A DATE WITH JUDY

I WONDER IF SHE'S STARTED DATING ANY OTHER GUYS YET. I THINK I SEE SOMEBODY IN THE-

UH-OH!

JUST MY LUCK! I NOT ONLY RAMMED A CAR, BUT IT'S JUDY'S POP'S CAR!

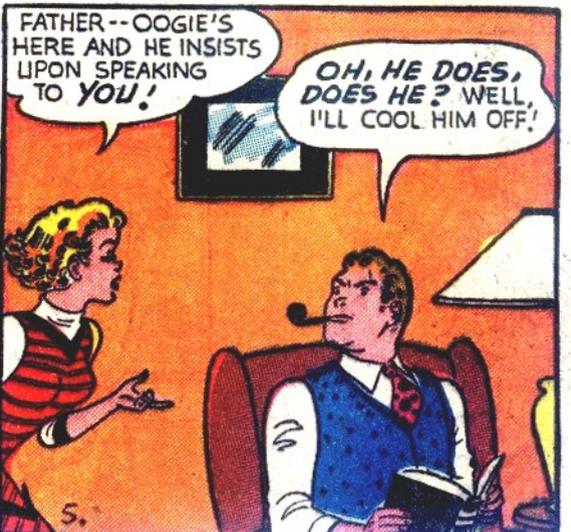

OOGIE! WHAT ARE YOU DOING HERE? I TOLD YOU WE CAN'T--

I KNOW, JUDY. I'LL EXPLAIN LATER. IS YOUR FATHER HOME?

