SCENE left is one that greeted Joe E. and his accompanist, Johnny Marvin, in the Pacific combat zone. Last thing pair did, when cheering stopped, was to lead the men in singing of "God Bless America"

GETTING RIGHT into the spirit of the South Seas, Joe E. and Marvin put on a rug-cutting exhibition with Air Forces sergeant below. With many facial and body gymnastics, Elmer the Great lived again for men

Joe E. Brown, America's Best-Loved Comedian, Puts on Fun-Packed Shows for Men in Our Armed Forces

MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE is delighted to give the following excerpts from a report on Joe E. Brown's tour, just as it came to the magazine's editorial offices, bearing the official stamp of the naval censor. "... A heavy plane, bearing the white-star insignia of the U. S. Army Air Forces, circled the field at a military airdrome . . . in the South Seas. It settled down, stopped with a 'jerk' and none other than Joe E. Brown stepped off . . . He stared in wonderment for several seconds and then remarked, 'Well, shut my big mouth.' As there were only a few hundred soldiers present, they shrank from the enormity of the proposed task . . . But it wasn't long before 'Elmer the Great' lived again . . . Joe joined the enlisted men on the baseball diamond . . . Joe E.'s companion on the tour, Johnny Marvin, composer and singer, heard the call of tropical music, slipped away in the company of natives to learn their songs . . . Joe E., with a heart as big as his mouth and a desire to make life brighter for our fighting men on all fronts, is out on a wide global sweep to give the boys a laugh . . . The U. S. Army Air Forces, representing men from every state in the Union, took Brown and Marvin to its heart, and as their departing plane became a speck on the South Seas horizon, the men all looked after it and each man said to himself, 'There goes a couple of great guys!'"

SOON as Joe really got his ground legs after plane trip, he was out on baseball diamond, above, showing men in the Air Forces just how good Elmer could be—especially on the idea of style and form!

JOE told the boys that secondary purpose of his trip was to check up on Willie's expense account. Left: Native boy tells Joe he's a little off his course, points Hollywood, a mere 6,000 miles away

Well, this time we're presenting Judy Garland in a piece called "Presenting Lily Mars."

Don't tell anybody but we're crazy about the picture. It has everything.

"For Me And My Gal" had punch—and Judy. "Presenting Lily Mars" has more punch and more Judy.

★ ★ ★ ★
Really, honestly, truly, it's a honey. It's beautiful, it's dream-like, it's comical, it's melodious, it's a great entertainment.

Judy plays a stage-struck little girl who acts all over the place—emotes on cue, tries to tear the heart of a producer who just pays no attention.

★ ★ ★ ★
The producer is Van Heflin—the Academy Award Van Heflin—and he has that same indefinable charm that captured so many right from the start.

★ ★ ★ ★
"Lily Mars" is enriched with two big name bands—two, count 'em—Tommy Dorsey and his Orchestra and Bob Crosby and his Orchestra.

This Booth Tarkington adaptation was directed by that comedy-master, Norman Taurog and produced by the proven Joe Pasternak.

★ ★ ★ ★
We're shouting Judy all over the place.

★ ★ ★ ★
For action and excitement we're turning to another wonderful film "Assignment in Brittany."

★ ★ ★ ★
Based on the best-selling novel by Helen McInness, it was directed by Jack Conway who is without a peer in melodrama.

★ ★ ★ ★
Two young stars come into their very own in "Assignment in Brittany." One is Pierre Aumont—late from France but definitely of America now—who has the stuff that the late Valentino once revealed.

Our policy is not to shout stars until you see them. When you see Pierre Aumont you'll do the shouting.

The other star is Susan Peters. You've seen her in "Random Harvest" and you'll see exactly what we mean.

★ ★ ★ ★
"Assignment in Brittany" is bang-up entertainment, a show with authority, a story for these times.

By the way, we suppose you noticed who won most of the Academy Awards. None other than your old friend,

—Lea

DEAR MOM:

IT'S great to know that V-mail travels so fast, and I'm hoping this letter reaches you in time for Mother's Day.

I thought of so many things I was going to say in it last night when I was flying over France to pay a visit to Hitler. But now, about all I can remember is, I still love you, Mom. And somehow, Mom, that seems to count the most when I think of refugees over here who look at me as though I was crazy when I tell them how we live at home.

They say America will be lots different after the war. Maybe so. But as for me, Mom, I know now there's only one decent way to live—the way you and Dad taught me.

I want to marry Sally and live in the cottage on Maple Street, go back to my old desk at the plant, with a chance for promotion if I earn it. I want the school and the church just as I remember them now, because I want my son to go there. And if anybody has any ideas about changing even the smell of the general store they will have to reckon with me when I come back. For those things all seem bound up with my love for you, Mom, and why I'm fighting now—to keep you and them safe and the same until I get back, and can bring you a posy on Mother's Day which will say, "I still love you, Mom."

Movie-Radio Guide dedicates the above letter to the mothers of America on Mother's Day—"Dear Moms" the nation over who are fighting the good fight on the home front to preserve for sons, now in our armed forces, the America those boys knew and loved before they went to war.—The Editors.

Greer Garson and James Cagney Get Top Academy Award Honors

THE spirit of America at war pervaded the fifteenth annual Academy Award dinner at the Cocoanut Grove of the Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles on March 4. There was none of the pomp and pageantry that had marked former dinners.

The most thrilling moment of the whole evening was that when Academy president, producer Walter Wanger, stepped to the microphone and opened the ceremonies by introducing Jeanette MacDonald, who sang the national anthem as she had never sung it before. And there was a tremendous ovation when Hollywood's big service flag, with the number 27,677 on it, was unfurled. From then on, the spirit of the military took over. For every speaker emphasized in some way the importance of motion pictures in the war effort. William Wyler, now with the armed forces overseas, received the award for his direction of "Mrs. Miniver," voted best picture of the year. Award for the best supporting actor went to Lieutenant Van Heflin for his work in "Johnny Eager." And Teresa Wright, who played such a poignantly valiant role in "Mrs. Miniver," was named best supporting actress of the year.

A few days later he received a note which read: "Your stirring remarks on the importance of becoming a Waac convinced me, too; so I enlisted, passed all my tests and leave in two weeks for camp. If radio listeners have noticed how the Waacs have been played up in recent "One Man's Family" broadcasts, and wondered how author Carlton Morse could be so well informed on that branch of the service, here's the answer: Mr. Morse's sister, Annamae, has just completed her officer's training at Fort Des Moines, and has kept her brother up to date on the subject . . .

Joan Davis always can be depended on to twist words into a good gag. One Joan tossed at a recent rehearsal is typical. Kidding about Rudy Vallee, now a chief petty officer in the Coast Guard, she quipped, "Aw, Rudy's just a wolf in chief's clothing" . . .

The degree of Doctor of Humanity has been bestowed on Jean Hersholt of radio's "Dr. Christian" series. It was conferred by Hamilton Holt, president of Rollins College at Winter Park, Florida . . .

Spike Jones is firmly convinced that advertising on the air gets results. And for good reason. Spike uses a thimble to play the washboard in his "musical" set-up, and war priorities were making thimbles scarce. Spike mentioned the fact on his program and thimbles began pouring in. To date he's received 150, and they're still coming. One housewife sent a note with her donation saying, "Please don't send the picture of yourself that you promised for the thimble. My husband is very jealous."

CHICAGO

By JAY ALLISON

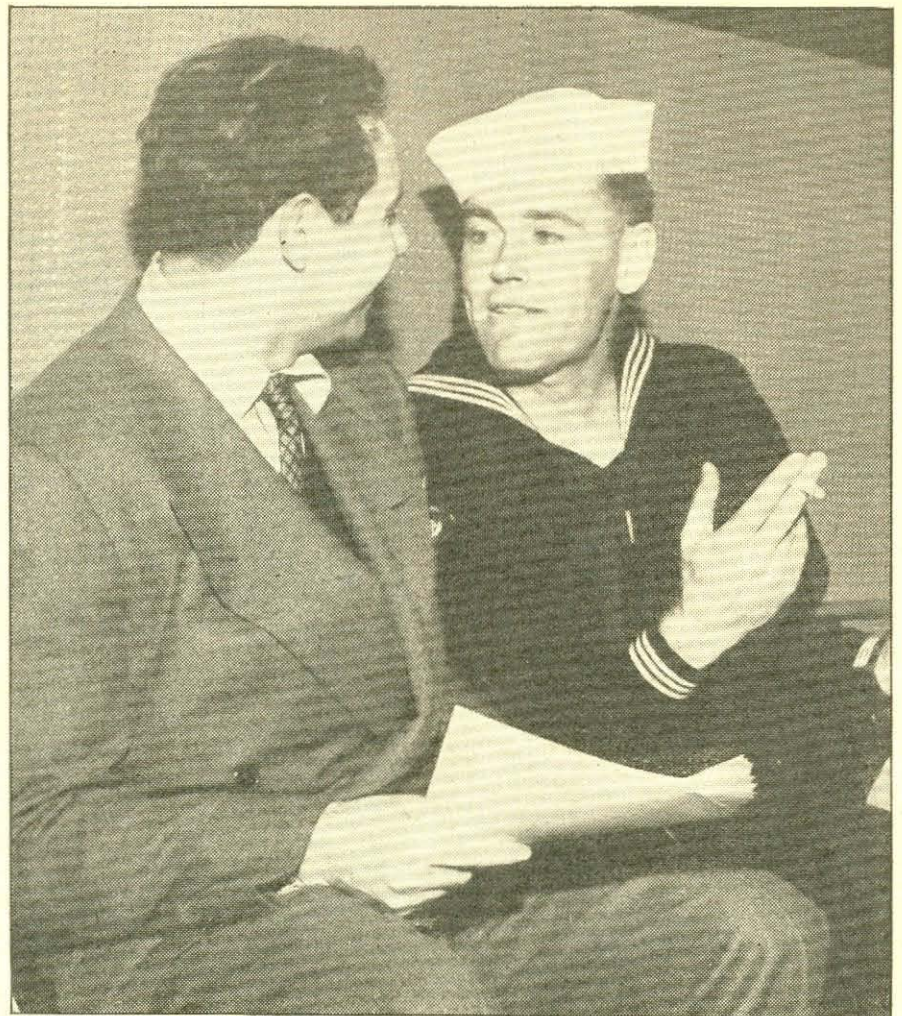

Much too often a radio program that pleases listeners is a flop as far as critical professionals are concerned. The vice versa is also true. That fact makes rare the sight of fellow actors and actresses crowding into a small audience booth every afternoon to witness the broadcast of a routine script show. Yet this is a daily occurrence when "Vic and Sade" goes on the air from CBS-WBBM studios here . . .

To the tragedy crowded into the life of a small-town boy who came to Chicago to make a career for himself in music, bandleader Russ Morgan has added a happy note. Seventeen-year-old Jimmy Hedge was in the act of doing a good turn when he lost a leg in a freak accident. Russ, who is currently playing at the Edgewater Beach Hotel, took a special interest in the case and has lent his full weight to a campaign to raise funds to give Jimmy a new start in life . . .

Three new Navy lieutenants (j. g.) from Chicago radio are announcers Bob Brown and Fort Pearson and "Ma Perkins" scripter Orin Tovrov. Chances are that the trio may work together . . .

Chubby John Gannon had almost completed ten years on the air as Billy on "Jack Armstrong" when the Army beckoned last month . . .

Announcer Charlie Lyon is the innocent victim of a plot to besmirch his good character. The "brain" behind this belittling campaign is Paul Rhymer, author of the "Vic and Sade" scripts. One of Paul's pet pranks is mailing 1890-vintage post-cards to Lyon with personal messages inscribed for all to see. Charlie now has a priceless collection of cards that were forwarded to him from NBC stations throughout the country. A typical card reads: "Beast, you have broken your mother's heart. When are you going to return the family silverware?" And, just to keep the records straight, Paul Rhymer and Charlie Lyon are the best of friends.

