ALL IN FAVOR

JUDY put down the magazine article she had been reading with the air of someone who has just made a world-shaking discovery. "What a marvelous idea!" she said to herself. "Sheer inspiration! From now on, my whole life is going to be lived in the positive manner. Out with negativism! In with positivism! Henceforth and forever, I shall be in favor of everything—especially where Oogie's concerned! Wherever he wants to go, we'll go! Whatever he wants to do, we'll do! There'll be no more fights! No more break-ups! Our friendship will survive forever!"

A half hour later, Oogie had joined Judy on the front porch. "Well," he said cheerily, "what would you like to do this afternoon, Judy? Name it and we'll do it!"

"That's very sweet of you, Oogie," Judy beamed back at him, "but the important thing is—what would you like to do this afternoon?"

"No, no, it's for you to say!" insisted Oogie. "Don't be shy!"

"But I insist we do whatever you want to do!" said Judy. "Honest and truly I do!"

"No, no—" began Oogie, but he was interrupted by Randy, glowering at them from the porch swing where he was trying to read a new science fiction magazine. "For Pete's sake, go take a walk or something and give a guy a little peace around here!" he growled.

"Now, that's an idea!" exclaimed Judy. "Would you like that, Oogie?"

"Sure, I would—if you would," said Oogie.

"A walk's fine with me if you're positive that it's fine with you," said Judy.

"Oh, I'm positive, all right—if you're positive," said Oogie.

"So GO ALREADY!" exploded Randy, "and then it'll be fine with me! And that's POSITIVELY positive!"

Judy and Oogie started out in the general direction of the park. "Great, isn't it?" said Judy, beaming at Oogie. "Great!" he beamed back. They walked twice through the park and three times around it. "Enjoying yourself?" smiled Oogie. "I should say so!" replied Judy, putting even more enthusiasm into her step. "How about you?" Oogie stepped up his step to match Judy's. "Best time I've had in a long time!" he said. They headed away from the park and started doing the streets, walking up one side and then down the other, from one end of town to the other, not missing a block anywhere. "Er—nothing like a good, brisk walk, is there, Oogie?" chirped Judy, hoping he wouldn't notice the little gasp that was beginning to come with every other step. "You're right about that!" grinned Oogie. He stumbled once or twice, but somehow Judy didn't seem to notice. They headed for the open country when there weren't any more blocks in town to cover, and for the next two hours they kept at it—walking . . . walking . . . walking . . .

By the time they got back to Judy's house, the sun was sinking low behind the horizon. "H-hope . . . you . . . enjoyed . . . yourself . . ." gasped Oogie. "Oh . . . I . . . did . . . I . . . did . . ." groaned Judy. "But . . . I want you to know, Oogie . . . that I did it . . . all for you."

"Y-you . . . did it . . . for me?" said Oogie. "B-but I was . . . doing it . . . for you! It's a new philosophy I read about . . . in a magazine article—"

"Y-you don't mean . . . the positive approach—?" gulped Judy. "Don't look now, Oogie—but that's just what I was practicing on you!"

"Oh, no!" groaned Oogie. "Well, this proves just one thing—the positive approach may make our friendship survive—"

"—but we sure won't!" finished Judy.