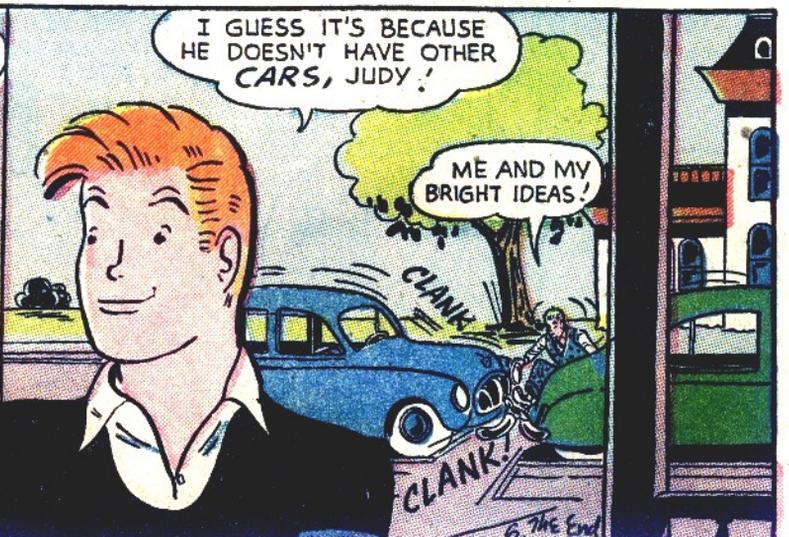

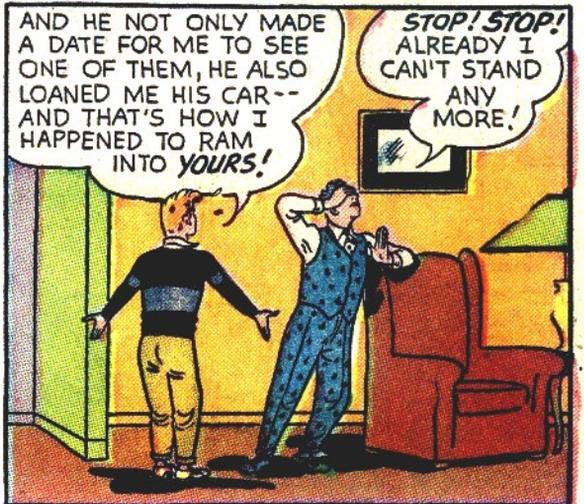

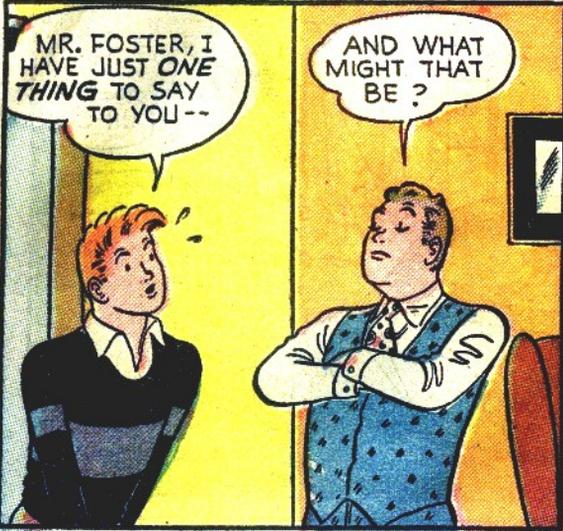

WHY, YES, HE IS, BUT--WHAT DO YOU WANT TO SPEAK TO HIM ABOUT?

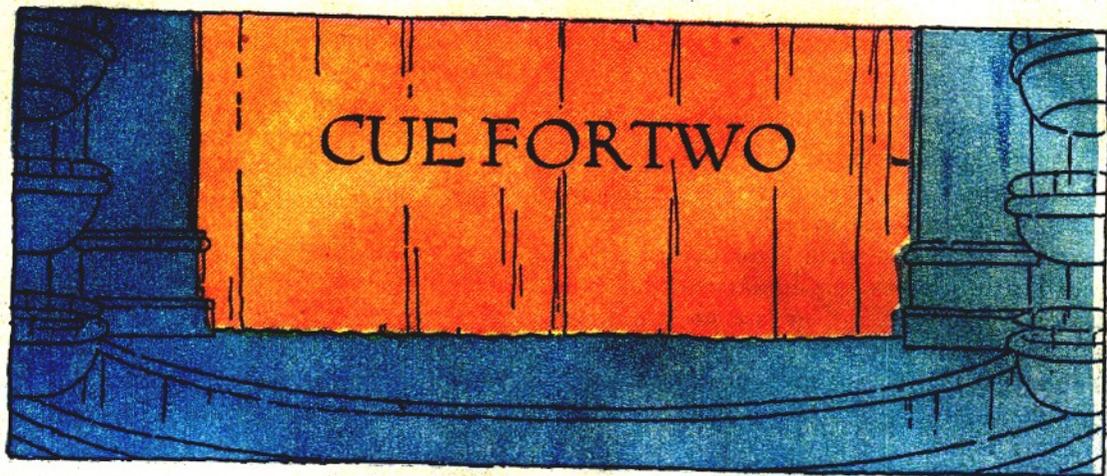

I'M AFRAID THIS IS BETWEEN HIM AND ME, JUDY. I'LL JUST HAVE TO SPEAK TO HIM!

FATHER--OOGIE'S HERE AND HE INSISTS UPON SPEAKING TO YOU!

OH, HE DOES, DOES HE? WELL, I'LL COOL HIM OFF!

"OOOGIE! OOGIE!" cried Judy, catching up with him on the street. "Have you heard the big news? There's a talent scout in town!"

"I know," said Oogie passively. "And the way the news is getting around, everybody in town will be discovering him before he has a chance to discover anyone in town!"

"Oogie," said Judy severely, "you don't seem to realize what this means! Now, stand straighter—he might be looking at you this very moment!"

"Looking at ME?" whooped Oogie. "Oh boy, that's a good one! Any talent scout who looks twice at me shouldn't be a talent scout! He's got no talent for it!"

"Oogie Pringle, stop clowning!" reprimanded Judy. "You know very well you don't mean that! Why, this is the very chance I've been waiting for! It's high time we were discovered! You and I belong in the theatre, Oogie!"

"Now wait a minute, Judy," said Oogie. "Maybe you belong in the theatre, but I definitely don't! I'm just not cut out for it!"

"Yes, you are, Oogie! You underestimate yourself! The truth is that you're really very —" Judy paused significantly "—dramatic!"

"Me? Dramatic?" echoed Oogie incredulously.

"Certainly, Oogie! We could be a great team, like those famous acting couples we read about all the time! I can just see us now, starring in hit after hit in theater after theater all over the world, on stage and screen! Every billboard and marquee and theater page will carry our names and our pictures—JUDY FOSTER AND OOGIE PRINGLE STARRING IN—"

"OOGIE PRINGLE AND JUDY FOSTER STARRING IN—" mused Oogie in Judy's excited verbal wake. "Doesn't sound bad at that, does it?" He shook himself out of his reveries. "Aww—this is silly, Judy! I'm just not the type for the stage! For one thing, I'm not handsome enough!"