THE FIRST PRESIDENTIAL BROADCAST

A Revealing Article Linking the Past and Present of Radio's Fascinating Development

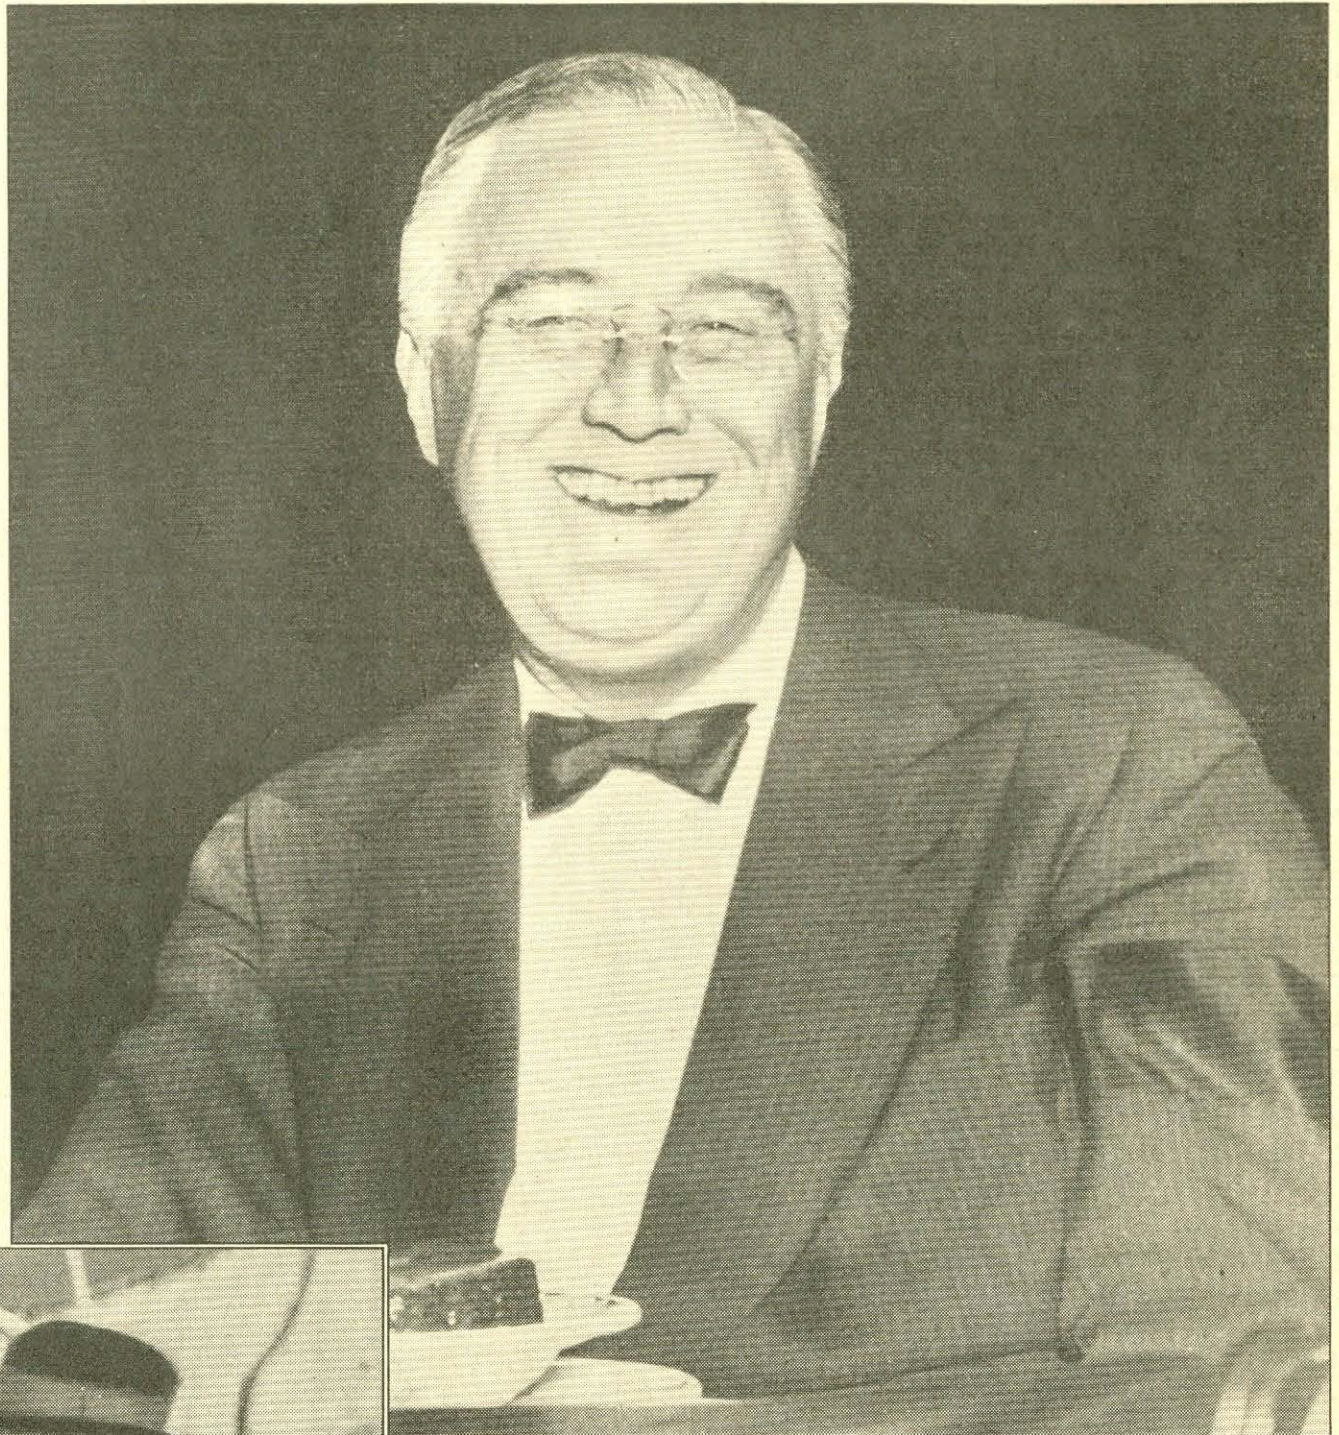

By Larry Wolters

A decade ago President Franklin D. Roosevelt gave his first fireside chat, and millions of Americans listened to his voice over the radio—many for the first time. The article which follows connects that event with an even more momentous presidential broadcast in the history of radio and of America, for it describes the forward march of men who build for the future good of mankind while war lords plan and scheme to destroy. —The Editors.

ON THE morning of July 4, 1919, American newspapers carried a brief announcement whose import escaped many of their editors. They published a dispatch received by wireless from the U. S. S. George Washington, bearing President Wilson home from the Versailles Peace Conference, stating that at 3 p.m. that Independence Day he would address the crew. The message added that this occasion would be marked by a novel feature—the first use of the wireless telephone at sea to transmit the voice of the President to soldiers and sailors on other ships.

Many editors buried this news deep inside their papers. In fairness to them it must be stated that, so far as is known, they received no complaints from readers over this treatment of the dispatch. However, a few scattered radio operators in the United States noted it well. They realized that this was to be the first attempt to bring the voice of a President of the United States directly to the people.

This is how the experiment came to be made: For more than a decade Reginald Fessenden, Lee DeForest and others had pioneered the course that was to give wireless a voice. The war years had brought about the emergence of the radiotelephone, and now, with peace at hand, the United States Navy took a hand in its development. In April, 1919, the Navy Department asked the General Electric Company to build and install a radiotelephone transmitter aboard the George Washington for the use of President Wilson and his advisers.

STRANGER than fiction are the facts that connect radio with Woodrow Wilson, U. S. President who piloted the nation through World War I, and Franklin D. Roosevelt, now at the helm in present global conflict. Left: President and Mrs. Wilson on bridge of "S. S. George Washington," bound for France, Mar. 4, 1919

The company assigned John H. Payne, who is associated with its research laboratory today, and Harold H. Beverage to this task. They developed the equipment and installed it promptly, but it was not until President Wilson's return from his second trip in July that he found occasion to use it.

On July 3 it was made known that on the following day President Wilson would address the crew and returning soldiers. This announcement gave Payne and his associates an idea.

"This was to be a great event for all of us," he recalled recently. "And we felt that it would be too bad if the sailors on the U. S. S. Arkansas, 1,500 feet ahead, and the men on the four destroyers, 1,000 feet to our right and left, were not to be privileged to hear that speech. We talked the situation over and decided to ask the President whether he would be willing to make the speech with the telephone microphone in front of him so that we could send it out over the radiophone to our convoys."

Such a stunt would be absolutely out of the question, Payne was told, unless the microphone were to be completely concealed.

"We were informed," said Payne,

"that a microphone in front of the President would make him nervous and that it was not proper that he should be bothered by anything of this sort."

But Payne and his assistants went right ahead with their plans:

They found that if a microphone were fastened to the small end of a megaphone that an excellent pick-up could be obtained, even if the speaker stood four or five feet distant. They learned where the President would stand and concealed the microphone combination in a mass of flags before the speaker's stand.

With plans completed, Payne and his men decided to let the world know about them. A radiotelegraph message was dispatched to shore stations. A few minutes before 3 o'clock, Payne received a message from the Arkansas stating that the entire ship's telephone system had been connected with its receiving apparatus; the men were standing by to hear the President's voice.

At the appointed time the President began speaking:

"We told our fellow men throughout the world," he began, "when we set up the free state of America that we wanted to serve liberty everywhere and be friends of men in every part of the world who wanted to throw off the unjust shackles of arbitrary government . . . Now we have kept our pledge to humanity as well as our pledge to ourselves.

"A new freedom has come to the peoples of the world out of this war," the President declared. "This freedom has no date. It has no Fourth of July. There has nowhere been written a Declaration of Independence. The only date I can think of for it is the eleventh of last November, when the Central Powers admitted they were beaten and accepted an armistice. From that time they knew they had to submit to the terms of liberty. And perhaps some of these days we shall date the freedom of the peoples from November 11, 1918 . . . We shall make it a condition that liberty of men throughout the world shall be served and that America shall continue to redeem its pledge to humanity and to mankind."

As he uttered these prophetic words, Woodrow Wilson unwittingly all but lost the opportunity to become the first President to send his voice out across the world. For instead of taking his stand where he had been expected, the President spoke from the hatchway of the lower deck, twenty feet from the microphone and almost completely out of its range.

"Only an occasional word could be heard," Payne recalled. "This was very much to be regretted, as the atmospheric conditions were splendid at the time."

Men at NBD, the Navy station at Otter Cliffs, Bar Harbor, Maine, were sorely disappointed, it was learned later. They had tied in an earphone to a telephone transmitter with the hope of sending the "broadcast" over the telephone wires to the White House. "Reception was very poor," Orrin E. Dunlap, Jr., one of the men stationed at Otter Cliffs recalled, "and it was blamed on the supposition that the ship was rolling in a heavy sea."

Soon after the President had concluded, Payne obtained the manuscript of the speech and read it over the radiophone. The President's words were heard on the conveying ships and well across the United States. Months later an Army Signal Corps officer told Payne that he picked up the speech on a small antenna 3,000 miles away in San Antonio, Texas.

When the President learned of the tragic mix-up in the arrangements he assured the radio men that if he had known about their plan to broadcast his address he would gladly have co-operated and spoken from the proper place. Later it was discovered that Admiral Cary Grayson, the President's physician and adviser, through whom all arrangements had to be made, had objected to the concealed microphone. Without knowing this, the President presumably had yielded to a suggestion that he speak from the hatchway instead of from the appointed position.

Several days later the President used the radio to put through a phone call to Washington. On July 5 and 6, Payne recalled, static conditions were so bad that the vessel was unable to get into good communication with the land stations at New Brunswick, N. J., and Otter Cliffs. On the seventh, several calls were put through with poor results. On the morning of July 8 the first really satisfactory two-way communication of the voyage was obtained, Payne recalled, and the President spoke over the radiophone to Assistant Secretary of the Navy Franklin D. Roosevelt in Washington. Wilson's voice was carried by radiophone to New Brunswick and thence over land lines to Washington.

While this was probably the first conversation by radio between a President of the United States and a future President, it was not Franklin Roosevelt's first contact with this new marvel of communication. The story of Mr. Roosevelt's earlier experience was recorded by Mr. Beverage in the October, 1920, issue of the General Electric Review:

Beverage and Payne made two round trips to France on the ship, sailing first from Hoboken on April 11, 1919. Because of the short time available for installing the apparatus, (Continued on Page 56)

If you want his eyes to linger lovingly on your hair . . . If you want his fingers to smooth it tenderly . . . then keep it alluringly shining, lustrous! Don't let soaps or soap shampoos rob your hair of glamour!

Instead, use Special Drene! See the dramatic difference after your first shampoo . . . how gloriously it reveals all the lovely sparkling highlights, all the natural color brilliance of your hair!

And now that Special Drene contains a wonderful hair conditioner, it leaves hair far silkier, smoother and easier to arrange . . . right after shampooing. Easier to comb into smooth, shining neatness. If you haven't tried Drene lately, you'll be amazed!

You'll be thrilled, too, by Special Drene's super-cleansing action. For it even removes all embarrassing, flaky dandruff the first time you use it . . . and the film left by previous soapings.

So, before you wash your hair again, get a bottle of Special Drene with Hair Conditioner added. Or ask your beauty shop to use it. Let the beauty magic of this amazing improved shampoo glorify your hair!

*PROCTER & GAMBLE, after careful tests of all types of shampoos, found no other which leaves hair so lustrous and yet so easy to manage as Special Drene.

Soap film dulls lustre—robs hair of glamour!

Avoid this beauty handicap! Switch to Special Drene! It never leaves any dulling film, as soaps and soap shampoos always do.

That's why Special Drene Shampoo reveals up to 33% more lustre!

ALEXIS SMITH, Warner Bros. star, is one girl who knows what letters mean to men in the armed forces, spends much of her spare time corresponding with boys from Guadalcanal to North Africa. A regular Tuesday-nighter at the Hollywood Canteen, she dances with servicemen by the score. Ballet was a child-

That Fascinating Hayworth

BLESSED with twinkling feet, Rita kept pace with the nimble Fred Astaire in her latest movie, "You Were Never Lovelier." Below: At home

FIRST big love of Rita's life walked into her heart when she met Vic Mature on "My Gal Sal" set. Now Vic's in service, she dates no one else in Hollywood

AFTER a strenuous tour of Army camps and canteen duty in Movietown, Rita took a vacation in the desert where in outdoor togs she loves

By Carl A. Schroeder

WISH that Rita Hayworth were not in love with my best friend. There's not a woman alive who can help but resent the fellow who knew her husband-to-be long before she did. Rita curbs her antipathy beautifully most of the time, but you can see sparks come into her eyes when I say, "Yeah, those were wonderful days when Mature and I lived together. You never saw so many blondes in and out of a place in your life. We almost had to install a revolving door."

Rita naturally will never be fond of blondes. She's a brunette herself, although California sunshine and picture requirements have changed her hair to a light-golden auburn.

The fact of the matter is that I knew Rita Hayworth before I did Victor Mature, and I wouldn't want to think of life on this mundane sphere without the comforting feeling that both were somewhere within calling distance. The two go together like sleep and dreams, regardless of what you may have read in the line of fantastic publicity about the man known as "the hunk."

When I first met Rita she was married. I had the vague impression that she didn't behave like a bride but more like a sleeping beauty not yet conscious of all that was going on in the world. It was impossible to get a line on her intelligence at the time, because she never said anything but "yes" and "of course" in hushed tones. She was a child born of the machinery of movie-making. She looked with a touch of longing at people who drank cocktails and rushed around in open cars enjoying desert jaunts and trips to the snowy mountains. The only time Rita saw much of the desert was when the publicity department called upon her to put on a bathing-suit and face a battery of cameras. And she never went to the mountains unless accompanied by skis, which she was never allowed to use for fear that she might break her pretty nose.

