A DATE!

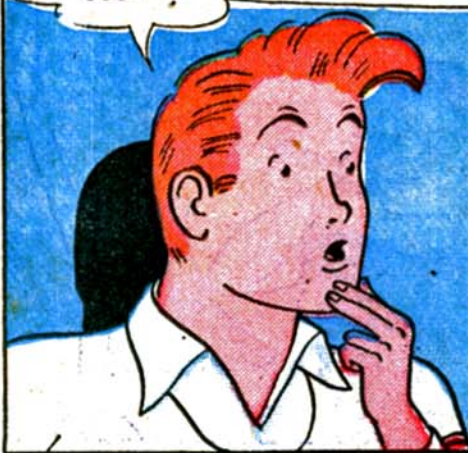

WHAT A FUNNY THING FOR MITZI TO ASK! I'D BE WORRIED IF RANDOLPH DIDN'T--

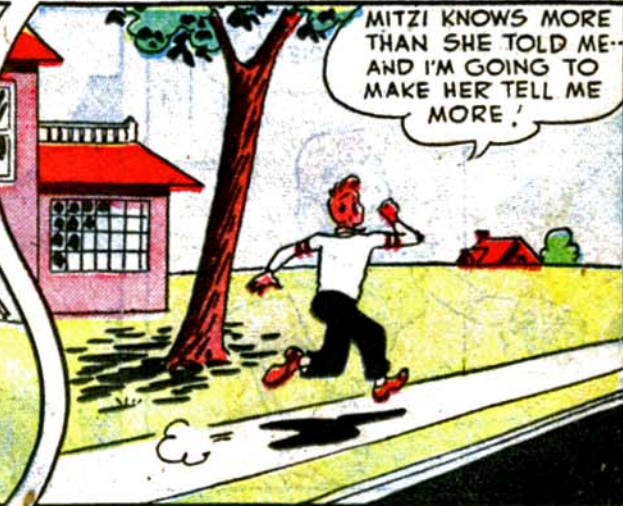

RANDOLPH! HUH? I AM WORRIED! WHY SHOULD RANDY INVITE ME AND NOT JUDY?

GOLLY! MAYBE RANDY FEELS SORRY FOR ME BECAUSE JUDY IS GOING OUT WITH SOMEONE ELSE!

MITZI KNOWS MORE THAN SHE TOLD ME-- AND I'M GOING TO MAKE HER TELL ME MORE!