"Oh, but you are!" contradicted Judy. "You're really very handsome, Oogie—in an offhandsome sort of way!"

"But I haven't got the personality for going on the stage!"

"Yes, you have, indeed you have!" countered Judy. "The truth is that you have a very electrifying personality!"

"Shocking, isn't it?" grinned Oogie.

"And you're really very witty and quick-minded!" pursued Judy. "What you just said proves it!"

"Aw, that wasn't original with me, Judy," confessed Oogie. "Joe Blow used it on his radio program last week!"

"And to think you remembered it after all this time!" breathed Judy. "Why, the world is full of people who can't remember stale, old jokes for the life of them! See? I told you you belong in the theatre, Oogie! A good memory is absolutely essential!"

"But, Judy, my voice isn't good enough for the stage!"

"Oogie," said Judy in a tone of infinite patience, "your voice is really quite nice for a voice! Besides, a great actor doesn't speak with his voice alone—he speaks with his eyes as well! No, Oogie, there are no two ways about it—you definitely belong in the theater! You've got talent! Loads of it! I don't know why you insist on arguing the point with me. When I say a person belongs in the theater, that person belongs in the theater! I'm NEVER wrong!"

"Well, this time you ARE wrong," said Oogie stubbornly. "All wrong! WAY wrong!"

"I'm NOT wrong, I tell you!" shrieked Judy. "You're the one that's wrong! I'm right! I'm ALWAYS right!"

"That's the trouble with you, Judy," snorted Oogie. "You're always so positive you're right and everybody else is wrong!"

"Oogie," said Judy exercising great self-control, "this time I'm not asking you to take my word for it! I'm going to prove to you that I'm right! I'm going to show you beyond any possible doubt that you definitely belong in the theater! Come on home with me and we'll run through some scenes!"

A few minutes later Judy and Oogie, well supplied with collections of plays culled from the family bookcase, were established in the privacy of the sun room. Judy selected a scene for Oogie to read—an emotion-fraught scene from a stark, dark tragedy "Go ahead, Oogie," she smiled. "Give it everything you've got!"

Oogie read the scene through. A frown appeared on Judy's forehead. "You sound as if you're reading it, Oogie," she criticized.

"What else?" said Oogie. "I AM reading it!"

"But you mustn't sound like it," said Judy "Now try it again!"

Oogie tried it again, and again a frown appeared on Judy's forehead. "That was still pretty flat," she said. "Here, let me give you an idea of how it should be done!" She read through the scene and then turned once more to Oogie. "Now you try it and really THROW yourself into it this time!"

Oogie ran through the scene again. He threw himself into it. He quivered and quavered; he quickened and quieted. He flailed the air dramatically. Judy frowned again. "Er—Oogie, you threw yourself a little TOO far that time! Try it again!"

Oogie tried it again. And again. And again. Two hours later he was still trying it. "I know what's wrong," said Judy crossly. "You're not speaking with your eyes! Don't use the script any more, Oogie. You must have that scene memorized by now."

"So help me," said Oogie, "I can't remember a single word of it! I told you my memory was no good!"

"Oogie Pringle," shrieked Judy, "if you can remember that corny joke of Joe Blow's after ONE hearing, you should be able to remember this scene after FIFTY!"

"Yeah, but this scene is no joke!" said Oogie miserably.

"You can say that again!" said Judy. "The trouble with you is that you just aren't trying!"

"I am so trying!"

"You aren't!"

"I am!"

"Oh, I give up!" shouted Judy throwing her hands into the air "Oogie Pringle, you're hopeless!"

"AHA!" gloated Oogie in loud triumph. "That's just what I've been waiting to hear! Now admit for once that you were wrong! I definitely don't belong in the theatre! Go ahead and admit it!"

"I'll do no such thing!" retorted Judy shrilly "I'm NOT wrong! I said it before and I say it now and I'll always say it—you definitely belong in the theater!" She paused and drew in a long, deep breath. "Some day you'll make a very fine audience!"