Rita had all the essentials necessary to glamorous stardom, but she might as well have been a model in Macy's window for all the fun she had out of life.

That's all changed now. "I suppose a girl has a right to cry over her 'lost youth,'" Rita told me recently. "I won't say whether or not I've ever sobbed into a pillow for this reason, but to be truthful I think the years I have spent in the strict discipline of dancing and learning the things necessary to become a movie star were good for me. I'm sure that if I hadn't been led to hard work and had my nose affixed to a grindstone I should have done a lot of impossible things."

Rita is not exactly submerged in complexes, but she's been so used to taking orders like a good trouper that she will, for instance, stand around at a party and wait for someone to suggest that she go and talk to so-and-so, particularly if it is the usual party with a lot of so-and-so's who wouldn't look interesting to a sailor lost for eight weeks on a desert island.

I encountered Rita the other day at a Hollywood cocktail soiree, talking to a young man who was hoping that, with Vic Mature somewhere at sea with the Coast Guard, he might acquire her telephone number. He was telling Rita what a great actress she could become if she had just the proper role.

RITA'S heart is in the Navy with Mature. She writes him reams daily, looks forward to his return and their wedding day. But that doesn't keep La Hayworth from doing her share on the home front in Hollywood. She entertains servicemen, dances with scores at the canteen. Above: Signing autographs

With an absolutely straight face, Rita was saying: "I'll never be an Oscar-winner. The camera makes me beautiful, but I'm really such a dope that I can't read lines, and in another five years they'll throw me in the ash-can. And as for dancing, I fake all that." The lad protested gallantly to no avail. Rita insisted that she was a dead loss and convinced me that with such a wonderful talent as a liar she should do more fishing.

Rita happens to know that she is a competent actress, but she's had a hard time convincing a number of bosses of that fact. The scripts she's given to read usually concern a beautiful, beautiful girl and as little story as possible. "I don't want to be a great actress," she tells me, "but I do think that the public is entitled to see any star in a role that calls for a touch of acting ability. I can't enjoy the thought of sharp-witted movie-goers referring to my latest picture as 'You Were Never Lousier.'" As for her recent battle with her studio, Rita will say nothing. She was scheduled to do a picture with Cary Grant called "My Client Curly." The story, a good one for a change, concerned a man who owned a wonderful caterpillar—the worm variety, not a tractor. Mr. Grant, however, found he could not do the picture, so Humphrey Bogart was summoned. He, too, decided that he couldn't take the part because of previous commitments. Then Brian Donlevy was called in, but that blew up, (Continued on Page 59)

ONE of the easiest stars in Hollywood to get along with, it can be said that her disposition matches her beauty. Proof of that statement is the cigarette-boxes she and Bob Hope were awarded for being photographers' favorites in Movietown. Photos know the stars as no one else does!

WILLIAM BENDIX has a special talent for looking dumb and "acting" smart. Took his movie initiation in 1941, and did his first leading part in "Wake Island" last year. Left: In role for Paramount's "China." Below: "Records can be broken," says Bill

WILLIAM BENDIX

First Job Was That of Batboy for New York Giants

AS "SMACKSIE" from Brooklyn to his Leatherneck pals in "Wake Island," Bill Bendix more than justified Paramount officials' confidence in his ability as an actor. But first time Bendix faced a movie camera, he admits he was "panic stricken." That was when M-G-M signed him for the role of tavern-keeper in "Woman of the Year." He was on Broadway rehearsing for a new show at the time, and flew to Hollywood to make his picture bow. Recalling his first scene, Bill says, "I didn't find out where the camera was until I'd played clear through it."

Since Bill has been climbing successward so fast in pictures, some well-meaning friends have suggested that he have his on-the-bias nose straightened. To that he shouts, "No! Not with my mug. That nose is money in the bank. Why, I'm practically the poor man's Mature."

Bill got that crooked feature playing football back in New York. In fact, as a boy Big Bill had his heart set on a career in baseball. Without his parents' knowledge, he got a job as batboy with the New York Giants, and he was sure his future was set when he was invited to accompany the team south for the spring-training season. But Father Bendix had other ideas, and Bill, an only son, was not allowed to take the trip.

His father, an accomplished musician, thought his son might follow in his footsteps. But Bill didn't inherit the family musical bent. He took up the acting idea seven years ago. Before that he was a grocery-store manager who liked the business and did a good job. At that time Bill's only excursions into theatricals were purely amateur, save for an occasional job as night-club master of ceremonies, which he did just for fun.

After a series of failures on the stage, Bendix clicked as Krupp, the policeman, in Saroyan's "Time of Your Life." Both proved Broadway hits.

Now Big Bill Bendix is being acclaimed as a second Louis Wolheim in Hollywood. His next major role is in "China," the new Paramount picture, with Loretta Young and Alan Ladd.

DALE EVANS

—Little Trouper From Texas

REMEMBER the song, I'm in Love with a Guy Who Flies in the Sky, which Dale Evans sang on the "Chase and Sanborn Program" not so many moons ago? Dale not only sang it but wrote it. Now Dale's one of Hollywood's newest triple-threat girls. Meaning she not only has a golden voice, which was her passport to radio, but a highly photogenic face and figure and a talent for song-writing as well. That pretty well spells success in Hollywood, where Dale is songstress on Charlie McCarthy's show, and also carving a niche for herself in screen roles to boot. You'll be seeing her in "Stage Door Canteen's" star-studded cast; and, currently, she's completing "Swing Your Partner" for Republic Pictures.

Dale's a native of the Lone Star State. After schooldays she started out as a stenographer for a Dallas insurance company. But that didn't last long, for her boss heard her sing and suggested Dale take part in a radio program he was sponsoring. That led finally to Chicago, where for two and a half years she got a varied experience singing and acting on WBBM.

A talent-scout was responsible for the decision to try her luck in Hollywood, where her singing, plus dramatic ability and personality appeal, won her a contract but no actual roles. Being an energetic miss, La Evans got a release from her movie contract and a radio job as warbling sweetheart to the world's most famous dummy. Which was a pretty canny stunt. Now the Little Evans is proving that she has what it takes for both radio and screen success!

Dale goes into her dance for Republic picture "Swing Your Partner," in which she plays the romantic lead. Top: An informal portrait of La Evans

If You Are a Woman War Worker—

NANNETTE SARGENT (l.), whom radio listeners hear on "Ma Perkins" and "Lonely Women" programs, is shown in a practical work-shirt, safety overalls, special safety goggles, and a trickily designed hat to protect and hide long hair of women war workers in busy hours

AT EASE pose of Nannette and Pat (right) shows two other versions of war-time safety hats for defense workers. Nannette's, with its military dash, is worn by women in lighter types of war work. Pat's, which resembles a dust-cap somewhat, is fashioned for mechanics

Save Vital Work Hours

1. If you work at a machine, be sure that all guards are in place before starting operations.
2. Confine your hair in a net, cap or bandanna. Wear snug-fitting garments. Loose sleeves and loose garments are easily caught in whirring machinery.
3. Wear goggles if there is the slightest danger from flying particles. Eyesight is precious. It may save a life.
4. Wear low-heeled shoes at work.
5. Fatigue is increased by slumping in your chair. Sit erect when working, and bend from the hips when necessary, not from the waist.
6. Always look where you are going. Never dash out of a doorway or hurry around a blind corner. Collisions can be costly.
7. If your work calls for an apron, use one of the close-fitting overall type with buttons down the back or side; or held with a steel-spring clasp around the waist.

Save Your Frilly Frocks for Hours Off Duty. Wear Safety Togs to Work

WHEN American women entered war work by the thousands, Dame Fashion trotted right along with them and invaded the factories of the nation. As a result, war-time work-clothes for women are not only safe in the midst of whirring machines but attractive as well. To achieve these vital points for both safety and morale, some of the country's leading fashion experts took a hand in designing work-clothes that were not only safe and smart but that met strict war-time regulations. The safety outfits shown on these pages, modeled by Chicago NBC radio actresses, are typical of those worn by women in plants and factories and on assembly lines. In fact, the wearing of proper safety clothes such as these was considered of such vital importance that the National Safety Council was drafted by President Roosevelt to campaign in the prevention of accidents which can so seriously hamper America's all-out war efforts. MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE welcomed the privilege to cooperate with the National Safety Council in speeding VICTORY!

Watch Out for Hazards

1. Any sort of jewelry is a hazard in a war plant, so don't wear even a ring or a wrist-watch. They may cause injury to yourself and trouble for the machine at which you are working.
2. Machine cogs and belts are dynamite to any loose ends on clothing. Don't wear sashes or fancy collars with free ends. Floppy jackets and baggy sweaters are easily caught in spinning machinery.
3. Wear substantial leather brogans with sturdy soles and common-sense heels. Slippers and soft-soled shoes are tabu because they don't protect the feet from rough materials, heavy falling objects.
4. DON'T effect the seeing-only-with-one-eye hairdo of Veronica Lake (above, right), which the War Production Board branded a hazard.
5. DON'T sulk, because Miss Lake's hair style (above, left) is best for war workers.

SNUG-FITTING bandannas like one worn by Eloise Kummer (above) are often preferred to hats by some workers; others like the more jaunty cap modeled by Eileen Palmer. Both girls are wearing versions of popular safety clothes. Goggles are necessary in type of work that goes with these togs. And both need the specially made safety shoes with reinforced toes as protection against heavy falling weights

ELOISE KUMMER (left), heard on airlines in "The Guiding Light" and "Road of Life," models still another type of safety styles. In working with sharp metals, leather gloves are worn to protect hands against burrs and ragged edges, make less first-aid work

"Rocking Horse Rhythms"

He's only five years old but he has a sponsored network show of his own. That's Bobby Hookey, who has been in radio since he was two making a name for himself as creator of a unique style of singing called "Rocking Horse Rhythms." Bobby's Coast-to-Coast show is sponsored on thirty-three MBS stations, while the balance of the network carries the program but substitutes war-bond appeals for the commercials.

("Rocking Horse Rhythms" may be heard Sundays over MBS at 10:45 p.m. EWT, 9:45 p.m. CWT, 8:45 p.m. MWT, 7:45 p.m. PWT.)

Parker Family Moves

"The Parker Family," comedy serial heard on Sunday nights for several seasons, on April 30 took over Dinah Shore's Friday night spot on the Blue Network. Dinah, of course, continues as vocalist on the "Eddie Cantor show" (Wed., NBC).

("The Parker Family" is now heard Friday nights on the Blue Network at 8:15 p.m. EWT, 7:15 p.m. CWT, 9:15 p.m. MWT, 8:15 p.m. PWT.)

Music-Variety Serenade

"Here's to Romance" is the title of a new music-variety show featuring Jim Ameche as emcee, vocalist Buddy Clark and David Broekman's orchestra. The program premiered on April 18, taking over the spot formerly occupied by the "Free World Theater" dramas directed by Arch Oboler. "Free World Theater" is now broadcast on Saturday nights.

("Here's to Romance" may be heard Sundays on the Blue Network at 6:05 p.m. EWT, 5:05 p.m. CWT, 4:05 p.m. MWT, 3:05 p.m. PWT. "Free World Theater," formerly heard on Sundays, may now be heard Saturdays on the Blue Network at 7:30 p.m. EWT, 6:30 p.m. CWT, 5:30 p.m. MWT, 4:30 p.m. PWT.)

500th for "Barn Dance"

Five hundred consecutive broadcasts over NBC will be the record rolled up by the "National Barn Dance" on May 1, when a special bill of fare to celebrate the occasion will be presented.

("National Barn Dance" is broadcast Saturdays over NBC at 9 p.m. EWT, 8 p.m. CWT, 7 p.m. MWT, 6 p.m. PWT.)

First U. S. Military Band

The first military band in the United States was a fife-and-drum unit started by the Marines in 1775. This and other interesting facts about the development and history of bands and orchestras in the Americas will be related on NBC's "Music of the New World" programs during the month of May.

("Music of the New World" may be heard Thursdays over NBC at 11:30 p.m. EWT, 10:30 p.m. CWT, 9:30 p.m. MWT, 8:30 p.m. PWT.)

Butterworth in New Quiz

Wally Butterworth, formerly of the "Vox Pop" team, returned to the familiar role of quizmaster with the debut of "Take a Card" on April 28. Unique twist to this quizzer is that contestants determine how difficult a question they'll get with the luck they have in picking a card from an ordinary deck.

("Take a Card" may be heard Wednesdays over MBS at 8:30 p.m. EWT, 7:30 p.m. CWT, 9 p.m. MWT, 8 p.m. PWT.)

"Fashions in Rations"

Attacking one of the major problems of America's busy housewives today, Billie Burke, the noted screen comedienne, may be heard in a new series over CBS on Saturday mornings. Besides presenting factual food information, Miss Burke conducts a weekly interview session with experts from the Government and industry. She is assisted by Alice White, who directs the question-and-answer forum on food.

("Fashions in Rations," featuring Billie Burke, may be heard Saturdays over CBS at 11:30 a.m. EWT, 10:30 a.m. CWT, 9:30 a.m. MWT, 8:30 a.m. PWT.)

Music Festival of the Air

Due to war-time travel restrictions, the National Federation of Music Clubs is foregoing its regular bi-annual convention and will stage in its place a "National Music Festival" via radio. The "Music Festival of the Air" will consist of special broadcasts over the four major networks during National Music Week, May 2-8.

Kentucky Derby by McCarthy

The running of the sixty-ninth Kentucky Derby will be described over CBS on Saturday, May 1, by Clem McCarthy, veteran turf expert who has witnessed more than thirty runnings of the famed American racing classic. Background and color will be handled by Ted Husing, assisted by Jimmy Dolan.

(Clem McCarthy's description of the running of the sixty-ninth Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs will be broadcast over CBS on May 1 at 6:15 p.m. EWT, 5:15 p.m. CWT, 4:15 p.m. MWT, 3:15 p.m. PWT.)

