on space engineering."

"Wow!" I said, trying to control my amazement. "But if he's so learned, how come he's a barber?" "He isn't," he said. "I shaved myself today for the first time!"

At that same dinner, I met one of our jet pilots who'd put in most of his flying time in the Pacific on both combat and non-combat missions. On one of his patrols, he was forced to make an emergency landing on a strange island. Brought before the native chief, he explained what happened. In reply, the chief exploded in a series of raucous noises: "Screech, s-s-s-s, whistle, honk, z-z-z," and then in perfect English, added, "You're most welcome here."

"I'll try to repair my radio, which conked out, and send a message for help," said the pilot. Once again, the chief preceded his remarks with the same strange sputtering noises before answering, "Don't hurry, and if there's anything we can do to be of assistance, merely ask."

Our pilot tried to avoid commenting on the unusual noises, but finally couldn't resist asking, "Tell me, chief, where did you learn such perfect English?"

"Screech, s-s-s-s, whistle, honk, z-z-z," answered the chief, issuing the preliminary series of honks and whistles. "Short-wave radio!"

And to wind up with a topical note, Summer is the season when kids slam the doors they left open all Winter. It's the time of the year when they go to camps, you know, those places where boys and girls go for mother's vacation!

Don't forget—the big-bargain subscription offer is still available! See the advertisement in this issue for details.
