Herb Ellis not only kept busy as an actor, he also directed, produced, and wrote. Besides being the first Frank Smith on Dragnet, he has a long list of credits: Grouch Club, We Deliver The Goods, Pat Novak (Webb), Good Word, Are These Our Children, One Out Of Seven (Webb), Nero Wolfe (as Archie), Tales Of The Texas Rangers, This Is Your F.B.I., Hollywood Star Playhouse, Screen Directors Playhouse, Box 13, Mr. Malone, Johnny Dollar, Jack Webb Comedy Show, Gunsmoke, Broadway's My Beat. Herb created and wrote Jason And The Golden Fleece. It was an NBC adventure series of 1952-53 that starred MacDonald Carey as Jason, owner of a cafe-bar in the French Quarter of New Orleans. Jason also owned the boat known as The Golden Fleece, which was frequently chartered by people on the Lam, adventurers, and emotional dropouts.

Herb said, in an interview with John Rayburn, "If they found someone who could deliver the lines and was on time, you worked." Herb, like Parley Baer, worked a lot.

He's no relation to Georgia Ellis (Kitty on Gunsmoke) or Antony Ellis (writer on Gunsmoke).

Herb's friendship with Jack Webb began in high school and continued with their careers. Herb worked on all of Webb's shows: Rocky Jorden, Pat Novak, Jeff Regan, One Out Of Seven (News Of The Past Week), Johnny Madero, Pier 23, Jack Webb Comedy Show, Pete Kelly's Blues.

Herb said if he ever wrote a book he would call it "We Didn't Know How Good We Had It."

When Barney Beck sounds off, you'll laugh at his antics...gasps at the ingenuity...sighs at the nostalgia—and learn all about sound effects for radio, movies, TV and Broadway shows.

Barney Beck has created sound through the years for such shows as The Shadow, Superman and Bob and Ray...and currently does engineering for Gene Klavan, Bernard Meltzer, and many other WOR Radio personalities.