More Boogie-Woogie

When "Basin Street" went high-hat and found a sponsor, the Blue Network looked around for a new show to fill its old shoes and came up with "Rhythm Road." The latter has Joe Rines' orchestra and songstress Helen O'Connell, with comedian Johnny Morgan as emcee, the Kibitzers and Willis Kelly's Dixieland Clinkers.

("Rhythm Road" may be heard Mondays over the Blue Network at 10:35 p.m. EWT, 9:35 p.m. CWT, 8:35 p.m. MWT, 7:35 p.m. PWT.)

Chicago Sees Lone Ranger

With a "Hi-Yo, Silver, Awa-a-a-y," the Lone Ranger broke a precedent of ten years' standing when he rode out of Radioland to make his first personal appearance as top attraction of the Olympia Circus in Chicago. And while he rides with the circus in Chicago from April 24 to May 9, he will present his regular broadcasts from the Blue Network studios there.

("The Lone Ranger" may be heard on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays at 7:30 p.m. EWT, 6:30 p.m. CWT, 8:30 p.m. MWT, 7:30 p.m. PWT.)

730 SHAVES FROM 1 BLADE
AMAZING NEW
BLADE SHARPENER
New sharpener for all makes of double-edge razor blades performs miracles! "Not necessary to change blades," writes one user. Another says, "I've used 1 blade over 700 times." RAZOROLL really sharpens blades because it strokes on leather. Gives keen, smooth shaving edges. No guess-work. Blade held at correct angle and proper pressure—automatically. Just turn crank to sharpen blade. No gears. Well made. Handsome, compact, sturdy. Weighs few ounces. Will last years. Makes ideal gift.
Only $1.00
SEND NO MONEY! Write today. Pay postman only $1 plus few cents postage. Use RAZOROLL for 5 days and if you're not delighted with smooth, velvet shaves you get, return RAZOROLL, and we'll return you dollar. Hurry—order today.
RAZOROLL COMPANY
520 North Michigan Avenue, Dept. 105, Chicago, Illinois

Gillette Again Brings You The Kentucky Derby Broadcast

Tune In Columbia Broadcasting System

Saturday Afternoon, May 1

6:15 EWT   5:15 CWT   4:15 MWT   3:15 PWT

MAY DAY is Derby Day and Gillette's Cavalcade of Sports presents the Kentucky Derby from Churchill Downs over the Columbia Broadcasting System for the fourth consecutive year.

Five veteran track reporters, Ted Husing, Clem McCarthy, Bill Corum, Jimmy Dolan and George Walsh will be at the microphone to give you a graphic action picture of the sixty-ninth running of America's foremost turf classic. For the greatest thrill in racing... tune in Gillette's Cavalcade of Sports over your CBS station.

Gillette Safety Razor Company, Boston, Mass.

SHORT WAVES

"Strictly G. I." Shows Short-Waved to Our Troops Overseas

By Charles
A. Morrison

THIS war has brought forth a new kind of radio. The American doughboys call it "strictly G. I.," while the British Tommies speak of it as "regulation."

Dozens of these "regulation" programs are beamed from the United States every day and are heard by soldiers and civilians alike in all parts of the world. The producers of these programs are specialists in the radio section of the Special Service Division of the War Department.

Oldest in time of service and a favorite among the troops of the United Nations is the men's own program, "Command Performance, U. S. A." During the year this series has been on the air, it has actually been at the command of the fighting men who listen to it. No matter what the request, the radio section obliges. Perhaps you heard Carole Landis sigh on one program, or heard a baby cry or a church bell ring on another. Those were requests from our fighting men. Two soldiers in the South Pacific didn't want to hear a song or a sigh from a beautiful girl. They wanted to hear the sound of a porterhouse steak, covered with onions, sizzling over a hot fire. And they wanted Ann Sheridan to act as chef. Annie, with her trusty skillet, gave a quick steak-fry right in the broadcasting studio. One Marine, on Guadalcanal, wanted a slot-machine on the program, because he wanted to hear the sound of nickels coming out when the jackpot was hit, and this was done. Such small but important things, to men far away from home, help to bolster morale; keep the men in touch with the life they left behind.

But "Command Performance" is only one of twenty-one separate programs written and produced by the radio section of the Special Service Division. Many of these programs are produced five and six times a week. In addition to these special shows, more than twenty of the most popular commercial programs in the U. S. are beamed throughout the world each week. These are transmitted without the sponsor's message.

The twenty-one tailor-made programs cover a wide variety of entertainment as well as spiritual nutriment. "Music for Sunday" is a fine program that supplies the latter. Straight, uncolored news must be sent to the men. And this is handled by daily newscasts and special-events programs.

"Mail Call" occupies a favorite position with the men, for this is a program that features the great stars from stage, screen and radio as well as concert stars and popular and classical orchestras. The rest of the programs, equally popular with various groups of men and women, include "Yank Swing Session," "Personal Album," "Melody Round-Up," "Front Line Theater," "Downbeat," "Sports Today," "We Who Fight," "Jubilee,"

"Yarns for Yanks," "Song Sheet," "Grandstand Seat," "Are You a Genius," "Yank Sports Review," "Great Music," "Sound Off," "Sports Interview," "Sports Parade," "Sports Review." (Times at which and frequencies on which most of these programs can be heard will be found in our program listings on the following page.)

All of these programs, in addition to the twenty sales-deleted commercial shows, are recorded. This is done so the programs can be beamed dozens of times a day to all sections of the globe for the convenience of the men stationed at the various theaters of war. By putting the shows on specially treated records, impervious to heat or cold, the transcriptions can be shipped to England for use on BBC, to New Zealand, Australia, China, Alaska, Iceland, Greenland, Africa, Russia, South America and other countries for use on government and privately owned stations.

Then the recordings are sent to the actual camps. In cases where the men are isolated, the transcribed radio programs can be dropped by parachute.

The performers on the programs live by the old adage, "The Show Must Go On." The producers of "G. I.," or "Regulation," radio have adopted a similar motto. Their slogan: "The Show Must Get Through."

Cuba's COK Aids United Nations

The Cuban National Sports Department is using COK (11.623) extensively in the United Nations' war effort.

COK's radio activities were initiated on March 28, 1941. Its studios are located in the huge Sports Palace, in the heart of gay Havana, the capital of Cuba. Its 1,000-watt transmitter is located on top of a hill called "Principe Heights," close to the famous "Principe Castle." COK broadcasts daily except Sundays from 12:00 noon to 12:00 mid. EWT.

The notes of the "Peanut Vendor" usher in COK's broadcasting activities for the day. Some of the more important programs featured over the station are: At 3:30 p.m., Pan-American newscast; 5:00 p.m., "Why We Fight"; 6:00 p.m., national news, followed by official news of the Cuban Ministry of State; 7:00 p.m., "The Voice of Liberty"; 9:00 p.m., last-minute news; 10:00 p.m., dance music from the famous Sans Souci restaurant.

During COK's brief history more than eight thousand reports of reception have been received from all over the world, including such places as Australia, New Zealand, Palestine, Iceland, England, Spain, Argentina, etc. More than five thousand reports have been received from the United States. Every report is acknowledged with colored post-cards, a verification card and a souvenir automobile license plate.

Lt. Col. Jaime Marine, national sports director, in his capacity as head of the Cuban National Sports Commission has the management and control of COK's activities. Sr. Antonio Ruiz Azoy, a member of the Cuban consular service, is the COK director.

Station Notes

THE AMERICAS—After a long absence, CJRX (11.72), Winnipeg, Canada, is back on the air and operating approximately 12:00 noon-1:00 a.m.; Sundays 12:00 noon-5:30 p.m. EWT... The Latin on 5.85 megs is located at Santiago, D. R. It operates nightly 7:40 p.m.-12:00 mid. EWT... A new Havana, Cuba, station, COX (9.64), may be heard relaying standard broadcast station CMZ daily from about 1:00 to 11:15 p.m. EWT.

AFRICA—AFHQ (Allied Force HQ), Algiers, broadcasts programs to American networks and press material to American publications week-days approximately 8:00-9:45 a.m. on 15.98, and 6:30-7:45 p.m. EWT on 8.96... A new Cairo, Egypt, station on 7.495 megs may be heard at 3:15-6:00 p.m. EWT.

EUROPE—Messages from American prisoners in German camps are broadcast frequently at 7:13 and 9:13 p.m. EWT. Best reception is usually furnished by DZD (10.543), DJD (11.77), or DXJ (7.24)... Stockholm broadcasts to North America 12:00 noon-2:15 p.m. over SBT (15.155) and SBP (11.705) and SBU (9.535).

ASIA-AUSTRALIA—Chungking, China, is using a new frequency of 7.17 megs daily 6:00 a.m.-12:30 p.m. EWT. The North American transmission is broadcast 10:00-11:35 a.m. EWT on 7.17 and 6.12 (the latter frequency will soon be replaced by 9.63 megs.)

KATHARINE RAHT, radio's Mrs. Aldrich, brought up to be a Chattanooga belle, surprised her family by becoming a teacher after graduation from Bryn Mawr. When she left teaching to attend a school of the theater, her family and neighbors all but swooned. Kay's first acting-plum was the role of Mrs. Gibbs in "Our Town." This month marks her fourth year as Mrs. Aldrich

HOUSE JAMESON, pater of the Aldrich clan, began his theatrical career by carrying a spear in the Theater Guild production of "St. Joan." His next assignment was a burlesque of Will Rogers in "Grand Street Follies." Because he was Texas-born, the director assumed he could twirl a lasso. House couldn't, but he bought a rope and learned the trick in one afternoon

HENRY'S sister Mary in the Aldrich family is Brooklyn-born Mary Rolfe. At the age of eighteen months she was carried onto the stage in true theater fashion; made her debut as a performer in dance recitals with her brother. "Brother Rat" was first Broadway show after graduation from the American Academy of Dramatic Art in N. Y. "The Eve of St. Mark" is her latest hit

JACKIE KELK, Henry's squeaky-voiced pal Homer on the airlines, doesn't squeak away from the mike. Gravel-clogged imitation was born when he auditioned for the role and interpreted it as he figured it should be given. Recently Jackie toured Canada in a bond drive that netted more than $2,000,000. In addition to numerous radio stints, Jackie's a regular busboy at New York's Stage Door Canteen, where everybody calls him Homer

RADIO ALBUM

The Aldrich Family

STUDIO visitors to "The Aldrich Family" program Thursday evening on NBC never come away from the show muttering, "I was disappointed. The cast didn't look and act a bit the way they sound on the radio." Rather, they leave with a feeling that they have actually been a guest at the Aldrich home.

One reason for this can be traced to the fact that Katharine Raht (Mrs. Aldrich) knows more about her mythical house in Centerville than she does about her New York apartment. "I know every inch of it," she smiles, "the yard, kitchen, even the pattern of the wallpaper."

House Jameson (Sam Aldrich) actually lives his radio role in real life on his Connecticut farm. Recently he and his wife located a Swedish maid and hired her. Day before she was due to arrive, they got a note stating: "I've decided not to come. I couldn't live in the same house with your Henry. He gets into too much trouble."

Credit for that realism goes to author of the serial, Clifford Goldsmith. He patterns the weekly Aldrich dramas from life in his own community.

NORMAN TOKAR (Hen-reey!), around whom one of America's most popular radio families revolves, is an extremely affable young man with several talents. He writes radio plays—sells them. He's a veteran of such stage successes as "Delicate Story" and "Days of Our Youth." When voice resemblance to the original Henry Aldrich (Ezra Stone) threatened to keep him off the air, Norman originated the character of Willie and made a hit!

Hollywood Women

AMERICA, and rightly, hears much today of the heroic exploits of our fighting aviators, but little or nothing about the ground crews that do the work which keeps them flying. The same might be said of Hollywood women who have been working quietly and constantly, doing their share to speed victory for the United Nations. For like good ground crews, they have been doing their jobs without fuss or fanfare.

The fact that a few are photographed at the canteen in Hollywood washing dishes, doing various other chores, or selling war securities on tours, tells only a little of the story. The really tough work of planning, and time given voluntarily to bring their efforts to a successful conclusion goes unmarked. So let's have a look at some of the proofs of that statement:

Mrs. Pat O'Brien, wife of actor Pat, is Southern State

Administrative Chairman of the American Women's Voluntary Service, and has been largely responsible for the success of the organization, which began with a handful of women and now numbers ten thousand. Mrs. Pat's ability to handle women has kept the outfit running smoothly.

Joan Bennett, single-handed, raised the money for furnishing thirty-two recreation halls in Army camps, personally shopped for all equipment. Joan has seen to it that every one has a piano, radio-phonograph, easy chairs and games—anything and everything that would make a large, bare room look homey and prove comfortable.

Only doctor's orders slowed up Rosalind Russell. Even though she has a legitimate excuse for less work in her approaching motherhood, Roz kept right on touring camps, working for the Red Cross and doing canteen duty.

The different war organizations in Hollywood number no less than twenty, each working from different angles for the common cause of victory. Joan Crawford has been financing a nursery in Sawtelle until it can go it alone. This project provides a place where mothers engaged in war work can leave their children. Joan has her own desk in the nursery office, takes care of bills personally. Because of her quiet efforts, there are fewer absentees from vital war work, and mothers are left free to do a better job. And, as a result of her idea, plans are being laid to open similar nurseries in other war production centers.

Every sincere American woman from Maine to California, who is doing her share, has a counterpart in Hollywood women at war. For like millions of others they work tirelessly to achieve the common goal of winning the peace. And to that end, they also serve.

Sergeant SIMMS

U. S. Marine Corps at Pearl Harbor Gave Ginny Her Title

IT'S a heart-warming experience to see "Sergt." Ginny Simms passing out applications to servicemen who want to talk to their home folk via the "Johnny Presents Ginny Simms" broadcast. And a look at the names on the applications reveals a roster of Cohens and Kellys from Coast to Coast.