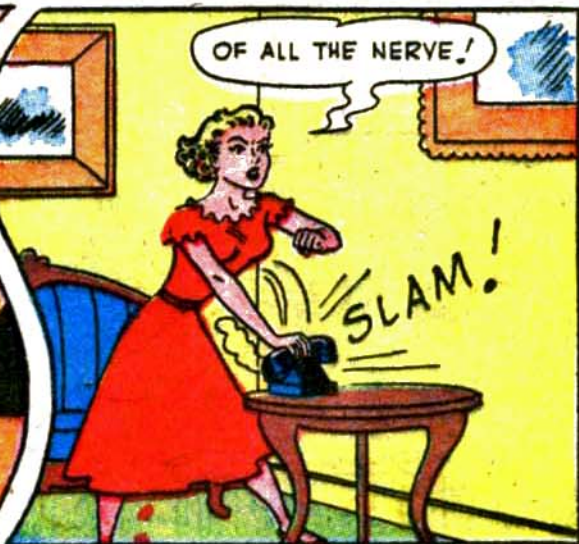

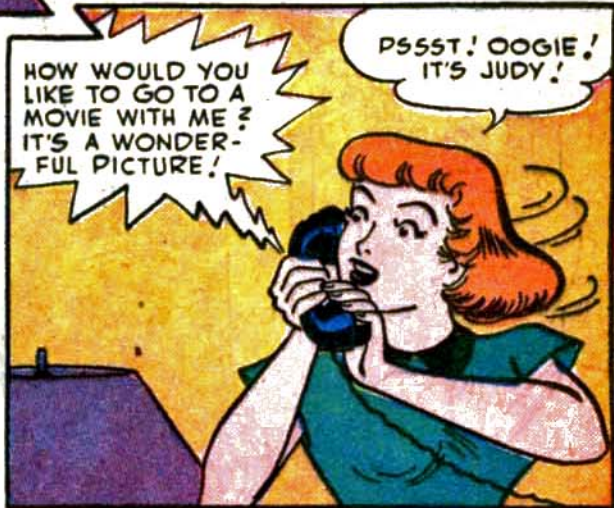

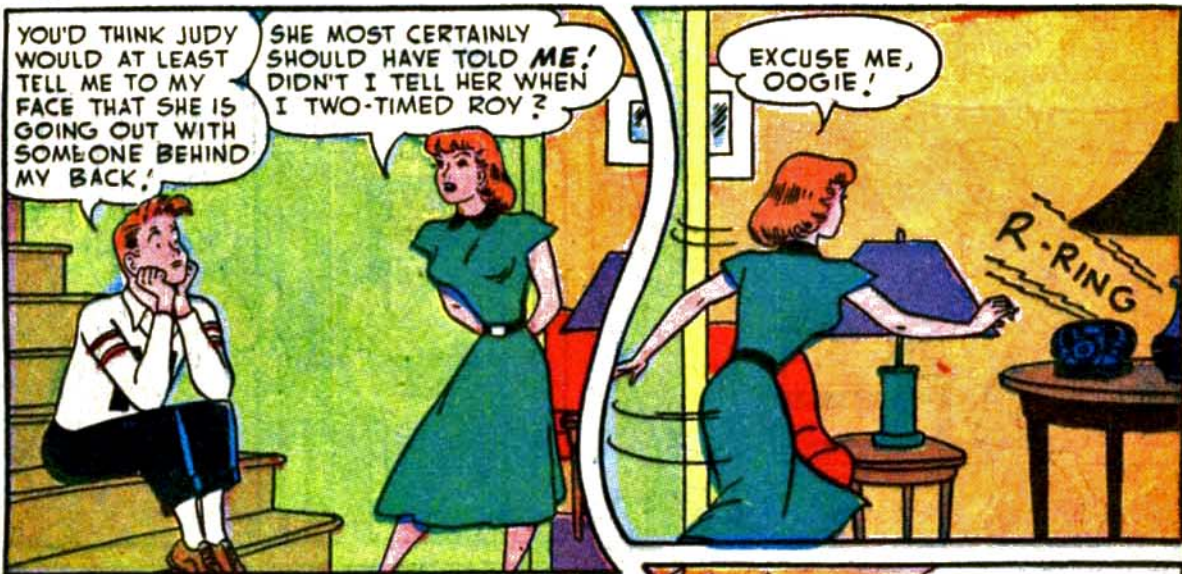

I THOUGHT IT OVER, MITZI! IT COULD BE THAT JUDY HAS A DATE WITH SOMEONE ELSE!

