INSIDE HOLLYWOOD

Finding a dog with the talent to become a film star is as big a gamble as finding a race horse capable of winning the Kentucky Derby. In both instances the payoffs are handsome.

A gentleman most recently successful in the quest for a canine star is Pat LaCoss, who started his dog coaching career by training sled dogs in Alaska. It took LaCoss many months to find Lad, the collie playing the title role in "Lad: A Dog," Warner Bros.' Technicolor film adaptation of the famed Albert Payson Terhune story. Then it took many more months to train him.

LaCoss' mission was a particularly difficult one. Producer Max J. Rosenberg required not only a large, beautiful collie resembling the Lad owned by Terhune, but also a dog capable of performing a wide variety of feats. Lad is in practically every scene with human co-stars Peter Breck, Peggy McCay and Angela Cartwright.

"There are so many imponderables in choosing a dog you think has screen possibilities," said LaCoss. "Just as with human actors the first requisite for a dog is that he really enjoys acting. He'll never be good at it, if he doesn't."

"You're never certain a dog will behave until you get him on the set. And the friendliest, most extroverted pup doesn't necessarily make a good actor."

"Lad was shy at first, but that was overcome by love and understanding. I'd train him five or six times a day for 15 minute periods, giving him just as much instruction as he could assimilate."

"Lad has developed into a good ad-libber. By that I mean if the scene doesn't go off exactly as rehearsed, he'll be able to do something else acceptable. That's the mark of a fine dog."

"One problem for a trainer is to persuade his dog to work well with human actors who don't really like dogs. Even if the actors pretend they do, the dog senses their true feelings. Fortunately Lad took immediately to his film master and mistress, Peter Breck and Peggy McCay. It might not be a bad idea for a canine star to have cast approval."

Jack L. Warner and Benj. Kalmenson announce that Warner Bros. has contracted to distribute world-wide the musical cartoon feature, "Gay Purr-ee," now in production by UPA Pictures and starring the voices of Judy Garland and Robert Goulet.

Harold Arlen and Yip Harburg composed the original score of "Gay Purr-ee." Included are eight new numbers sung by Miss Garland and Goulet, the "Camelot" star, and guest stars Red Buttons, Hermione Gingold and Paul Frees.

All recording has been completed, but the photography which involves many innovations in cartoon techniques will not be finished until fall of 1962. Henry G. Saperstein, president of UPA Pictures, is personally producing "Gay Purr-ee," and Abe Levitow is directing.

The multi-million-dollar romantic adventure subject is being filmed in color. It is laid in France in 1890 and deals with the exploits of a group of cats who leave their farm home to go to Paris. The leading character is Mews-ette, whose singing and speaking voice is that of Miss Garland.

For young men who want to be popular with girls, Connie Stevens of Warner Bros.' "Hawaiian Eye" on ABC-TV, has some advice: "Learn to dance," says Connie. "Most boys, at least the ones I know, can't dance. And that's very important to a girl."