ORIGINATOR of Ginny's broadcast is hard-working Vic Knight. He produces the show, writes songs for it, too

Watching a young soldier or sailor, still in his teens, come to the mike, hearing him say, "Hello, Mom" for perhaps the first time in many months, leaves your throat strangely dry and lumpy. And you think silently, here's a great morale-builder, because it brings youth in America's armed forces closer to home through the telephone. Not only that, but it serves to bring these boys closer to the American people, and the whole of America on the home front nearer to them.

Every so often Ginny gets letters asking how her show can get telephone priorities for long-distance calls when lines are so heavily burdened. But they don't come from those who have sat in her studio audience and watched boys talk to their loved ones. They have the answer in their hearts—the same one given by the War Department—it's a great morale tonic!

GINNY SIMMS' ability to read a radio script as though she were actually talking face to face with men in our armed forces won her present role on "Johnny Presents Ginny Simms." Ginny, above, is just clowning. She is really very handy at knitting

The art of making a date

by Bob Hope

It's easy to make a date. If you're a man, the logical thing to do is to make it with a girl. And don't be afraid to turn on that charm. All the great lovers have charm. Look at Herbert Marshall. Look at Charles Boyer. Look at me. Well, maybe you'd better look at Charles Boyer.

First, pick up the phone, call the most beautiful girl you know. Then, if you have another nickel, call one who will go out with you. When she answers, speak to her in a voice that's inviting and pleasant . . . like the swell, cool taste of Pepsodent Tooth Paste.

Next, be sure you look neat. If you have a two-pants suit, wear the least shiny pair outside. Shiny teeth are okay, though . . . especially if you use Pepsodent to make them bright. Pepsodent really puts a gleam in your smile. Naturally, later on, you can move the gleam up to your eye.

At her house, ring the front doorbell. Then rush around and catch her escaping by the rear door. Once I caught nine fellows dashing out. From the way their teeth flashed in the dark, I guess they just dropped by to use my girl's Pepsodent. I'm sure of it. One fellow had a brush.

Later, if you're out in public, tilt your hat at a rakish angle. This makes you look debonair. It also blocks her view of all the smiling soldiers and sailors you pass. Their smiles have plenty of "come-on" these days because, of all brands, Pepsodent's their No. 1 favorite.

Now, it's not patriotic to go driving. It wastes gas. And walking wastes shoe leather. Also, there might be a blackout. So, simply turn out the lights and sit around in the dark praising Pepsodent for making her teeth so bright. Because, if you follow the beam, you'll never miss her kisser.

See You Tuesday Night on NBC.

Watch for "THE WAY TO BE HEALTHY" by Bob Hope

Bob Hope says:

"Remember . . . Don't waste Pepsodent!"

Help save enough for others, and there will be enough for you.

1. Measure out 1/4-inch of Paste on brush. It's plenty. Always squeeze and roll tube from the bottom.
2. Pour Powder in your hand, not on your brush. Use only a spot the size of a nickel. It's enough.
3. Moisten brush before applying Paste. Dab (don't rub) moistened brush in Powder. This prevents dentifrice from washing down drain.
4. Pepsodent is so effective, so safe . . .

YOUNG WIFE REVEALS HOW SHE OVERCAME THE "ONE NEGLECT" THAT SPOILS SO MANY MARRIAGES

1. At housekeeping and cooking, yes, I was A-1. And at first, John and I were blissfully happy. But slowly, John grew moody, neglected me. I grew jumpy, tearful.

WHAT'S COOKING!

LESLEY WOODS, heard on CBS "Joyce Jordan, M. D." show, delights in trying recipes featuring left-overs. No longer can it be said of American cooks that they waste more than it takes for a French housewife to prepare a delicious meal.

MEAT EXTENDER DISHES

YOU have to be a conniving woman to run a household these days. Timid souls are lost before they begin. But there are so many tempting ways to fix a delicious dinner that most women have become adjusted to the new routine. Don't plan only for today. Remember there's tomorrow and the next day to be included in your planning. Men and women these busy days need nourishing foods and these foods must be prepared with plenty of foresight. Men may not take too readily to a meat substitute as they do to a new dessert, but then meat is rationed, and that means that the meat dish must be made to stretch further. Smart planners receive no complaints from the family.

Women are benefiting from this change-about in their customary lives. They are learning new means of economy. They are buying according to necessity, not whim. It's a valuable lesson. Why we had to have a war to become conscious of our previous wastes is not understandable. Now we're going to learn to make one pound of meat take the place of two. We're going to use left-overs not only for sandwiches for the next day but as another main dinner dish. What's more, we're going to cook all foods in such a tempting way that our families will praise our culinary ingenuity.

Food experts haven't been asleep at the switch while this change was taking place. They were planning many recipes to help housewives plan delicious meals—without using too much or more than their share of meat. The result is an array of tempting meat dishes that are a boon to any dinner table. Here are some tested recipes to help solve your meat problems. Serve them to your family or to unexpected dinner guests.

American Chop Suey

- 2 tablespoons fat
- 1 cup sliced onion
- ½ pound fresh pork, cut into strips
- ¼ cup uncooked rice
- 4 bouillon cubes
- 4 cups hot water
- ¾ teaspoon salt
- 1 cup green pepper strips
- 1 cup celery strips
- 1½ teaspoons Soy Sauce
- 2 cups oven-popped rice cereal
- 1 tablespoon butter

Heat fat in heavy frying-pan; add onions and meat; cook until lightly browned. Add rice and stock made by dissolving bouillon cubes in hot water. Add salt; cover and simmer about twenty minutes longer. Serve at once with buttered, toasted rice cereal.

(Yield: Four one-cup servings.)

"Most men can't forgive one neglect, darling. A wife can't be careless of feminine hygiene (intimate personal daintiness)." Then she explained . . .

3. "Today, many thousands of women use Lysol disinfectant for feminine hygiene. My doctor advises Lysol." And she told how it won't harm sensitive vaginal tissues, "Just follow the easy directions," she advised. "Lysol deodorizes, cleanses thoroughly. No wonder this famous germicide is so widely used!"

Check this with your Doctor

Lysol is NON-CAUSTIC—gentle and efficient in proper dilution. Contains no free alkali. It is not carbolic acid. EFFECTIVE—a powerful germicide, active in presence of organic matter (such as mucus, serum, etc.). SPREADING—Lysol solutions spread and thus virtually search out germs in deep crevices. ECONOMICAL—small bottle makes almost 4 gallons of solution for feminine hygiene. CLEANLY ODOR—disappears after use. LASTING—Lysol keeps full strength indefinitely no matter how often it is uncorked.

"THE FOUNDATION OF LOVELINESS"

By
Edith Hampton

IT'S SPRING FERVOR

YES, here it is again—the season of birds, bees and that certain feeling that makes the world go round and round—love. Since this year there's a definite shortage of the all-important factor in a love-scene—the male species—we must lavish our accelerated spirits on something else. Why not on life itself? Webster defines the word "life" as "animate existence" or "vitality," nothing akin to that common allergy known as "spring fever." So quell the urge to let everything "go hang" because you feel seasonably feverish. Take a walk, do anything, but don't let it get you.

Chase spring doldrums by primping yourself for a make-believe vacation. Give your wardrobe a thorough going-over. First, sort out all your winter clothes and make sure they're spotlessly clean before you pack them away. They'll be needed to keep you warm next winter, so treat them with care. Next, take last year's spring frills out of mothballs and give them the once-over. A stitch here and there, a new collar on last year's print, and a shiny lapel pin on your 1942 spring suit will make them fashion finds for '43. As a new note, why not add one of those all-round victory sports dresses styled by Valincot. A perky chapeau, bag and gloves to complete your wardrobe will make you a welcome addition to budding spring.

By the way, when you are spring-cleaning bureau drawers and vanities, see if you have any eyebrow tweezers, manicure scissors, mirrors or empty beauty kits and compacts that you don't want. The Medical and Surgical Relief Committee of 420 Lexington Avenue, New York, exhorts all of us to send these sorely needed articles. They will be used in the medical kits that the committee donates to the fighting forces and to civilian defense units of United Nations. Any size or variety is gratefully received. So come on, girls; we know you have plenty of these articles that you don't need. Why not send them along?

Now, about you. You, too, must be all pepped and prettied to set off your clothes to their best advantage, so get busy and remove all the vestiges of Old Man Winter from your weary bones.

Start the Day Right

With a hop, leap and a jump you're out of bed in the morning. Pull up the shade and take a peek at what night has done to the world outside. Then decide what you'll wear to keep step with the weather. Dress painstakingly whether you're housewife, salesgirl, office or defense worker. The woman who looks trim is usually more capable of doing her best at any job.

Are You a Dreamer?

Well, don't worry about it. Does us all good to revel in romantic notions once in a while. A vivid imagination often keeps hope soaring. That's what we all need these days. Maybe riding through spring-laden country roads in a rumble seat with the man of the hour isn't very likely this year, but keep on dreaming; never can tell when Uncle Sam will relent and let that soldier or sailor heart-throb of yours

By Robert Bagar

PERHAPS the style in operatic divas is changing, perhaps not, but the contemporary ones are a far cry from the temperamental ladies of the past—those hectic ladies, those fiery, dominating, wilful ladies of the past. How they loved to exert their powers over others! How unreasonably demanding they were! Most of them, at any rate.

The archives are bursting with anecdotes about the divas of old, little larruping anecdotes about the havoc they have wreaked. They might make a good story sometime. The point now is to underscore the difference lying between an operatic diva like Gladys Swarthout, say, and the general run of the older ones who, great as they may have been as artists, were perfect pains as human beings.

The first thing one notices about Miss Swarthout—that is, one must make a definite point of noticing, because she has enough charm to prevent anything like a close-up analysis—is her serenity. She is truly a serene person. Whether or not that is something she was born with, one has no way of telling. The chances are, however, that it just grew out of a wealth of experience in the theater, in life.

She works like a Trojan. She does dozens of concerts a year, all over the country. Scarcely a week passes by without some Swarthout event in some part of the nation. She lives on trains. She lives on planes. That is because she is a very popular artist. She does a weekly broadcast over CBS, the Prudential "Family Hour," you know. She sings at the Metropolitan.

All of that, naturally, takes considerable doing. Yet the effort and energy involved in the keeping of concert, radio and opera dates is nothing as compared to those expended in preparing for them. Rehearsal, everlasting rehearsal, study, learning new pieces, going crazy trying to present different programs. To be original and individualistic in the presentation of a group of items is one thing, to go berserk in a ceaseless search for the unusual, per se, is another. The latter a serious, sincere, intelligent artist must never do.

With all these matters to occupy her, with the thousand and one details that confront her every single day of her life, Miss Swarthout can be a serene person. That is our contemporary diva or, one hopes, what is a representative example of her. That is the way the contemporary diva should be. One wonders just how many of the other present-day ones are as serene as Miss Swarthout.

In her New York apartment, whose windows look out on the East River, Miss Swarthout finds time to relax. An artist who might be called upon to sing any type of composition, from a mild little ditty to a great emotional flare-out, needs relaxation. Then there is a place in Connecticut, whose lovely grounds and views help the cause of relaxation along, too.

No singer is more devoted to her work than Miss Swarthout. She reads endlessly, studies endlessly, investigates everything there is to investigate. All of it helps her interpretative powers, of course. Sometimes she pores over a simple phrase for hours. She is extremely meticulous about musicianship. The singer must be, first of all, a fine musician, she says.

Diction, she has discovered, does not always get the attention it truly performance over the air.

"Yes," he said, "but what happened to them after that? What I mean is to have a regular repertory company, doing brand-new works. The idea is to create for the radio, and then to keep on performing these works on the radio.

"I suppose it calls for a great deal of labor, but it might be well worth it. No art can survive without a subvention of some kind, whether from private individuals or great companies. When the subvention comes from the public, it means success, you know."

The gentleman, of course, was shouting a battle-cry for new music. There is nothing wrong with doing that, of course. So one lets him shout.

The King Returns

Paul Whiteman, who used to sport rather proudly the title of King of Jazz, has recently been appointed director of music for the Blue Network. The genial maestro has been going in more and more for serious music, as witness his guest appearances with symphonic orchestras throughout the country.

At the present writing one does not know exactly what Mr. Whiteman's actual duties will be. Obviously he will be shifting from jazz to concert music, as he has been accustomed to doing. Anyway, the Whiteman influence will be felt, never fear. He is one of those instinctive musicians who know immediately what is tasteful, what isn't. So the writer salutes Mr. Whiteman and wishes him well in his new work.

POPULAR MUSIC

JERRY WAYNE, who comes from Buffalo, thought he might become a dentist. Dentists seem to get a lot of work, and, besides, his parents were all for his making dentistry his career.

At high school and college, though, he did some singing with bands. He also played a little piano and guitar here and there. He liked it. In fact, he liked it immensely. He thought that this might be better than dentistry.

Somehow or other, though, he got into acting. He did some theater work and finally lit out for Hollywood, where he appeared in a number of pictures. Small parts, you know.

One day he sang before an orchestra. He liked that, it seems, best of all. He had taken voice lessons back home. Now he was all for going into the thing. This, at last, was what he had always wanted to do.

So he became Jerry Wayne, singer, and it is as a singer that he has attained eminence. He is deeply interested in good music. He goes to concerts, to the opera whenever he can.

Jerry Wayne, it seems important to add at this point, is quite a tennis player. In fact, he could have become a champion. Now he plays it for exercise and relaxation. But he always takes his partners over.

He is an excellent athlete, having played football, baseball, basketball and other sports at college. In short, Jerry Wayne is a balanced individual who knows how to sing popular songs. Every Friday night he goes into Carnegie Hall to sing with the Mark Warnow orchestra on that cigarette broadcast. He hopes, some day, to sing serious music there.

A Celebrated Present-Day Soprano vs. Temperamental Operatic Divas of Old requires. "The words of a song are important. They convey the message that the composer endeavored to put into his music. Together they make the complete work. The interpreter must be equally concerned with text and music. One cannot favor one over the other. That is not being an artist."

Miss Swarthout expects to make a movie soon. She has been much in demand for film roles but she has had little time for work in motion pictures, though she has already appeared in several very successful ones.