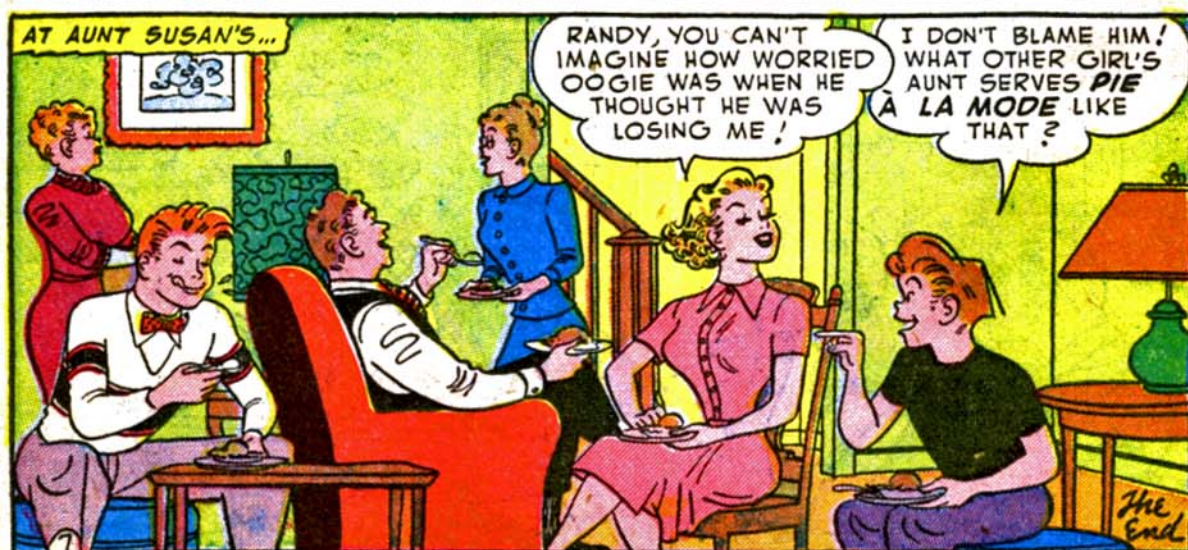

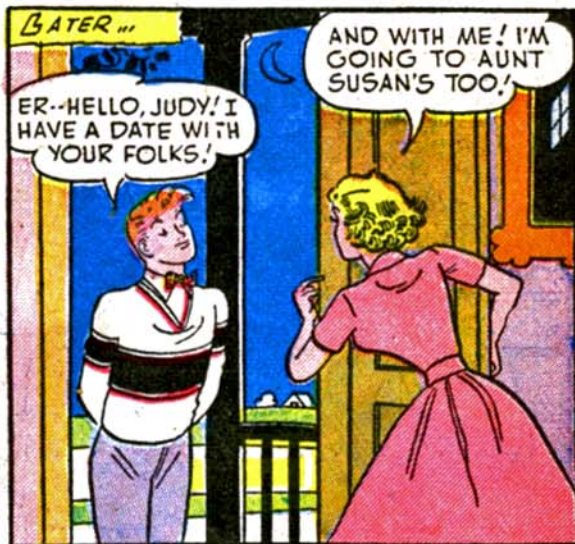

COME IN, OOGIE!

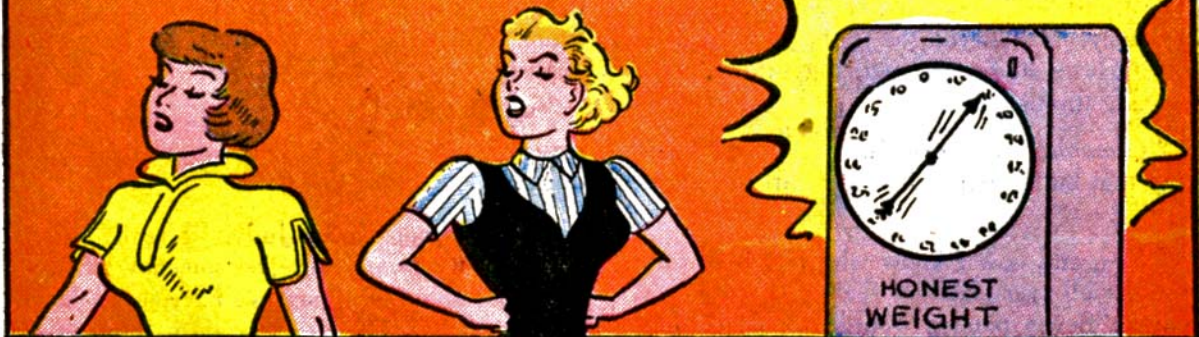

ALL I KNOW IS, RANDOLPH TOLD ME THAT JUDY PROMISED SOMEONE SHE'D GO TO A MOVIE-- AND THAT SOMEONE ISN'T YOU!

MIND OVER MEASURE

BUT it can't be true—it simply can't!" cried Judy, "A thing like this just couldn't happen to me!"

"Nor to me!" exclaimed Mitzi. "I can take anything in life except this! It—it's too much!"

"Look," said Judy, "I've got two more pennies—let's go across the street to Brown's Drug Store and try again! I'm sure there's been some mistake!"

Quickly the girls trotted out of Anderson's Drug Store and across the street to Brown's. Inside, they headed straight for the penny scale. It was the kind that had the poundage marked off on a big face.

"Wouldn't you know!" whispered Judy in disgust. "Mitzi, you stand right there and keep it shielded, so that no one can watch while I get weighed. I'd just die if this got around town!"

"Judy," said Mitzi, "this is the sort of thing you can't hide from anyone! What's there is there, and there's no getting around it!"

"No getting around it!" exclaimed Judy, very upset. "Please, Mitzi! Let's not exaggerate! I'm not the fat lady in the circus quite yet, you know! For all we know, Anderson's scale may have been wrong! It may have been making a mountain out of a molehill, so to speak! And here's where I find out!"

She started to put the penny in the slot when Mitzi stopped her. "Wait a minute, Judy," she said. "Let's do this thing right! Try exhaling first and empty your lungs of as much air as possible. After all, air has weight, and every little bit counts!"

"Hm . . . that's a very good idea, Mitzi," said Judy. "I'm glad you thought of it!" Judy exhaled as much breath as she possibly could and then she put the penny in the slot. The arrow swung tantalizingly back and forth across the scale's face, its arcs gradually becoming smaller and smaller. At last the arrow came to a quivering but undeniable stop on one of the figures. Judy let out a cry of despair.

"Mitzi!" she wailed. "It's true! It's true! I HAVE gained five pounds!"

Quickly Mitzi stepped on the scale, exhaled, and weighed herself. "I'll say it's true!" she gasped. "But I don't know what you're yelling about—you've only gained FIVE pounds! I'VE gained SEVEN!"

"OHHH!" moaned Judy. "This is terrible! I—I wonder if Oogie has noticed yet—?"

"I wouldn't be a bit surprised," said Mitzi lugubriously. "That's one of the first things a boy notices about a girl—her figure!"

