"Don't get yourself into a hole," Will Hutchins advises. If there's anything I've learned from being in the Philippines, it's to stay out of holes. All sorts of things can happen to you in one. And, if you come out at all, chances are you'll come out screaming."

Hutchins spent two months shooting scenes for Warner Bros. "Merrill's Marauders" in jungle areas near Subic Bay doing the role of a soldier called "Chow-hound."

The Technicolor picture produced by Milton Sperling recounts the story of General Frank Merrill's famed guerrilla fighters of World War II, with Jeff Chandler in the title role.

"I'm no stranger to Army life," Hutchins explained, "but I did my time in the service with the Signal Corps. Man, have I got respect for the infantry. It's a rugged life, and I didn't know how rugged it was until we started this picture.

"In one of the scenes I have to dig a fox hole and get into it. Even with all the crew, cameramen and other actors around I found myself with a hole full of unwelcome visitors—lizards, land crabs, all kinds of bugs and even snakes which seem to get very bold at the sight of a hole.

"I just can't imagine how infantrymen put up with that kind of foxhole visitor when coming out meant someone would be shooting at you."

Despite the fact that they are all rugged young men, Hutchins, Ty Hardin, Peter Brown, Andrew Duggan and Claude Akin suffered under the rigors of their acting assignments.

"This can't be called play acting," Hardin said. "This is as near the real thing as anything can be when no bullets are flying through the air."

Peter Brown groaned: "We go up a hill to make a scene, scrambling hand over foot, slipping and sliding against rocks that grind the skin away, and when we get to the top we come down again and do it all over for a second take."

The Department of Defense announced in Washington that a contract has been signed with Warner Bros. Pictures for the production of a motion picture for use in the troop information program of the military services.

The film, entitled "Freedom and You," will graphically depict the contrast between the concept of American freedom and life under Communist domination. It will be produced under the personal supervision of Jack L. Warner, President of Warner Bros. and a Colonel in the U.S. Air Force Reserve. The producer will be William L. Hendricks, a Lieutenant Colonel in the U.S. Marine Corps Reserve, who recently wrote and produced the Marine Corps documentary, "A Force in Readiness," and the writer is Vincent Fotre.

"Freedom and You," a part of the Department of Defense's long-range program for production of materials designed to strengthen the serviceman's faith in his American heritage and to acquaint him with the dangers of Communism, is scheduled for early filming at Warner Bros. studios in Burbank.

David Niven, doing final scenes in London for Warner Bros. "Act of Mercy," is getting his legs in shape for skiing when he returns to his home in Switzerland. Niven moved to the fifth floor of the Connaught Hotel in London so that he could run up and down the stairs for exercise.

Guitar lessons Ty Hardin took for his role in TV's "Bronco" series paid off when he worked in the Warner Bros. motion picture, "The Chapman Report." His role was enlarged so he could play the guitar and sing "The Foggy, Foggy Dew" as an introduction to his love scenes with Glynis Johns.