All in all, Gladys Swarthout, in a very quiet, unostentatious manner, does a tremendous amount of work. But in everything she does there is always to be noticed the sincerity of purpose that distinguishes the true singer of songs.

Radio Opera

A friend was talking about opera on the radio the other day. He did not mean the Metropolitan Opera broadcasts. He meant opera specially written for the radio, with the limitations or the scope of the radio in mind. He meant new works.

His theories were rather interesting. He said: "Lots of communities in this country have lately been made aware that such a thing as grand opera exists. You can thank your Met broadcasts for that. You can also thank other broadcasts, originating at Chicago, for instance, Los Angeles, in short, wherever opera companies have been functioning before the public.

"But I think," he continued, "that more attention should be paid to building a repertory of radio operas. There is nothing to prevent such works from being done in public, later on, you know. But if a whole series of such pieces were done, it would not only stimulate young composers to try their hand at the new thing but also increase the people's interest in opera that exists already."

One reminded the speaker that Gian-Carlo Menotti, the young Italo-American composer, had already written a pair of works exclusively for

RIDIN' SIX WHITE HORSES

The child bobbed her head. Sophie looked at her more closely, realized that Tunia was older than she seemed, despite the pigtails and faded, one-piece jumper she wore. Eban explained he had come to see Paul about the wood, apparently missing him on the way up the mountain. Sophie heard her husband whistling outside, and Eban, too, recognized the sound. He excused himself and left. Tunia remained. Sophie told her to go along with her father.

"I be a-studyin' on it," the little girl said. "I be a-studyin' whether to go along or stay here."

"Now look, Tunia, I'm very cross," Sophie said. "You'll understand when you grow up and marry a man too artistic to help you with the dishes. So—"

"It gets pure lonesome up here, ma'am," Tunia said, ignoring Sophie. "I'd be proud to jest set a spell and watch you. I won't do no jabberin'."

Sophie sighed. There was little else she could do, so she tossed the child a towel and told her to help with the dishes. They worked together in silence for a time. Tunia's initial shyness wilted and she began talking. Sophie gave little heed to the flow of words, merely nodding now and then to show she still was listening. But Tunia, a past master at psychology, chatted along until Sophie found herself hanging on the child's strange story.

"You ain't gonna like it up here, ma'am," the child ran on. "Ain't any place to go in these hull mountains 'ceptin' up to Miss Ghost Lady's. Each day when I git shut of my chores, I run along up to Miss Ghost Lady's. Likely I'll go up to Miss Ghost Lady's today, only I gotta wait 'til she's fittin' to see me. Miss Ghost Lady is city folk. 'Cept she's lived up here fer 'bout the past six months in a little ol' cabin all by her loneleys."

"Whatever for?" Sophie could have bitten her tongue off. Tunia had her now.

"Cause," said the child, "it's a heap easier fer her to go meetin' Deechner up here, I s'pose."

"Deechner? The names you people have!"

"Deechner be dead," Tunia said casually.

Sophie held a platter poised in mid-air. "Dead?" Then her voice became elaborate. "Oh, well, that makes everything all right!"

Tunia missed the sarcasm. "But when there's a great big ol' full moon, Miss Ghost Lady, she jest goes walkin' off over the dewy grass into the moonlight and there's her Deechner a-waitin' fer her. I seen it myself twict now, only I never told her."

Tunia's father called from outside and the child bobbed her head and hung her towel on the rack back of the stove.

"I taked a notion to you," she confided in Sophie. "I wouldn't tell you no-no tales."

Abruptly she was gone, like some wild thing seen in the woods in a fleeting second before melting into the underbrush. Even the screen door was silent in her parting. Sophie began wondering whether the child actually had been there. She went ahead with the dishes, grumbling to herself about the Ghost Lady, Deechner and the imagination of mountain folk. Paul found her that way when he came back to ask where his typewriter was. But Sophie had no intention of letting him get back to work. She asked him about the Ghost Lady and Deechner.

Paul tried to dismiss the subject. "Some of the local mountain characters, I suppose. They always call each other freakish names."

"Deechner is dead—in case you're interested."

"Well," Paul said, spreading a paper on a table and opening his portable, "then there's one less to come borrowing sugar and flour."

Sophie couldn't be put off. "Oh," she said flippantly, "being dead doesn't stop Deechner. He seems to get around a lot. Meets his girl friend whenever there's a full moon." She paused, biting her lip. "You know, Paul, there's something about that name. It's unusual. I seem to remember . . . Deechner . . . Deechner . . . Paul! Remember Deechner Stuart?"

Paul stopped his typing and looked up, suddenly interested. "Deechner Stuart? Hey?"

"Remember?" Sophie's voice was eager. "He was quite the party boy around town. Married Elaine Forest—big society name. Then he was killed in an auto accident a few days after their marriage . . . and Elaine dropped out of sight after that."

Sophie's enthusiasm was infectious. "Sure," Paul cried, "sure, I remember—"

"Paul, we've stumbled onto something! Elaine Forest! She's hiding up here in the mountains—and when there's a full moon—she—she goes out and meets the ghost of Deechner Stuart!"

"Accompanied by Marie Antoinette and Julius Caesar," Paul said scornfully. "This mountain air is going to your head, Sophie!"

"Oh, Paul, let's go home. I don't want any ghosts coming to borrow sugar from me!"

"If they do," Paul said laughing, "make 'em show their ration-card." But Paul became thoughtful and he said almost to himself, "But there was that phone call, and—"

"Paul! What about that phone call?"

Paul frowned. "Oh, nothing," he said carelessly. "Darling, I love you. I love you dearly—except when you get inquisitive."

"But, Paul," she protested. "This is the week of the full moon! What if the ghost of Deechner Stuart decides to walk—tonight!"

OF COURSE they couldn't resist going ghost-stalking that night. Who could have? Painfully they made their way along the tiny mountain path toward the cabin of the Ghost Lady. Only the night noises—the sound of insects and call of night-birds—broke the wilderness hush. Sophie complained once that the mountain folk had cut no steps in the rock path. Her shoes weren't made for this sort of adventure. Paul merely grunted and helped her along as best he could. There was plenty of light—the moon was full and the sky was clear. Tall spruce, pine and hardwood trees made weird patterns on the open path, while distances were lost in the shadows ahead, behind and on either side.

They found the cabin and waited in the dark. Sophie began to shiver with the night chill. But blood rushed through her body warming it again with excitement when Paul suddenly pressed her arm.

"There!" he whispered hoarsely. "There she is—coming out of the door of her cabin!"

"Golly," Sophie murmured, "that's a good-looking dress she's wearing. Look, there she goes up the mountain path. And she's carrying a big basket. Tunia was right about the food."

Sophie and Paul left the path and made their way as quietly as they could while still attempting to follow the progress of the shadowy figure of the woman ahead. Abruptly Paul stopped. Again he pressed Sophie's arm.

"Get ready for it, Sophie," he breathed in her ear. "There's a man coming out of the shadows!"

"A man!" Sophie's voice rose a note and Paul quickly put his hand over her mouth.

"There, see?" Paul said, taking his hand away and pointing. "He's met the woman. It's Elaine Forest, all right, and the man is Deechner Stuart!"

PAUL and Sophie were hiding in a thicket, peeking around the jagged edges of a huge boulder into the open spot ahead. The moonlight made everything distinctive, although its ghostly light seemed unreal and dreamlike. Sophie almost screamed in fright when the bushes to their right moved imperceptibly and another person silently joined them. It was Tunia.

"What are you doing up here?" Paul asked in a whisper.

"Stalkin' ghost jist like you," the little girl said. "Miss Ghost Lady's walkin' up the mountain with that ol' Deechner. That ol' Deechner—he's a ghost."

"Tunia, aren't you scared?" Sophie asked curiously.

"Jest a mite," the girl replied. "Can I stay with you-uns?"

Paul made a warning gesture and pointed. The Ghost Lady was coming back down the path. Sophie held her breath. So did the others. Only a cricket under the boulder made a sound. They heard the scraping of the woman's footsteps on the rocky path, saw her as she passed in front of them in front of the big boulder. Her arms were empty. The big basket was gone!

After she was gone, Paul stood up. "Come on now," he whispered, "we'll follow the ghost—on the double!"

Silently they stumbled up the path. Sophie fell once and skinned her elbow. Tunia helped her back to her feet while Paul scolded in a hushed voice. The one small rock rolling down the side of the path had sounded like an avalanche. Paul was certain they had frightened their quarry.

The path came to an abrupt end, sharp against the face of a cliff.

"In the movies," Sophie said rather petulantly, "there'd be a stone that would roll aside and there'd be a cave in this cliff and—"

But Tunia had found the opening—a rock that did roll aside to reveal the mouth of a cave. Sophie remarked that she knew it would be like the movies, and all three of them entered the cave.

Paul turned on his flashlight. The cave was bigger than its mouth had indicated. A passage opened darkly ahead of them and they made toward it. Sophie suddenly squealed. A bat had flown at the light. Her voice echoed hollowly back at them, testifying to the depth of the cavern. They cautiously made their way forward, Sophie ducking each time a bat swooped toward the light. Finally, she tugged at Paul's coat-sleeve.

"Listen!" she said. "Those bats are making such a racket that—Paul, what was that?"

There was a scraping sound, the noise of a heavy object being moved across stone—then complete silence. The three persons in the cave no longer heard the chirp of crickets, the call of night-birds. Paul turned off the flashlight and they looked back toward the direction they had come. They no longer saw the patch of the moonlit sky that was the mouth of the cave. Someone had rolled the great stone back in place!

They ran back toward the opening.

Paul put his shoulders against it, but the big stone didn't budge.

"Fuddleberries!" said Tunia. "There's a scaper out there has trapped us neat as a box in a hole!"

Only Tunia seemed to take the situation calmly. Paul was frightened for Sophie's sake, but his nerve came back when he discovered that she had reconciled herself to being buried alive. Sophie really was frightened, but covered her fright by normal laughter. She didn't want Paul to know she was scared.

"All the comforts of home," she said as her husband's flashlight slowly began to make a circle of the cave's interior. "Candles—a straw bed on the floor . . . and look, Paul, a kind of rough desk fashioned out of stone—"

"And books," Paul said. "Looks like the ghost keeps accounts. Probably marks down the number of houses he haunts each year."

Tunia's high-pitched voice added its comment. "I been a-studyin' on this here Deechner," she said rather matter-of-factly. "Likely he ain't no more ghost than us-uns."

"Well," said Paul a bit soberly, "we're going to be ghosts before long, if we can't find some way out of this vault!"

The air already seemed stuffy and both Sophie and Tunia complained about being tired. They sat down on the straw bed on the floor of the cave while Paul busied himself exploring. He smiled ruefully when he came back after his unsuccessful trip. Both Tunia and Sophie were asleep on the straw. Paul rubbed his chin and looked at them. He thought it was best to let them rest a while. Meanwhile, he sat down to read the books he found on the stone desk. When he had finished, he woke his companions.

"Sophie," he said, "I've happened onto the scoop of a lifetime. Do you know who's been living in this cave?"

"Why, I—"

"The man who lives here is the brains of the Spider Gang! And that man is Deechner Stuart!"

"But Deechner Stuart is—"

"No," Paul interrupted, "he isn't dead. He wasn't killed in that auto accident. These books and papers prove it. He's been reorganizing his Hoot Gibson is returning to movies. He will make a picture with Ken Maynard for Monogram. When interviewed, Hoot said, "I'd like movie-goers to know that real cowboys don't wear chaps inside their boots" . . .

Gable tactics. Gary Cooper will employ them for his role of Clint Maroon in "Saratoga Trunk" when he makes love to Ingrid Bergman. For movie-goers who haven't read the Ferber novel from which picture is made, we will say that they can expect Gable's Rhett Butler technique in "Gone With the Wind" . . .

Jottings from Movietown. The Iron Cross that Conrad Veidt wears in "Casablanca" was purchased by Warners' prop department for thirty-five cents in a Hollywood pawnshop . . . Movie villain George Sanders got so befuddled during an air-raid alarm while on a visit to New York that he didn't know what to do, solved the problem by calling his agent for advice . . . Teresa Wright, Oscar winner for her role in "Mrs. Miniver," is leaving screen work temporarily to prepare for role of motherhood in real life.

FREQUENCY MODULATION

Forecast for FM

A GLIMPSE of what your family radio set may be like five or ten years from now was given when James L. Fly, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission (which has authority over all broadcasting in this country), uttered a few prophetic words on the subject.

Mr. Fly envisages a single radio receiver designed to combine reception of frequency modulation, television and radio-facsimile broadcasting. "This business of having separate receivers for separate radio services," he said, "that will all be washed out."

The all-purpose home receiver will be based, he declared, "upon the best developments we have had to date, and those we get out of the war, in the FM field and television. I should not be surprised in the course of years if you will have only one receiver. You will have as a basis your highly efficient FM operation and then, at appropriate hours, the television programs. Every hour or so you will come down and tear off your facsimile news reports. We have been in the horse-and-buggy days up to now."

(Radio facsimile is an ingenious form of broadcasting whereby printed matter and pictures are transmitted over the air and reproduced identically in the home. It differs from television, which offers motion pictures upon a screen, in that permanent copies of the printed matter are reproduced at the receiver and may be saved and read at any time.

All-Purpose Receiver for the Home Predicted; Applications for Construction of FM Stations Reinstated by FCC for Quick Action After War

By DICK DORRANCE

Help From Washington

Mr. Fly's comments were made in connection with a recent move by the Federal Communications Commission which will be of considerable benefit to FM. Briefly, this action relaxes a previous ruling of the commission which, because of war-time conditions, dismissed about fifty applications for new FM stations a year ago. In addition, some thirty-five construction permits that had already been granted to authorize the building of FM outlets in many parts of the country were frozen, due to the need for conserving essential radio equipment.

