A LETTER FROM JERRY

Hi Fans!

The other day I was sitting on the patio when I overheard Renfrew talking with some of his little buddies. "You know, my Uncle Jerry is a hard-luck fink," he said. "He's always getting ideas to make something. The last time, he wanted to make a new soft drink. So he bought a lot of things and stuff and worked for a whole year, and finally he came up with something he called '4 Up.' It didn't work, so he kept on for a long time until he made something called '5 Up.' This was a flop, too, but do you think Uncle Jer gave up? Nah, he kept at it day and night and finally told me and Witch Kraft he'd finished experimenting with '6 Up.' Blech! That tasted terrible, too. So the poor shnook gave up."

"So whattaya telling us for?" said one of the lovable little tykes.

"I just wanted you to know why my Unc is a hard-luck fink," replied Renfrew. "Did you know how close he came to inventing '7 Up?'"

What a brat! Last night, he wouldn't eat his spinach at dinner. "Come on," I coaxed him. "Try a mouthful of it. Make believe it's mud!"

After we ate, I went down to the corner to get a newspaper. When I came back, he gave me a memo about a phone call I'd got from the studio. "I can't read this," I protested. "Why'd you scribble it like that?"

"Well," he shrugged, "I couldn't understand the man who called so I didn't write it very clearly!"

Oh boy! Some day, I gonna gave him such a shot in his pointed little head! Always with the wisecracks. Like when I sent him to the store to get a box of matches, and I reminded him to make sure they'd light. When he came back, I tried to light almost half the box. "Didn't I ask you to try them before you bought them?" I asked.

"Sure, that's what I did, Unc," he said sweetly. "I tried 'em all, and they were all good!"

You think I got troubles? I pity his teacher. "How do you manage to make so many mistakes in your homework?" she asked him once.

"Easy," he told her. "My Uncle Jerry helps me!"

And one day the class had to write a composition. The teacher read what Renfrew wrote, then looked up at him. "How does it happen that your composition about a dog is exactly the same as the boy who sits in front of you, but word for word?"

"Can I help it, Teach," he said, "if we wrote about the same dog?"

"Now listen here, young man," she went on. "Isn't there anything you can do better than anybody else in the world?"

"Oh, sure," he said back. "Read my own handwriting."

But once in a while, the midget sharpie pulls off a cutie. "Would you say that 'pants' is singular or plural?" she asked the class. Renfrew waved his pudgy little hand. "I know. It's both," he answered. "'Pants' is singular at the top, and plural at the bottom!"

Or the time she asked the class, "Who's our national bird?" And you know what he answered, don't you? "Mrs. Johnson!"

Another time, during their recreation period outside in the yard, Renfrew ran back into the school. "Quick! Gimme a shovel!" he yelled to the janitor. "My pal is stuck in the mud up to his ankles!"

"Up to his ankles? Why doesn't he just walk out?" the man asked.

"Because he's in head first!" snapped Renfrew.

But he's always got his pockets full of things—you know, what kids carry that get them into trouble at school—cards, whistles, a frog or a snake, a slingshot, cherry bombs, a piece of magnifying glass, the blade of a jackknife, candy, and broken crackers. So the other morning when he was ready to leave, I bent down and kissed him and hugged him goodbye.