"I know!" said Judy, misery dripping from her voice. "Did you read last night's movie column? It gave Glenna Glory's measurements and, believe me, Mitzi, they were really scrumptious! No wonder everybody whistles when she comes on the screen! Oh, I could die, I could just die dead, that's what I could do! Mitzi, be honest—do you—do you notice anything different about me?"

"Well-l-l—" said Mitzi with diplomatic hesitancy, "to tell you the truth, Judy, you do look a little stodgy through—the—through the—well, throughout!"

"Oooohh!" lamented Judy. "Now I know why that button popped off my skirt this morning!"

"Yes, and now I know why I've been having that all-over elephant feeling lately!" said Mitzi. "Seven pounds would do that to anyone! And who could love an elephant?"

"Only a mother elephant!" said Judy. "And that's not for me!"

"Nor me!" said Mitzi. "There's only one thing to do and that's to go on a diet! It's our duty to beauty!"

"You're so right!" said Judy. "From this minute forward we will no longer be slaves to our lesser selves! Together we shall resist the awful temptations of the pantry and the soda fountain! Unflinchingly we shall face the dark days of dieting, with full hearts and empty—"

"Don't say it!" interrupted Mitzi. "It'll only make matters worse to talk about it. When do we start?"

"Immediately!" said Judy. "We can only gain the future by losing in the present!"

"It won't be easy!" said Mitzi, looking longingly at Brown's poster display of luscious foaming ice cream sodas.

"Courage, friend!" said Judy staunchly. "Chin up—all of them!"

They sat down at the lunch counter with an air of martyrdom. "Let's see—" said Judy, addressing the waiting counter clerk, "I'll have a lean piece of lettuce—with no dressing!"

"Same here!" said Mitzi. "And I'll also have a dry cracker and a glass of water—small!"

"Ditto!" said Judy. "And don't bother asking us what we want for dessert—we're not having any!"

"Absolutely not!" agreed Mitzi.

A few minutes later Judy and Mitzi paid their check and walked out of Brown's Drug Store. "Gosh!" said Judy. "I sure feel noble!"

"So do I!" said Mitzi. "I'll bet there aren't many people who could do what we've just done!"

"I'll say not!" said Judy. "I really think we ought to reward ourselves somehow! Maybe—how about—suppose we have just a little bit more to eat, Mitzi! I've been thinking—dieting is really a very strenuous thing! We probably ought to break ourselves in to it gradually, instead of all at once like this!"

"You're right!" agreed Mitzi. "As a matter of fact, I think I'm beginning to feel a little peculiar—sort of tired and draggy and—"

"Well," said Judy, "I wasn't going to say anything, but now that you mention it, your age is beginning to show a bit, Mitzi!"

"You mean—you mean—" asked Mitzi tremulously.

"It can't be anything but the diet that's doing it!" said Judy. "I never noticed it on you before!"

"That does it!" said Mitzi. "Come on!" And she dragged Judy across the street to Anderson's Drug Store. "We'll have two double-rich chocolate malted milks!" she said to the soda clerk. "And heavy on the ice cream, please!"

"Vittles are certainly vital!" sighed Judy happily a few minutes later over the malteds. "You know, I just wonder if those boys would really have appreciated what we were trying to do for them!"

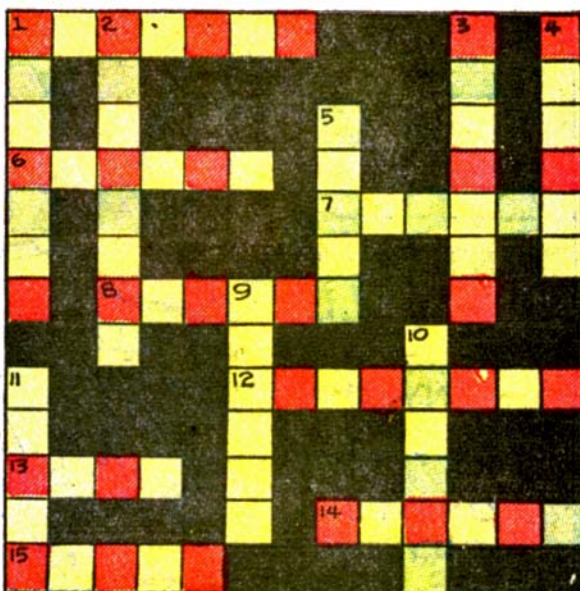

"I doubt it!" said Mitzi. "Anyway, if they're the sterling characters they pretend to be, they'll appreciate us for our winning personalities and superlative brain power hereafter. They won't care how big we are!"

"Check!" said Judy. "Mind over measure, I say! Two more malteds, please!"