Now, however, any of the fifty applications or thirty-five construction permits may be reinstated, upon request, and will be carefully kept on file by the FCC until the end of the war. This means that as soon as peace returns FM will have an opportunity to make a quick start, since all Washington needs to do at that time is act upon requests already made for new stations. If this were not the case, aspiring owners of FM stations would have to go through much official routine and delay before they could obtain the desired permission from Washington to put an FM station on the air.

Here's the Reason

The decision to give FM broadcasting this advantage was made, according to Mr. Fly, "simply because we want to encourage FM . . . as much as we can and cause the least trouble possible. The thing we want to get is a demonstration of the good faith and intention of the parties concerned to go ahead and put up FM stations and serve the public with them. There were not enough of those applications that they would be alarming from the quantitative point of view; and in most localities, of course, there are plenty of FM channels, so there would not be the same embarrassment and difficulties we would have in the standard broadcasting field, where there is a scarcity of channels."

Of the fifty applications pending a year ago when Washington decided to dismiss them, more than a quarter have already been reinstated at the applicants' request and will automatically be considered as soon as possible at the end of the war. Among the cities concerned are New York, Los Angeles, Duluth, Philadelphia, Houston, Albany, Ashland (Ky.), Detroit, Louisville.

The War Comes First

Occasionally letters are received from readers of MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE still asking how soon they may expect FM service in their parts of the country. Unfortunately, we have a war to win ahead of any and everything else. New FM stations—in fact, new broadcasting stations of any kind—are not being built today, because the parts, tubes, metals and engineering skill that go into them are gravely needed to supply American fighting men with some of the best radio equipment in the world.

New FM receivers are not being built, either. But, to serve the half-million FM sets already in use, a total of forty-six FM broadcasters continue regular operation and intend to keep on doing so. The experience they are gaining will pay dividends after the war in better programming and service when hundreds of new FM transmitters go on the air and the public can buy all the FM receivers it wants. Right now, it's a matter of being patient and doing all you can to help win the war. FM for everybody is one of those better things we gain with a real peace.

THIS MONTH

Pictures Offer a Wide Variety of Thrill-Packed

CHARLES LAUGHTON and Una O'Connor (left) in mother and son roles for RKO's "This Land Is Mine." Laughton portrays a schoolmaster in a picture that reveals workings of Nazi war machine

ROMANCE through a hundred thirty-seven years of changing history is unreeled in "Forever and a Day." One of the best sequences is where Ida Lupino (right) as Jenny, the maid in a rich family, falls in love with Brian Aherne (Jim Trimble), poor member of an aristocratic clan

"FIVE GRAVES TO CAIRO" marks screen return of silent-day villain Erich von Stroheim, known as the man movie-goers loved to hate. Above: Akim Tamiroff, Franchot Tone and Anne Baxter in scene from picture. Anne plays role of Mouche, which, in French, means "Little Fly"

"This Land Is Mine"

Cast: Charles Laughton, Maureen O'Hara, Una O'Connor, George Sanders, Walter Slezak, Kent Smith, Nancy Gates, Philip Merivale, John Donat, Thurston Hall, George Coulouris and Wheaton Chambers. An RKO picture, produced by Jean Renoir and Dudley Nichols, and directed by Renoir, from the screen play by Dudley Nichols.

HERE'S a picture that started in class "B" and wound up in the "A" class. Almost wholly unpublicized, it exploded like a firecracker when it was completed. Charles Laughton is a natural in the role of a schoolmaster whose life has gone to seed because of the emotional confusion engendered by his mother's domination. The rest of the cast is hand-picked, too. And from star to bit-player each member was so enthusiastic about Dudley Nichols' story that their performances reflect it. It's a war story with a different twist. If you've wondered about the German war machine and how it operates, the answer to many pertinent questions can be found in "This Land Is Mine." It's an exciting and accurate picture of how Nazi-dominated people react. And if you are interested in new screen personalities, you will find Kent Smith's performance the sort that gives promise of being the stuff from which stars are made.

WHAT MOVIE-GOERS CAN EXPECT: A revealing and poignant drama of war-time. Even tough hombres will feel its grip!

"Forever and a Day"

Cast: It's too big to list here, for it contains eighty-two volunteer stars from every major studio in Hollywood. There were seven top directors on the picture, and twenty-one writers, including Alice Duer Miller, Norman Corwin, James Hilton and Donald Ogden Stewart, collaborated on the screen play. To Sir Cedric Hardwicke goes the credit for the original idea of the story. Eager to do something really big for the war effort, Sir Cedric presented his idea to a group of directors and producers, and they all got together in making this RKO release. Everyone who worked on the picture gave his services free. Earnings of this unusual film offering will go to American, Canadian and British welfare organizations.

"FOREVER AND A DAY" shows the merging of two families—the Trimbles and the Pomfrets—through a hundred thirty-seven years of changing history, and brings them finally to the American soldier boy who comes to England with the AEF, finds a bride, and subsequently starts the American branch of the clan. One of the most amusing sequences in this saga shows the birth of the bathtub. Sir Cedric Hardwicke himself takes part in this hilarious episode.

WHAT MOVIE-GOERS CAN EXPECT: A lively, highly entertaining line-up of screen stars in a most unique and interesting film.

"Five Graves to Cairo"

Cast: Franchot Tone, Anne Baxter, Akim Tamiroff, Erich von Stroheim, Peter Van Eyck, Fortunio Bonanova, Konstantin Shayne, Fred Nurney, Miles Mander, Leslie Denison and Ian Keith. A Paramount picture, produced by Charles Brackett and directed by Billy Wilder. Screen play was written by Charles Brackett and Billy Wilder also, from a play by Lajos Biro.

AS THE title plainly signifies, this is a war picture, but the plot centers around espionage rather than actual battle scenes. The war is seen through the experiences of a French chambermaid (Anne Baxter) and a British Tank Corps soldier (Franchot Tone). It's Miss Baxter's first starring role, and she more than justifies the faith producers had in her ability. Erich von Stroheim returns to the screen in the role of Field Marshal Erwin Rommel, a part strongly reminiscent of his performances in silent-day pictures. The opening scenes take place in June, 1942. The British have been driven out of Tobruk and back into Egypt by Rommel's swiftly advancing Afrika Korps. From then on it's plot and counterplot as the British try to regain their losses and outwit the foxy Rommel. It is a picture sans a happy ending, but it does show the allied nations on the march toward victory.

WHAT MOVIE-GOERS CAN EXPECT: Arresting entertainment filled with breath-taking suspense and exciting intrigue for adults.

on the Screen

Dramas Woven Around Present-Day World Events!

"CHINA" is a title that poses a subject too big for any producer to cover in one film—or a dozen—but John Farrow does a fine job, as do Loretta Young and Alan Ladd, who are teamed for first time (r.)

"MISSION TO MOSCOW," former ambassador Joseph E. Davies' best-seller on his days in Russia, comes to the screen with Walter Huston playing the role of Davies. Above: Mr. Huston in scene from picture with Ann Harding (r.) as Mrs. Davies, Eleanor Parker (Emlen Davies)

"Mission to Moscow"

Cast: Walter Huston, Ann Harding, Oscar Homolka, George Tobias, Gene Lockhart, Eleanor Parker, Richard Travis, Helmut Dantine, Victor Francen, Henry Daniell, Barbara Everest, Dudley Field Malone, et al. A Warner Bros.-First National picture, produced by Robert Buckner and directed by Michael Curtiz. Screen play was written by Howard Koch, based on the book of the same title by Joseph E. Davies, America's former ambassador to Russia.

MUCH time, research and effort went into the filming of former Ambassador Joseph E. Davies' best-seller, Mission to Moscow. Its authenticity can't be questioned. Covering a period from 1936, when Italy invaded Ethiopia, the picture covers some of the most eventful years in the history of our times. Mr. and Mrs. Davies were on the set daily conferring with director Curtiz to get details exact and going over their personal experiences with stars Walter Huston and Ann Harding in order to help them portray their diplomatic roles as an ambassador and his wife should. Huston has never done a better performance, and Ann Harding is excellent as Mrs. Davies. Certainly no picture, in this period of stress, could be more timely—or more unbiased—in its presentation. And the personal angle of the Davieses adds to the interest.

WHAT MOVIE-GOERS CAN EXPECT: A tense and vital screen document portraying Russians as they really are. Don't miss it!

"Action in the North Atlantic"

Cast: Humphrey Bogart, Raymond Massey, Alan Hale, Ruth Gordon, Julie Bishop, Sam Levene, Dane Clark, Peter Whitney, Minor Watson, J. M. Kerrigan, Dick Hogan, et al. A Warner Bros.-First National picture, produced by Jerry Wald and directed by Lloyd Bacon. Screen play was written by John Howard Lawson, based on a story by Guy Gilpatric.

ONE of the most realistic stories ever filmed, the keynote of "Action in the North Atlantic," is the terrific struggle American Merchant Marines go through to perform so vital and imperative a task as delivering necessary supplies to our fighting fronts. American youths who protested Humphrey Bogart's romantic detour in "Casablanca" will applaud him in this role of a he-man diving into action as chief mate on an American tanker. It's fascinating film fare for those who crave adventures of men at sea, and even more intriguing for those who know little about one of our most gallant branches of war-time service—the Merchant Marine. For the picture portrays how they battle when a torpedo strikes the tanker.

WHAT MOVIE-GOERS CAN EXPECT: Outstanding work by Bogart and Massey in tense-action drama based on real-life facts.

"China"

Cast: Loretta Young, Alan Ladd, William Bendix; Chinese characters: Philip Ahn, Richard Loo, Sen Yung, Iris Wong, Marianne Quon, Irene Tso, Ching Wah Lee, Soo Yung, Barbara Jean Wong. Also eighteen university costs. A Paramount picture, produced by Richard Blumenthal and directed by John Farrow. The screen play was by Frank Butler, from an Archibald Forbes play.

THE film opens with the bombing of a Chinese village by the Japs and the rescue of a Chinese baby by Johnny Sparrow (William Bendix) as he runs down a flaming street looking for his boss, Mr. Jones (Alan Ladd). Besides being an exciting picture from beginning to end, it serves a bit of truly constructive propaganda in cementing a better understanding between America and the Chinese people. The Loretta Young-Alan Ladd combination is good clear through the picture. Ladd drops the "killer" role that made him famous. He plays straight drama, does well in the role of Mr. Jones, sales representative of the Oklahoma Petroleum Export Corporation. The romantic sequences between Loretta and Alan are, of course, secondary, yet they make up an important part of the picture. And there are some unforgettable scenes with William Bendix and the rescued Chinese baby.

WHAT MOVIE-GOERS CAN EXPECT: One of the better films on the spring menu, and one embracing a comparatively new angle.

THE FIRST PRESIDENTIAL BROADCAST

no two-way conversations were attempted on the first trip to France. On the first return voyage, Beverage wrote, an orchestra was heard aboard the ship by wireless. The music was transmitted by placing a telephone near the orchestra at the New Brunswick Opera House. The vessel at this time was 2,000 miles from New York.

Because of unfavorable atmospheric conditions no conversations between ship and shore were satisfactory until the morning of May 5. Then—

"After establishing satisfactory duplex (two-way) conversation with the engineers at New Brunswick and Navy officials in Washington," Beverage stated, "Secretary of War Baker held a conversation with Assistant Secretary of Navy Roosevelt in Washington. Secretary Baker remarked that 'the connection was as good as over an ordinary toll line.'"

The Payne and Beverage records do not reveal what the reactions of the young Assistant Secretary of the Navy to these primordial radio experiences were.

IT FELL to the lot of Warren G. Harding to usher in the radio era. The advent of broadcasting is generally reckoned from November 2, 1920, election day. That evening Dr. Frank Conrad of the Westinghouse Company put the Harding-Cox election returns on the air through the predecessor station of KDKA, Pittsburgh. He estimated that perhaps one hundred persons heard the report. Harding became the first President to speak to the nation by radio. Ironically, the date was November 11—Armistice Day—the day which Woodrow Wilson had forecast would mark the freedom of peoples. On Armistice Day, 1921, President Harding dedicated the tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington National Cemetery.

"We are met today," he began, "to pay the impersonal tribute. The name of him whose body lies before us took flight with his imperishable soul. We know not whence he came, but only that death marks him with the everlasting glory of an American dying for his country."

He closed with these words: "This sacrifice and that of the millions of dead shall not have been in vain. There must be, there shall be the commanding voice of a conscious civilization against armed warfare."

These were the words—the first of an American President to be heard at scattered firesides throughout the nation.

"Every word the President uttered," one observer wrote, "reached every person through amplifiers, and other thousands upon thousands from New York to San Francisco. The response that came back to him from the thousands he faced, other thousands over the slopes beyond, and perhaps from still other thousands near the Golden Gate or closely packed like the Empire City, rose like a chant."

Woodrow Wilson was present on this historic occasion. He rode in an open carriage near the end of the funeral procession to Arlington.

Two years later, on the eve of Armistice Day, 1923, the voice of Wilson was heard once by the whole nation. On this occasion Wilson broke the silence he had imposed upon himself since leaving the White House March 4, 1921, to make a five-minute address by radio. He spoke into a microphone that had been installed in his home on S Street.

His words came haltingly; his voice was bitter as he charged the nation with "manifestly cowardly and dishonorable" conduct because it "refused to bear any responsible part in the administration of peace or the permanent establishment of the results of war . . ."

"The affairs of the world can be set straight only by the firmest and most determined exhibition of the will to lead and make the right prevail."

WITH these challenging words he closed. When he had finished he turned to someone standing beside him and said in a lower voice, "That is all, isn't it?"

His voice shook throughout this brief talk. He seemed short of breath and some of his phrases were hard to distinguish. But official and unofficial Washington strained to catch his words. His voice was heard through many stations and it reached out to Great Britain, South America and Hawaii, the press reported.

A few months later, February 3, 1924, Woodrow Wilson was dead. A rash of radio stations had broken out over the nation by this time and the broadcasting era was upon the world. Calvin Coolidge and Herbert Hoover came to know the radio well. There remained one further step before the presidential mastery of the microphone was complete. Franklin D. Roosevelt took that step on March 12, 1933. On that day he gave his first fireside chat.