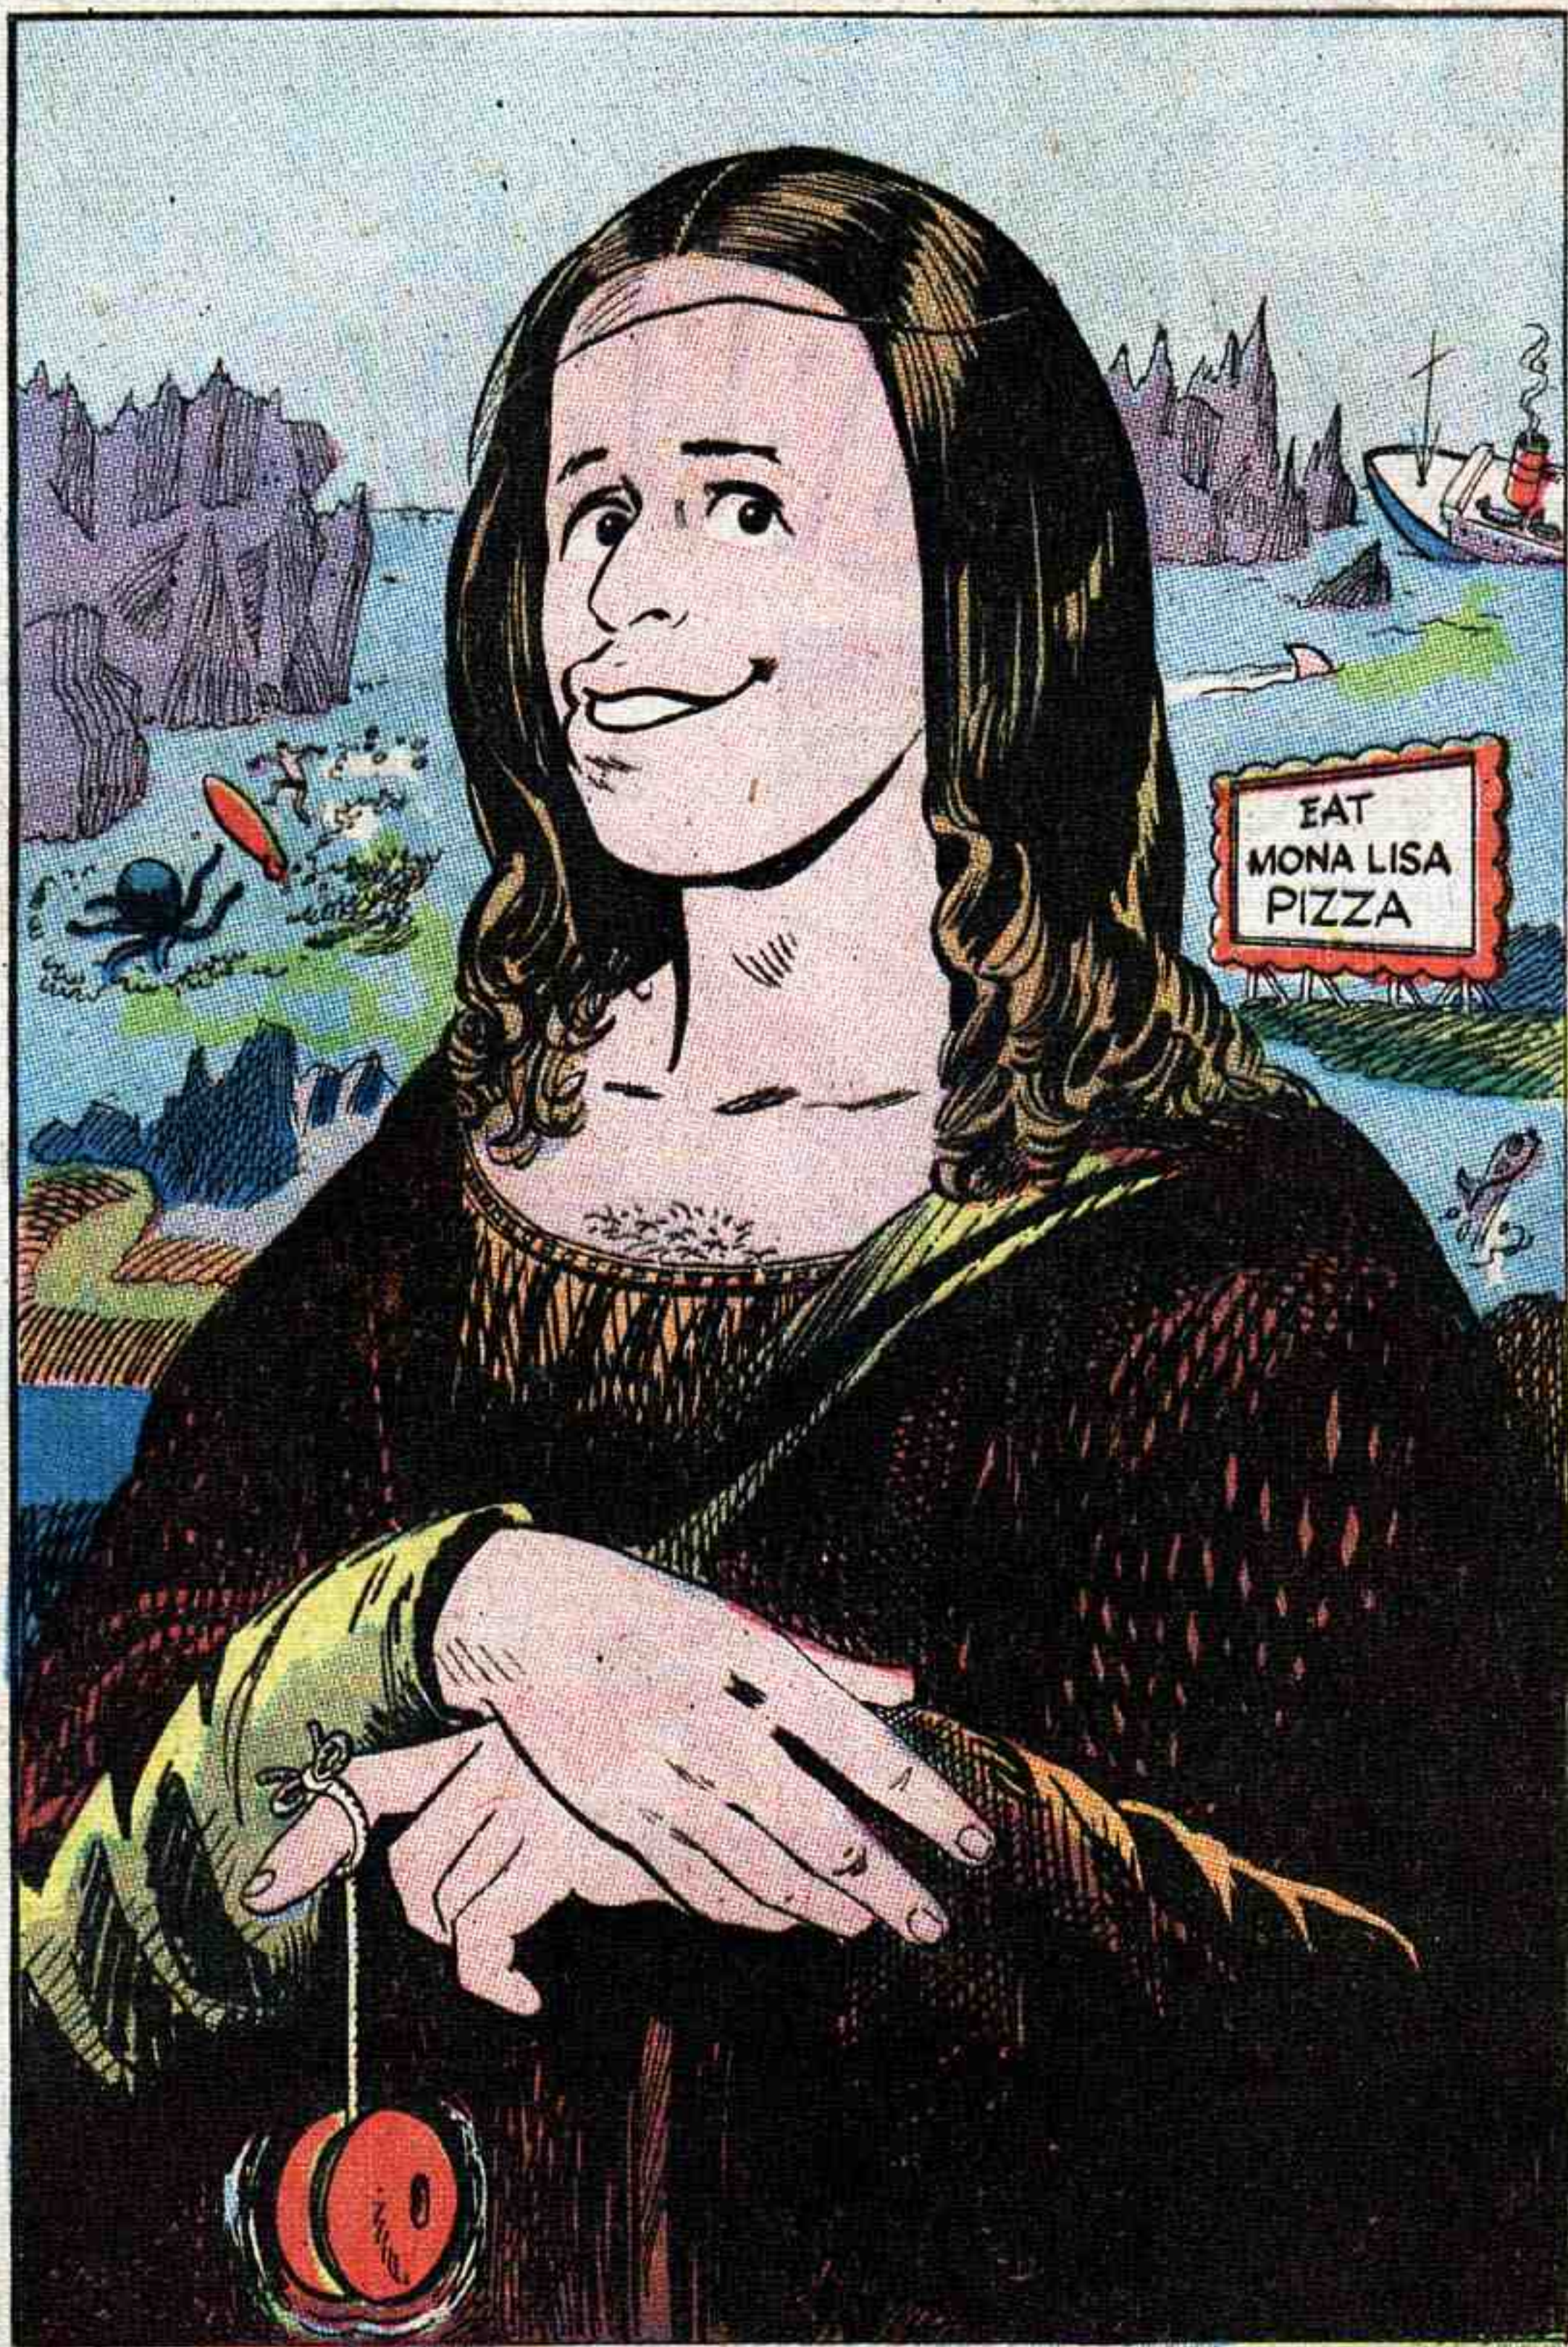

Witchie watched us in disgust. "Well, what's all that for?" she asked. "The little creep must be behaving himself much better in class. I never saw you show that horrible brat so much loving, Mr. Jerry, with all that hugging."

"Why do you mean, hugging?" I said to her as Renfrew went out the door. "I was frisking him."

I'll be seeing you again in the next issue, I hope—and speaking of hope, remember to read BOB HOPE COMICS starring that disgusting, swinging teen Super-Hip, which you'll find on your newsstand next month!

BAT-JOKES FOR JERRY

Several issues ago, readers were invited to send in Batman funnies. Here, then, is the cream of the quips from some of our Batman-iacs.

Where does Batman take a shower? In his bathroom, of course, says Bella Seligman of Peoria, Ill. And when he's finished, he steps out on his batmat, natch, adds Fred Amendolara of Brooklyn, N.Y.

What happens when Batman doesn't brush his teeth? He has bat breath. That one was written by Kathy Jones of Aliceville, Ala.; Avery Nugent, Hartsville, Ind.; and Jerry Morriss, Wheat Ridge, Calif.

If he bathes, instead of showering, where does he go? No place else but his battub, agree Billy Simpson of Imperial Beach, Calif., and Rosalie DeAngeles, Chicago.

