MOONLIGHTER

Build it yourself — Revell's
Model-of-the-Month for November, the Saturn V Apollo.

World history was made when man set foot on the moon. Prior to July 20, a team of Revell design-engineers worked for over a year to make sure every detail of our Saturn V is precisely correct. You build all eight stages so they fit together and can be separated. Demonstrate to your friends every step of the wondrous mission. From three-stage launching to moon orbiting and landing. From crucial redocking to earth splashdown. The command module has three astronauts inside; lunar module comes complete with moon base. The 4-foot-high Saturn kit is history's most fascinating one-man voyage or group project for science classes. Under $12 wherever toys or hobbies are sold.

A LETTER FROM JERRY

B-436

Hi, Fans!

I forgot to include one little incident that occurred in "The Fortune Hunters" in this issue. One night, Uncle Yahoo and I were awakened by what seemed to be ghostly sounds. Uncle Yahoo asked me to go investigate. "No, maybe you'd better," I answered him. "You speak better English!"

Renfrew and I took the train to the ski resort that appears in "The Abominable Schmoman." When we reached the station, I hired a taxi to take us to the place. On the way, the driver lost control. The cab careened down the road, plunged through snowbanks, and skidded across the frozen lake.

"Can't you stop it?" I yelled to him.

"No, I can't," he cried back.

"Well, at least, there's one thing you can do," I shouted. "Turn off the meter!"

That resort was a beautiful winter wonderland. It had everything for the skier—emergency first-aid stations along the slope, 24-hour stretcher service, a hospital at the bottom of the hill, and a clerk whose job was to notify your next of kin. Renfrew got all excited.

"C'mon, Unc! Let's make with the slalom. I'll hold your hand in case you go too fast!"

But I was ready for him. I took extra care in buying my skis. They were the right length, beautifully waxed, had solid bindings—and just fit in the fireplace after I broke them in half.

When we checked in, there was a Texan in the lobby. "Nothing up here but snow and a lotta half-frozen galoots," he complained. "Where Ah come from, all yuh see is the finest cattle in the world."

"Oh, yeah? You can't compare 'em to these beautiful, big mountains all covered with snow," snapped Renfrew.

"Shucks, we used tuh have 'em, too, boy," the Texan shot back, "until our herds just trampled 'em down!"

That ride to the hotel was so cold, I asked Room Service to send some hot coffee up to our room.

"Will you have cream or sugar?" asked the girl taking my order.

"It doesn't matter," I said, shivering. "I'm going to pour it on my feet."

After Renfrew and I unpacked, we went down to the dining room. We ran into the Texan. "Ah'm looking forward to eating some good food for a change," he said. "Ah've got the worst cook in the world."

"You're lucky," said Renfrew with a smirk. "At least, she cooks. My Uncle Jerry buys TV dinners. When I come home from school, I don't say, 'What's cooking?'—I ask, 'What's thawing?'"

The headwaiter showed us to a table. We waited so long for service, I finally got up and marched up to him, standing at the door.

"Would you be kind enough to change our table, please?" I asked him. "We'd like something nearer a waiter!"

He gave us a haughty look and seated us someplace else. The waiter's last name was Lee. One glance at his face, and I knew his first name must be Ug.

He was pretty clumsy. He was passing behind me when he tilted his tray accidentally and dropped a whole mess of spaghetti on my jacket. The headwaiter rushed up and helped me take it off.

"Please, sir, you must forgive that stupid oaf! I'll have your jacket all cleaned and pressed by the time you've finished eating."

A few minutes later, that same waiter came back and tapped me on the shoulder. "Look, mister, didn't anybody tell you, you ain't allowed in here unless you're wearing a jacket?"

I had to remind him who I was. "But I don't like all those flies in this dining room," I added.

"We do anything to please," he answered. "Just tell me the ones you don't like, and I'll chase 'em outa here for you!"

But the trouble didn't stop here. I had to call the waiter back when he brought my steak. "Would you mind closing the window?" I asked. "If you don't, this steak could blow away!"

That night, Renfrew and I finally got to relax. They showed a movie in the playhouse. But I should've expected what would happen. That Renfrew shows me no consideration or respect. That afternoon, he told me to go to my room! Soon as the movie started, he poked me in the ribs.

"Say, Uncle Jer," he asked. "Can you see all right?"

"Sure."

"Are you in a draft?"

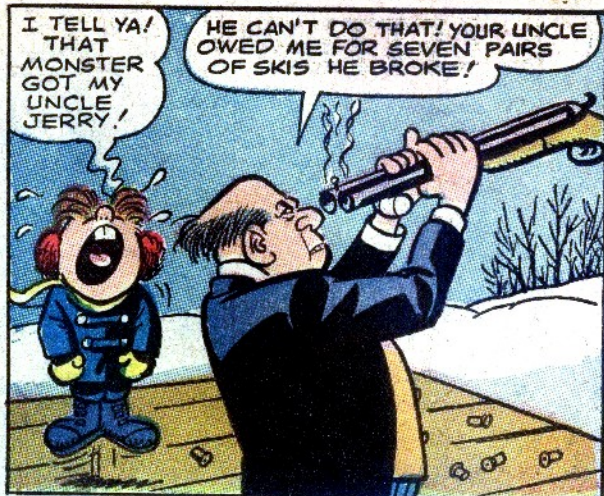

"No."

"Does the guy in back of you have his feet on your seat?"

"No."

"In that case, would you mind trading places?"

Jerry