In the past it has been customary for President Roosevelt to take part in the Memorial Day ceremonies held at the tomb of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington, Virginia, during which he makes his annual Memorial Day address to the nation. At this writing it is expected that Mr. Roosevelt will again carry out this custom, in which case the four major networks will probably broadcast his address.

Often after luncheon comes a dull, let-down feeling. The only weapon to combat that is plenty of sleep at night. Then, too, a change of luncheon menu may be in order during this time of year. In winter, we eat heavier foods, hot dishes and such that are not needed in balmy spring weather. So stem your appetite. Have a salad and one hot dish or a vegetable plate—too much food is as bad for you as too little. After your midday meal, get at your make-up kit again, clean off all stale make-up with cleansing-cream or some of those handy cleansing-pads made for just that purpose. Put on a new face and you won't feel so drowsy.

So stop feeling sorry for yourself. The surest way to squelch that down-in-the-dumps feeling is to get out and do. If you follow our hints, you won't have time to feel blue—you'll be too busy taking care of yourself and your finery. ## RIDIN' SIX WHITE HORSES gang by remote control from this cave. Elaine Forest, his wife, has been bringing him food and helping him to hide out. And she's in danger—

"Danger?" Sophie's voice was dry.

"There's a diary here," Paul explained. "He's recorded the warning one of his gang members gave me by phone when they found out I was coming up here, and he's recorded our arrival at the mountain. He knew we'd spy on Elaine as soon as Tunia came to our cabin. He knew Tunia had been spying on him. Here he says, 'Elaine growing dangerous—wants me to give up my plans to reorganize gang.' Then there are four words underlined, 'Take care of Elaine!'"

"You mean he's going to—?"

"That scaper's gonna kill Miss Ghost Lady!" Tunia's voice was emphatic. "Well, he's not gonna do it. I been a-studyin' on this here cave. That ol' Deechner he never coulda built that there door and all if he's from the city." Her child's voice was disdainful. "This here be an old hideout cave from the moonshine days, I betcha. And them moonshiners always had a way to git out in case they was shet in—"

"Wait," said Sophie, "I remember how stuffy I said it was in here. Well, I noticed that the air was fresher while we were lying on the straw bed. Maybe . . ."

THEY found a trap-door built into the rock beneath the pile of straw that served as Deechner's bed. Even he probably hadn't been aware of the moonshiners' secret exit. Paul soon had the door opened and he and his companions looked down into the dark, musty depth below them.

"That be water smell," said Tunia. "I know where this here tunnel comes out, I betcha. Must come out t'other side of the cliff by the stream. Come on, I know my way now. I kin git you to the Ghost Lady's in no time!"

Once outside the cave, Paul wished aloud for help and a gun. He had no liking to meet Deechner alone without a weapon of some sort. But Tunia had the solution for that, too. She raised her face toward the sky, cupped her hands and gave an eery yodel that echoed through the hills.

"Harken to that?" she asked. "Hear it all through the hills, too! Mountain folks never uses that call 'ceptin' they need help bad. And when mountain folks hear that call, they come fast as though they was ridin' six white horses!"

More than the mountain folk heard Tunia's yodel. Deechner, in the midst of beating Elaine Forest, his wife, to death, heard it and ran for hiding. On the way down the mountain path, he stumbled and fell. At the very instant of his falling, a half-dozen Kentucky hillbillies threw themselves on him. They had heard his noisy progress down the path and had been waiting where they'd put a log across the trail. All the fight had gone out of him. They took him back toward Elaine's cabin.

A bit of water from a mountain spring had restored Elaine to consciousness and she was ready to tell her story.

"Well," she said, "one of the gang members was in the car that night of the accident so long ago. This gangster let something slip and I questioned Deechner. He finally confessed who he was. He was furious, though, at this other man and—and he killed him.

Then he burned the car in a fake wreck. He put all of his own identifications on the body and left the car. I had to keep his secret because he swore he'd kill my father and mother if I told. He hid out here and I helped him until I learned he was trying to reorganize the gang. Tonight I told him I was going to go to the police . . ."

So it all came out happily. Paul wrote his book on the Spider Gang and it became a best-seller. Sophie got so she liked the mountain better than Paul, and Tunia was rewarded so many beads and so much city finery that she confessed herself "pure teched with happy-glad!"

"Guess that goes to prove who has the brains in this world," Sophie confided in Tunia one night at Paul's cabin. "Would you believe it, Tunia, Paul wasn't to let me come to the mountains with him. I had to beg to come. He tried to get me to stay at home—"

"I what—?" Paul roared.

"You certainly did. You—"

"Tunia," Paul cried, "give out that yodel. Bring on some he-man help—ridin' six white horses!"

WHAT'S COOKING!

Beef and Liver Loaf

- ½ pound pork liver, ground
- 1 pound beef, ground
- ¼ cup minced onion
- 4 cups corn flakes
- 1 egg, slightly beaten
- ½ cup milk
- 1½ teaspoons salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper

Combine meats with onion, slightly crushed corn flakes, egg, milk and seasonings. Press lightly into greased loaf-pan. Then bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) one and one-half hours.

(Yield: Nine servings—4½-by-9¼-inch pan.)

Beef Biscuit Roll

- 1 lb. ground beef chuck
- ½ cup chopped onion
- ½ cup chopped green pepper
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon pepper
- Butter or beef fat

Brown the onion, green pepper and beef in butter or beef fat in a frying-pan. Add the seasonings. Make a regulation biscuit dough and spread dough with meat mixture and roll like jelly roll. If dough is too soft, chill in refrigerator first, then cut in one-one-half-inch slices. Place in greased pan, cut side up, brush tops with melted butter. Bake twenty to twenty-five minutes at 450 degrees F. Serve with brown gravy or cheese sauce.

(Yield: Six servings.)

That Fascinating Hayworth Creature

leaving Rita and the caterpillar. Before the caterpillar could crawl out, Rita did and was promptly suspended.

For the first time in her quiet, agreeable career she rebelled. She was, as she termed it, "distinctly a naughty girl" and intended to remain so until things were straightened out. No amount of talk about her lack of gratitude could force her to give in. So she stayed home. Her $1,250-a-week salary stopped. She had saved a little money, amazingly enough, out of the community-property financial merry-go-round divorcees run into in California, but she was risking plenty to dare the wrath of her employers at the time.

She had decided, however, that she'd never be happy unless she were treated not as a sort of senior baby star but as a woman who was capable of having something to say about what she would or wouldn't do. "I figured," she told me, "that if things got bad enough I could always go and find that tent Vic used to live in." She didn't have to find the tent. Instead she's moved into a swank apartment house close enough to Armstrong-Schroeder's famed eating spa that she never has to get her own breakfast if she doesn't want to. What's better than that is that she and her bosses understand each other much better.

While you are not interested in Rita's business problems, you were told about them anyway, because it's high time someone found out that a girl like Rita does not spend all of her time between pictures reading dime love-novels while she reclines on silk-pilrows and never answers the phone if she has to reach more than an arm's length.

RITA would appreciate it if the public generally learned that Victor Mature was not a profile bent always to the headline side and that he has never maintained a harem on Hollywood Boulevard. She would appreciate it if people understood that she has not become "difficult" because of Mature's advice. It's pretty hard for a man to advise a girl if she doesn't hear from him for four months at a time. One day recently she received twelve letters all at once. They carried the Navy postmark, so she couldn't tell where they were written except that the boat was rocking pretty badly and that in one all but the "Dearest" salutation and the "I'll love you forever" were censored.

I happened to be caught between the two fires when this romance started, so consider myself quite an expert. I ventured to remark to Vic when we dropped Rita off at her house after an evening at Mocambo that she was certainly a lovely creature, but what did he think of the blonde we'd seen at the bar. I laughed at the retort that he did not have the blonde's telephone number and didn't intend to acquire it, but I stopped laughing when I realized that the great wanderer of the Hollywood mirages had at last settled down.

I haven't laughed at the fact that Rita has been spending her time helping out at a day nursery because she's so fond of children. I don't want to further perturb her bosses, but, come that happy day when she and Vic are finally able to wed, Rita is going to want a year off to become a mother. And perhaps as a mother they might give her something to act in besides a low-cut evening gown. I mention all this because I know that Vic and Rita have discussed their coming marriage with the utmost seriousness and that they do not plan it as one of those Hollywood "let's try it a year" ideas.

It is difficult for a personal friend to write truthfully about one as honest as Rita, for she naturally likes to keep the things important to her to herself, and considers any personal revelations as vulgar Hollywood display. I may be forgiven, however, for a few personal observations. Rita has a temper with a high boiling-point, but when that is reached she launches an attack that is so underplayed that few realize the depth of her anger. She is essentially a gay person, but few people find it out, for she is too modest an individual to kick up her heels in front of strangers.

There is a languorous quality to this girl that is not the real thing. On the screen, directors love to have her pose mainly because a few beautiful close-ups will do a lot to make a customer forget that the picture is not too deep. In person she is not the willowy type. She is small-boned but has wrists of iron, and she can rehearse dance steps a whole day and still have energy to spill over for a handstand in slacks on the living-room floor.

For a girl who has worn at least a storeful of expensive clothes, she is completely unaware of the alleged value of always being chic. She looks freshly scrubbed at all times and uses a minimum of make-up, but she dotes on wearing a pair of black corduroy slacks topped with a leopard-skin jacket. She doesn't like people to send her flowers unless the people are those she loves. Since Mature left for combat duty she hasn't had a bouquet of flowers in her dressing-room. Deep as this sentiment is, however, she refused to kiss him good-by for the benefit of cameramen when he entrained, but did this unhappy chore behind a drawn curtain in the vestibule of a pullman car.

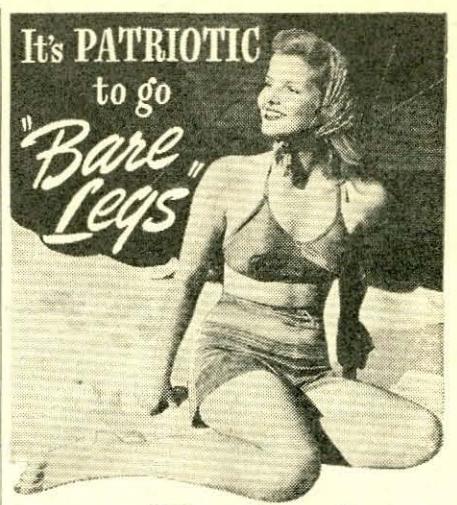

I've talked often with Rita about what she wants out of life. She has no fear of losing out on her career: "Money used to mean something to me because it meant something to those close to me. It doesn't now, and it's wonderful to know that you can get along with almost nothing and be happy. People have often asked me what I think of the $25,000 ceiling and remarked that it's terrible that taxes are so high. I don't think so. I have loved ones in the service, and if the mere business of paying heavy taxes is going to bring them back home sooner, then I say lay on the tax.

"But when it's over I think that people should go back to normal ways of doing things and that the Government should too. I have some friends who have struggled a long time to get somewhere and I don't think they should be denied an opportunity to go as far as they can. It seems to me that's the basis of democracy."

This is simple talk from a girl who is supposed to be ninety-nine and forty-four hundredths percent glamour, but it does seem to make sense.

I believe that almost everything Rita does, says, and is makes sense, and that there should be more like her to make a town called Hollywood a better place.

USERS Praise IT

Here are excerpts from a few of many letters of praise received from Charm-Kurl users:

"I am so proud of the Charm-Kurl Permanent I gave my 2 little girls. It's soft, natural." Mrs. W. P. Van Deusen, Minn.

Gives Natural Wave
"I've been a user of Charm-Kurl for some time and I like it very much. It gives me a nice, natural wave."
Mrs. B. Maina, Ill.

Lasted 9 Months
"I have used Charm-Kurl before and it is really wonderful. My last Charm-Kurl permanent lasted nine months and my hair is still very curly. I wouldn't change a Charm-Kurl permanent for a $10 permanent."
Miss Ruth Henry, Ohio.

Makes Hair Look Natural Curly
"I would ten times rather have a Charm-Kurl permanent because it makes your hair look like natural curly, and soft." Carolyn Fleet, Penn.

Permanent Far Above Expectations
"The permanent which I gave my little girl was far above expectations and her hair which is soft and fine was not harmed in the least but looked like a natural wave."
Mrs. W. E. Williams, Maryland.

Delighted with Results
"I am more than delighted with the results of my Charm-Kurl. It's soft and fluffy, and it was the most 'painless' permanent I ever had."
Mrs. W. J. Stites, Utah.

Prettiest Permanent I Ever Had
"I was delighted with my Charm-Kurl permanent. It left my hair soft and lovely and gave me the prettiest permanent I ever had regardless of cost."
Miss Betty Moulthrop, Wash.

Each Kit Contains 40 Curlers Shampoo and Wave Set also included

There is nothing else to buy. Shampoo and the wave set are included in each Charm-Kurl Kit. With Charm-Kurl it is easy to give yourself a thrilling, machineless permanent wave in the privacy of your own home that should last as long as any professional permanent wave. You do not have to have any experience in waving hair. Just follow the simple instructions.

MAKE THIS NO-RISK TEST

Prove to yourself as thousands of others have done, without risking one penny, that you, too, can give yourself a thrilling permanent at home the Charm-Kurl way. Just follow the simple, easy directions and after your permanent wave is in, let your mirror and your friends be the judge. If you do not honestly feel that your CHARM-KURL Permanent is the equal of any permanent you may have paid up to $5.00 for, you get your money back.

WAVES DYED HAIR AS BEAUTIFULLY AS NATURAL HAIR

Dyed or bleached hair is a problem when it comes time for a permanent. But many women have found that Charm-Kurl waves their dyed hair as beautifully as it does natural hair. In fact, some of them tell us that Charm-Kurl is the only permanent wave that will "take" on their hair. If your dyed hair is a secret, Charm-Kurl will keep it so.