If the day ever came when his Batmobile breaks down, what would he drive? His Batillac! submits Billy Heyser of Norristown, Pa.

And from Clint A. Cummins, who failed to include his address, come a batch of bat-laffs: Whom do bats root for on "The Late Show?" The bat guys, sure 'nough! How does a bat read while hanging upside-down? Batwards! And what's their favorite dessert? Nothing else but strawbatty shortcake! An unmarried bat lives no place else but in his own batchelor apartment. And batnapping is the most serious crime a bat can commit. Did you hear about the diplobat who worked in the foreign service? And if a bat ever is sent up in a batellite, he'd be called a batronaut!

Why is Batman like an adding machine? You can count on both, says Jeff Williamson of Chillicothe, Ohio.

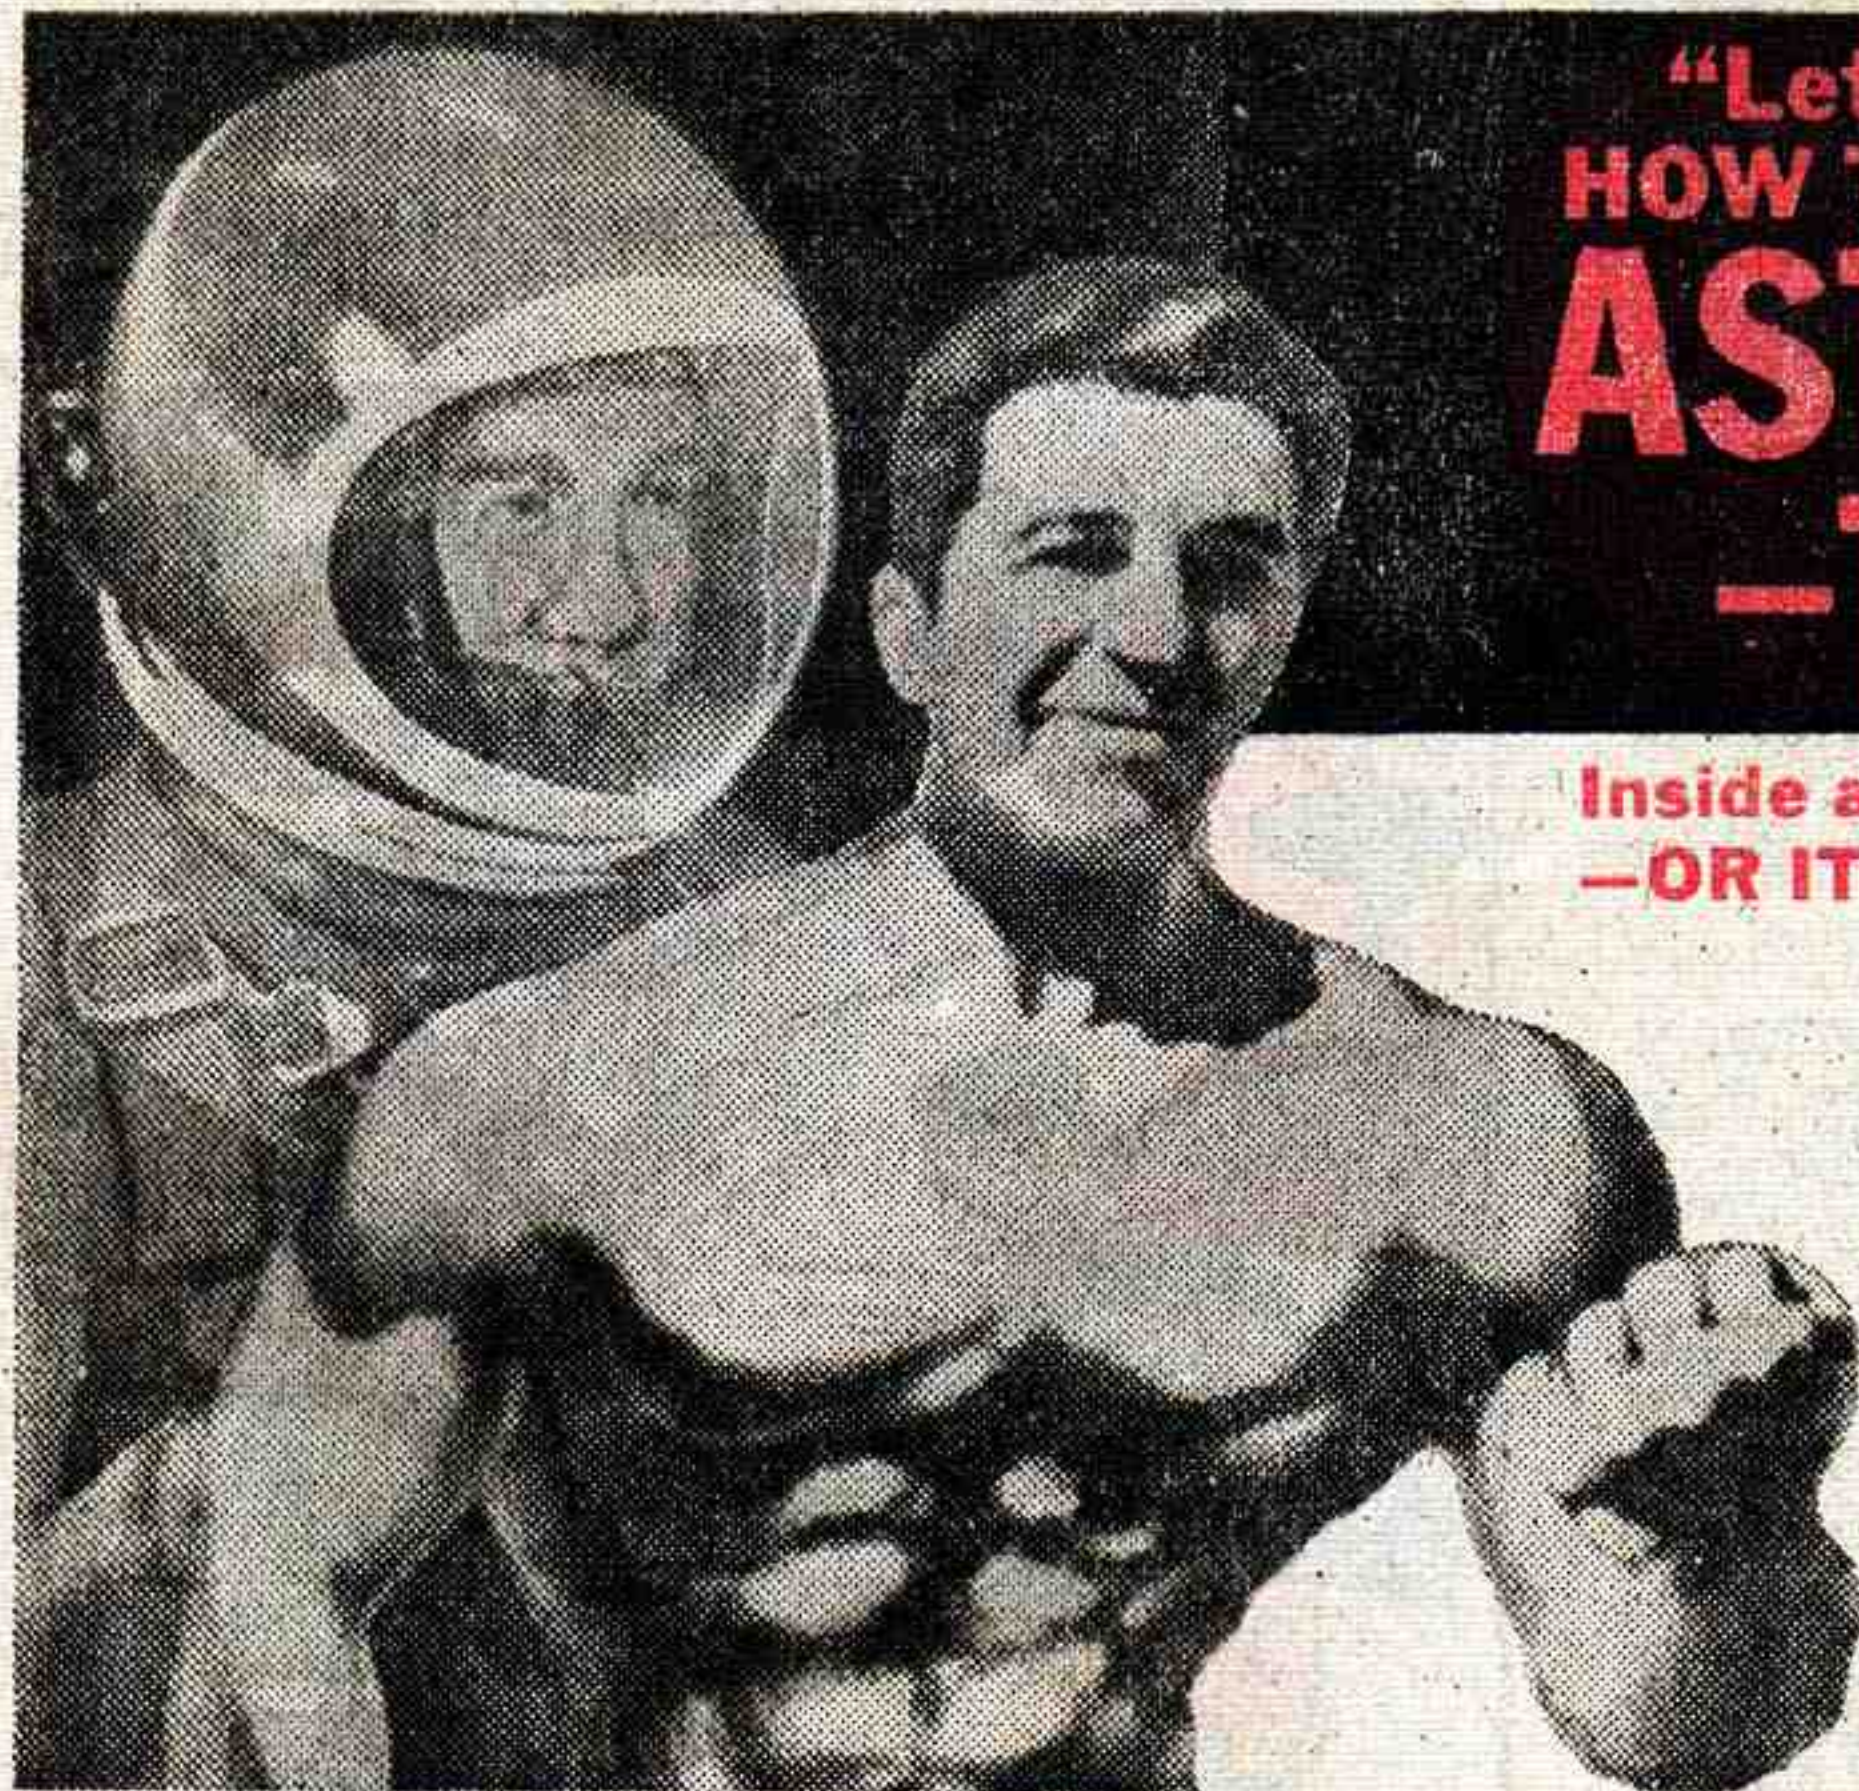

How was the little bat boy punished? asks Christ Metris of San Mateo, Calif. He was spanked on his batside!

And puns Bill Graff from Ridgefield Park, N.J., our Constitution guarantees all bats the rights to life, libaty, and the pursuit of happiness.

There are two kinds of luck, opines Pam McCaffrey of Suffield, Ohio—good luck and bat luck.

Know why Robin doesn't wear a black cape like Batman's? suggests David Schneiderman of Montreal. Because, like the TV commercials say, he might have dandruff.

And, finally, as if you didn't know, the bats' favorite sport, remarks Gabriel Tirado of New York City, would be batsketball!

"Let me show YOU too, HOW TO MAKE YOURSELF ASTRONAUT -TOUGH
